Ever since 1872, the white portion of the American people have steadily sought to impress the colored people that henceforth we must look to ourselves for help and succor. It is true that we are not without sincere and substantial friends among the white people, bnt even they expect us to develop a strong and robust self-reliance. This will require the exercise of a heroic and self-sacrificing spirit on the part of those to whom we look for guidance and counsel. Our leaders must not be silent, for their silence will be an assurance to our oppressors that we are content with our lot. The A. M. E. Church influences, directly or indirectly, at least one-fourth of the entire colored popnlation of the country. Quite two millions are looking to us for instruction and direction. Now, what are we doing to meet their demands and supply their needs? Are we proving true to our trust? Are we grappling with those economic and civil matters which lie at the foundation of the industrial and political well-being of the people? Candor compels the thoughtful observer to answer, no. Many of those among us who are in a position to lead are sogaged in promoting selfish ends, and in a struggle for the chief places. We take the money of the masses, and when they ask us for bread we give them a stone. Look at the shameful spectacle that we are presenting to the world by our ceaseless clamor that this or that one shall be made bishop! What do the tolling, struggling masses care whether W. B. Derrick is a greater man than W. J. Gaines; whether James H. A. Johnson is a more logical writer than T. G. Steward; whether M. B. Salter has superior qualifications to B. W. Arnett; whether the control of the Church shall continue in the hands of those who believe in the simplicity of Methodism, or pass into the hands of those who are the supporters of the robe and the dogma of Apostolic Succession! There are other and weightier matters in which the people are more deeply concerned. Our leaders, if we would have any Church in the near future to lead, must address themselves to the active consideration of the material condition of the people and do what they can to devise means for their relief. We need to preach, not less of the gospel of heaven, but more of the gospel of earth —a gospel that will teach the people how to live as well as how to die; a gospel that will be to the people in all of their affairs of life an inspiring and stimulating influence. The people need more than long-robed bishops and solemn-toned priests. They need the firm grasp of a helping hand, the warmth of true sympathy, and that devotion to their interests which makes martyrs possible, and fills the annals of time with the record of heroic deeds and heroic lives dedicated to the good of mankind, and for the unfolding of a kinship that shall emerge from the chrysalis of mere theory into substantial and universal practice. Our leaders must raise their voices and demand that the rod of the oppressor shall be broken and the hand of injustice stayed. If they continue silent, still let us not despair. Deliverance will come. Another Allen will arise who will manfully and courageously protest against the wrongs which are now heaped npon us. We are deserving of better treatment and more gracious consideration than what we receive. We have been as true to American institutions and American interests as the needle to the pole; and yet the offcouring of Enrope—the nihilist with his dynamite, the anarchist with his red flag, the communist with his menacing speech and action—who lend upon our shores are preferred above us, and to them every avenue of life is open. This is neither just nor right and against it let us unceasingly protest. The hour calls for men of action and of might. Let our leaders raise the standard and "Agitate! Agitate! Agitate!

THE FINANCIAL SYSTEM OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

IS IT ADEQUATE TO MEET THE PURPOSES FOR WHICH IT IS DESIGNED?

BY REV. JOHN W. GAZAWAY.

It is or is not. If it is adequate to meet all of the interests for which it is designed, then the wisdom of the General Conference of 1872 which adopted the system (see "Budget" for 1885–'86, page 175) is made apparent. If not thus adequate, was it wise to attach the important interests of the Church to a plan that is unable to do for them what is necessary to be done, in order for their healthy sustenance and vigorous development?

What are the interests which the law says shall be supported or aided by this system? They are as follows:

1. The support of efficient and inefficient Bishops

2 For the (support or) purposes of general officers.

3. To aid in the publication department

4. To aid our needy colleges (and they are all needy)

5. To aid the cause of Missions.

6. For the relief of widows and orphans of deceased ministers and Bishops.

7. To aid the Church Extension Society.

These seven great interests of the Church are to receive aid from the fund as specified in Sec. 18 of Dollar Money chapter (see Discipline).

Who is to pay this Dollar Money? The members of the Church, every one of whom has solemnly vowed to obey the Discipline of the A. M. E. Church, and this payment is required by said Discipline (see page 328). What is the nnmber of our membership? We go back to the report of 1880, nearly eight years ago, and, according to the "Budget," 1885–'86, page 186, we have a grand total of local preachers, members and probationers of 400,804. We take this report as a basis (admitting the fact that we have increased greatly within the last seven years). Now, applying the law to this basis and we have in one year $400,804; in four years, $1,603,216, over double the amonnt collected in fourteen years, according to Rev. C. O. H. Thomas, who says that from all sonrces of our Church revenues there has been collected in the last four years, $625,000 (see Southern Recorder, Nov. 15, 1887). In the same issne there is the denial of the adequateness of the Dollar Money system to meet the demands for which it is designed One million six hnndred and three thousand two hundred and sixteen dollars, with the added amonnt paid by the increased membership of the Church during the last seven years, and to this add the contributions to this fund by those who are members of our congregations, and all thus collected will aggregate more per annum to each general interest of our work than has ever been paid. Take the nnmber of members reported at the General Conference of 1880 as a basis and let the design of the Dollar law be carried out, i. e., the payment of $1 00 by each member and to each of the seven purposes specified in the law. There can be paid $5,725 75; the division need not always be equal. Let the exigency of the case govern the annual division of this money. All of our Bishops are now efficient, hence there is no demand now for inefficient Bishops. And yet, $2 000 annually could be pnt on interest for this fund, and it could work thus, increasing itself, and receive an annual addition, and possibly, by the time the fund is needed, there would be a sufficient amoonnt to meet the demand, and with the annual addition it could be very easily sustained.

Can the dollar from or for each member of our Church be collected; and if so, how? The above questions will be attempted to be answered in my next.

A TRIP TO BEAUFORT, S. C.

BY REV. W. H. HEARD.

MR EDITOR:—Beanfort is the county site of Beaufort county. This county has thirty thousand inhabitants, and three thousand only are white. On our arrival in Beaufort we were met at the depot by Rev W. P. Graham, the pastor of Lady's Island Mission, whom we went to deliver a Centennial address for. We were driven to the residence of Congressman Smalls, who lives here in an old fashioned palatial residence—one room will make two of the modern pantries. The house is tastily and costly furnished While is an old residence of the South Carolina aristocrats, yet the General has it in modern style. He is as hospitable as can be. Miss Sarah, his single daughter, keeps house for him. Miss Jackson, from Washington, is visiting the family, and she was very much carried away with South Carolina. General Smalls has a fine library—perhaps two thousand volumes. He presented the writer with some valuable books; among them was the brief of his contest against Colonel Elliott. He has a strong case and was elected by seventeen hnndred.

At night Gen. Smalls, Miss Sarah, Miss Jackson, Mrs. Heard and myself found our way to church, where the intellect of Beanfort awaited to hear what I should say for Richard Allen. Revs. S. Washington, presiding elder; P. J. Chavis, pastor of Grace Chapel; A. M. Gicke, pastor of the M. E. Church, and Rev. W. P. Graham, pastor of Lady's Island Mission, occupied seats on the platform. A select choir, and Miss Sarah Smalls at the organ, gave us sweet music, after which Rev. S. Washington led in prayer and then introdnced the speaker. After I had for one hour talked of Allen and his sons, I sat down and received the commendations of all present. Rev. Gicke said, "You have presented a true case and eloquently, too." We received a collection for the mission and dismissed and returned to our quarters After a night's rest and breakfast, we visited the school under the principalship of Rev. S. P. Hood. There we met the teachers and about 500 pnpils. The school is in good condition. We tried to enconrage the children and then returned to the parsonage for dinner.

Beanfort is the home of the colored man of the South. Young men of money and push could come to this county and do well and enjoy all their rights. Moral, energatic young men are invited into this county to assist in making a name for the race. We are to be proud of our ministers there. Money could be spent to a good purpose by our conference in maintaining Beanfort as a station. We reached home delighted with our trip.

A VOICE FROM OHIO.

A PAPER READ BEFORE THE CIVIL RIGHTS LEAGUE OF CINCINNATI, AT ALLEN TEMPLE, THURSDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 18, 1887.

BY MRS. SARA G. JONES.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—I hope my appearance here to night will not be construed into the notion that I am a politician, or that I wish to rob any gentleman of the honor which might attach to him should he occnpy my place. I am no politician—no Equal Rights woman either, according to the popular acceptance of the term.

I believe that man's sphere and woman's widely differ, and yet, so closely united are their interests, so completely one are their aims that they merge into each other and form so intricate a question that both are essential in solving the great problem of life which the Creator has laid ont before us. Woman, man's crown of joy and prompter to all that is good and noble, has numerous rights which all true men are bound to respect, and while she exercises them to the fullest extent, he adores her as the queen of his heart and home. The successive positions of sweetheart, wife and mother accord to her so many rights which are so far superior to any which man exercises, that there can be no comparison made between them—hers, heaven-born; his, of earth.

Woman does not need to leave her home to cast a ballot; she votes every time there is an election. Do you "lords of creation" acknowledge it? She plans what you execute. You occupy the throne and she shapes you as her king, while she is the power behind the throne Woman is the architect, man is the builder; and though her influence seems limited to individuals, it acts like the pebble thrown into the stream; as first bnt a little ripple is seen, bnt it grows larger and larger until it reaches mid-ocean and is swallowed up in the surging billows; her influence does not stop until it reaches ont into all humanity.

The historian, in speaking of slave and free States, classed Ohio with those which were "saved for freedom." We have wondered how he could write it thus, when within those same States there were then, and are now, black men free only in name. Deprivation, or abridgement of privileges, is not freedom. I am here to-night, not to tire you with a long reading, but to join my voice with these noble young men who advocate the right; who have taken up your cause and mine, and who implore you to help them, and by so doing, yourselves. If you do not want all of your rights and are not willing to demand them in a proper way then you do not deserve them. You must be men of principle, with character to sustain you in any controversy. A noble writer has truly said that "God gives the mind, but man makes the character." The mind is the garden, the character is the fruit; the mind is the white page, the character is the writing we put on it; the mind is the metallic plate, the character is our engraving thereon; the mind is shop, the conning room; the character is our profits on the trade; and as quick sales and small percentage eventually grow into large profits, so little acts and efforts make great characters. A dollar is composed of a thousand mills; so is a character of a thousand thoughts and acts.

Now, then, if we would be respected, if would have all of our rights, we must demand them; there must be no cringing; a bold stand must be taken backed by a sincere feeling that we have a perfect right to that for which we ask I am sure that if every colored man felt toward every white man as I do towards every white woman, there would be no sense of humility while in their presence; many of them are my inferiors in every way, and I have never seen one whom I acknowledge better than myself. Wealth, education and local conditions may give to persons some advantages in certain particulars, bnt I neither feel nor acknowledge any natural superiority. There is only one thing which lowers a colored man in my estimation sooner than anything else, it is to see him when in the presence of white people acknowledging by his actions, speech and courting of patronage that he is an inferior being.

Many lights is the world of jnstice have gone ont. Garrison, Phillips, Hale, Chase, Sumner, Seward, Wilson, John Brown and others; they are sleeping in their tombs and we are still endeavoring to scale the heights They helped us get a foothold at the base of the mountain; we are still on the slope, the summit is yet to be gained. The night has been dark, the moon's rays have been hidden by the clouds of prejndice; bnt a new moon appears and when it is full may it shed its silver beams on a people free indeed. And we shall be, if we set ourselves to building each other np. Pure thoughts, prompt speech, united effort must save us. We must not be narrow minded, but elevate ourselves by cnltivating broad principles of truth and jnstice. If we do right we need fear no man, for a clear conscience gives to man and woman a clear countenance. Let us be a nnit in aim, speech and action. Let no feel that we shonld snffer our tongnes to be cnt ont before we should use them to defame one of our own who seeks to build np humanity. Let us hid our fingers witber before we seize the pen to disseminate a lie. Let us pray God that our right hands may forget their cnnning before we attempt to tear down what the staunch friends of the race have built up. Let us be true to each other without envy and never cease to agitate this question of civil rights until we are on an equal footing with all men. We have fought the battle of Marathon, and Milladeo, with his little host, has pnt to fight the opposing forces, bnt we are hearing the Straits of Salamis, where the decisive battle is to be fought, and we hope for a magnificent victory. Are you brave soldiers in this warfare for your jnst rights, dne yon as American citizens, or are you in this time of need cowards? Will you give your vote over to the enemy? Will you stand back and say, we have no time nor inclination to agitate this question? Will you cry, "Peace, peace," when there is no peace? Will you stand with dnnb and dnmb and see your neighbor snffer every indignity? Will you take a position in the rear of your pale-faced brother? Will you tamely admit your inferiority by refusing to resent insnlts? If you feel your blood tingle as it comes through your veins as the tmth of our condition presents itself to you; if you feel that you will demand rights to which you are justly entitled; if you feel that you will not sneak away from the light of civilization and hide in the darkness of past shadows; if you feel that there is true courage in asserting your manhood; if you feel that life is not worth the living with your dearest rights abridged; if you feel that you have grown weary of having self-asserted superiority thrust in your way at each corner you turn in your daily walks, come to the rescue, join the league, help shonlder the burden, give up a portion of your bright silver dollars and fight this battle to the bitter end and until every enemy in the shape of this cruel, foolish, inconsistent prejndice lies mortally wounded. Sacrifice some time, some money, some comfort, if need be, for the sake of coming generations. And only then send your loud hnrzas of victory when the last foe is slain and all humanity in one common brotherhood enjoys equal rights and privileges everywhere.

OUR SUPERB REPRODUCTIONS OF

"CHRIST BEFORE PILATE,"

AND

"CHRIST ON CALVARY."

The First and Only Reproduction of the Latter in the Country.

These magnificent works of art are neither old-time chromos nor ordinary engravings. The first is an exquisite photo-etching, in which the lights and shades are faithfully portrayed, while at the same time the beautiful life-like effects produced by the great painting are preserved. Our artist, who has charge of the work, unhesitatingly claims that it is far enperior to any other representation of this great painting. The subdued tone and exquisite finish of this photo-etching present a striking contrast to the gandy colored chromo representations on the market, or to the indistinct and feeble effects of the line or imitation steel-plate productions. "Christ on Calvary," the companion piece, is executed for us by the mezzo-gravure process, which far surpasses any other for softness of tone, vigor of action, and general superiority of execution. The two pictures together appeal in the highest degree to the religious sentiment, as well as to the artistic taste, refinement, and culture of every nationality and every creed.

CENTENNIAL ESSAY.

BY FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD EVA BRANDY.

We see by an examination of the history of the human family that ever since the world began, the strong would oppress the weak and, if possible, keep them in subjection, but there was men in the African race one hundred years ago who would not stand oppression. In the city of Philadelphia was one Richard Allen, whose action should ever be celebrated and commended by the African race as well as by the denomination.

It has been in question as to whether this denomination has been materially benefited by throwing off the yoke of oppression when she did. I think I can safely affirm that it has, for if there ever was a struggle that brought blessings to a people, or added manhood to a race, it was when this denomination declared the resolution which was drawn up November, 1787, that they would no longer be dragged from their knees when they were kneeling in secret devotion before the altar of a just God, and cause them to rise and give vent to their feelings, they we e denounced. On account of such treatment, that patriotic spirit in Richard Allen said: "We must do for ourselves."

There and then this denomination took its rise and has been working for the Master ever since, and by her faithful work she has sent the gospel to many lands. Her influence is felt as it is felt all over this broad land. She has in the field seven Bishops and a membership of 400,000. She has done more educational work than any other denomination of colored persons in this country. All of this was brought about by that noble and patriotic leader, the founder of the A. M. E. Church—Richard Allen.

Just within one hundred years all of this has been accomplished, and with such men at her head as D. A. Payne, A. W. Wayman and J. P. Campbell, she will always be a star in the family of churches.

Nations have been at war, kingdoms have been brought low, empires have changed, but the work done by Allen one hundred years ago will ever be in the minds of the African race. It was the first step to liberty; it was the first step to emancipation; it was the first step to the proclamation; it was the first step to education; it was the first in everything to lift the standard of humanity. Then, Church, go on! Your cause is grand and glorious! Always trust in the God who brought you thus far.

Obituary.

Mrs Harriett Bice, late mother-in-law of Rev. J. G. Johnson, departed this life Sept. 24 h, 1887. She was a native of Rome, N. Y., and became a member of the A. M. E Church in 1852 and has been a consistent Christian and a faithful member of her Church from the time of her entrance till she was called from the Church militant to the Church triumphant. Confined to her bed over two weeks with erysipelas, she was conscious most of the time and just before death remarked that she was passing away like a mid-summer day. She was often heard to say, "Blessed Jesus." She was a sufferer for years of age and leaves three children and many grandchildren to lament her loss.

M. S. LYNCH.

Rev. F. J. Peterson, Des Moines, Iowa, writes: Having just ceased from several weeks of nearly incessant toil, I desire to pen you a few thoughts with reference to our work in the Capital City of the State of Iowa. On arriving here the congregation requested me to grant them the privilege of remodeling the interior of our church and to exchange the old organ for one of a more modern pattern and better adapted for churches. Their request was granted on condition that they should wait until after our grand rally, which resulted in raising nearly two hundred dollars, after which the church was placed in the hands of competent workmen, who, after three weeks' labor, succeeded in transforming the interior to an extent that cannot be surpassed by any church in the city. At the re-opening every available spot was occupied and the appreciation of those present of the efforts of the trustees in having their church so beautifully and appropriately embellished, was evinced by a large collection during the day. All present were favorably surprised at the change which the church had undergone, which had a tendency to give impetus and inspiration to non-members and members alike, and all left apparently with the thought of having the interest of the church more at heart and more willing to work for the cause of Christ.

At Titipu, Japan, it was easier to cut a man's head off than to cure him of love. In some parts of America it appears to be more satisfactory to let a relative or friend die of Consumption or Heart Disease than to have him or her cured by a new remedy that some of the old school physicians view with envy and consequent disrespect. Drs. Starkey and Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., had many such experiences when they began to introduce their Compound Oxygen Treatment. But the times are greatly changed and their Home Treatment is now cherished in over thirty-seven thousand families in this land. Send for a pamphlet explaining its properties. It is mailed free.

OFFICE OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO ALL WHO HAVE BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS WITH THIS DEPARTMENT.

1st. We do not take postage stamps. If you cannot obtain Post Office Money Order, which is the safest method to send money, you can send by registered letter. These are issued by every post office in the United States. If your postmaster insists on selling you stamps you insist the more on having him register your letter.

2nd. Send the exact amount of money required to pay for the goods you order. When this is not done our rule is to send that amount of supplies which the money sent will pay for.

3rd. When you order from us, always write plainly at the bottom of your letter the place where you want your supplies sent. Very often persons write us an order from one place on a circuit desiring it sent to some other place, and do not mention this very important fact. For all money sent to us for Sunday school literature we send a postal card receipt, numbered. If your order is delayed, or if there is any irregularity concerning it, write to us about it, but be sure to give the number of your receipt card and the name of the person who sent the order or signed his name to it. When a pastor writes to us that his superintendent sent us money, etc., we do not know who is his superintendent, and unless he writes us his name. Always send the names of persons and not names of churches, schools, circuits, stations, etc.

5th. Sign your name to your communication. We cannot tell who sent a letter to us when there is no name signed to it.

6th. Write your name in large, plain letters. Avoid flourishing. It is useless and often renders obscure what would otherwise be legible writing.

7th. Never send a postal note, money order or express package without any instruction accompanying it, that we may know what to do with money sent thus.

8th. We have lost a great deal of money by sending supplies C. O. D. because the parties whom we thus favored failed to take them from the express office. In consequence of this neglect and absolute loss which we have borne because of it, we have decided to positively refuse to grant any more C. O. D. favors to anyone. Please do not request them.

9th. Our business is conducted on a strictly cash basis. If you are not familiar with our prices write to us when you wish to buy and we will freely quote them or send you a catalogue, price list, blank and return envelope.

10th. Always collect your money for supplies and have it appropriated for them at least two weeks before the beginning of each quarter; this will prevent much delay. Very often orders do not arrive until one-half or two-thirds of the quarter is past; in which case we have to print an extra amount of literature for the benefit of two or three persons or else lay ourselves liable to a "raking over" by them.

11th. When the Teachers' and Scholars' Quarterly, the Juvenile and Gem Lesson Papers are ordered, they are rolled in one package together. The catechisms, song books, primary lessons, reward cards and other such matter are never in one wrapper. When you order both inquire for two packages at the post office.

12th. If your city has the free delivery system have your mail directed to the street and number. Unless you do this it will be returned to us while you are abusing us for neglect.

13th. Every pastor is hereby earnestly requested to have some one, who is permanently located in his work, elected Sunday school supply clerk, whose duty it shall be to send for all orders for his Sunday school supplies.

We hope this will be done at once by each pastor and that he will send us the name of the one elected to this office. This method of communicating with us through a person who has permanent location in a place will lessen difficulty and greatly facilitate intercourse between us and our patrons. It is hoped that this request will receive immediate attention. We have purchased new books in which to record the names of Sunday school supply clerks and we anxiously await their names. A postal card will serve for this purpose. Hoping that the above instructions will be received with the kindly spirit with which they are given, and praying the blessing of Almighty God upon all those who are, with us, intrusted with the child ren's welfare. Fraternally,

C. S. SMITH.

GENERAL CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The secretaries of the Conferences that have elected ministerial and lay delegates to the General conference to convene at Indianapolis, Ind., May 2, 1888, are hereby urgently requested to forward, at once, names of said delegates, and name of conference. The conferences that have not yet elected said delegates, secretaries are requested to forward names of delegates and name of conference at their earliest opportunity. We are anxious to push the work of preparation as fast as possible. Please write names plainly that there be no mistakes.

Delegates bringing their wives, and all visiting brethren not directly connected with the Conference, must come prepared to pay for board and lodging. We shall provide for members of the General Conference only.

Direct all communications to John W. Gazaway, 214 West Vermont St., Indianapolis, Ind.

NOTICE.

All communications intended for the Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church that are addressed to Rev. C. S. Smith, Nashville, Tennessee, will be received. It is not necessary to give the name of the street nor the number. Rev. C. S. Smith, Nashville, Tenn., is sufficient. Telegrams addressed the same way will reach us. We are fully settled in our new headquarters and prepared for business.

C. S. SMITH, Secretary.

BOOKS.

HINTS TO SELF-EDUCATED MINISTERS.

Reasons why all preachers should read Dr James Porter's Hints. Because it furnishes the most natural method of preparing to preach effectively. 2nd. Because it shows how to preach with ease and grace, and yet with power and success. 3rd. Because it exposes numerous errors in all branches of ministerial service, and how to correct them. Its reviewers advise ministers to read the work carefully, because "they will find in it much that they never thought of"—because "the very hints they must need to receive are not furnished by other homiletical works—because "it is replete with shrewd, hard, good sense"—because "it is a book for all ministers, however educated"—because it is assured by many to be the most helpful book they ever read. —"Worth its weight in gold."

CHRISTIAN PRESENTS FOR PREACHERS AND OTHER PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

Dr. Porter's Hints to them is one of the most useful.—"Worth its weight in gold," says the Christian Guardian. $1.25

For teaching everyone how to do good, "The Winning Worker; or, the Possibilities, Duty and Methods of Doing Good to Men," by the same author. Order of J. C. Embry, 631 Pine Street, Philadelphia. "Why not make presents that will do good?"

"WORTH MORE THAN ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD," to young ministers and local preachers. "Many a preacher would have been saved from failure by the early study of such a book."—Christian Guardian.

IS THE BIBLE TRUE, AND FROM GOD?

Read Dr. Porter's late book called "Christianity Demonstrated by Experience." It will settle the question forever and set your minds on fire. Buy a copy and keep it to lend to the poor, needy, and especially to unbelievers. On sale by Rev. J. C. Embry, Price, $1.50. A new supply just received.

The History of the Negro Race in America:

FROM 1619 to 1861.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE'S DON'T.

Don't forget that you are your husband's greatest helper or his greatest hindrance. A scratch or a smile from you will do him more harm or good than a sword cut or harrah from another.

Don't demand too much of your husband's thought and time. He cannot give you all he would without giving less than he ought to others.

Don't encourage the spirit of gossip. Tittle-tattle from you will do more harm than your husband's preaching can do good.

Don't hold yourself aloof from the people. Your husband's power in the pulpit may be greatly increased by your kindly bearing out of it.

Don't forget the poor. You may not have much to give, but a little will brighten their lot, and the brightness will be flung back upon your own

Don't let the church absorb the time and energy that should be given at home. Yet do not be so wrapped up in the latter as to have no thought for the former.

Don't fail to get, as regularly as possible, what is needed for the house. Better a little spent each quarter than a big bill at the end of the three years.

Don't be one of those who find a house clean and well fitted and leave it dirty and dismantled. Such conduct has discouraged many a struggling circuit, and dishonored many a husband's reputation.

Don't forget that the home life of the minister will be reflected in that of the people. The more of cleanliness and refinement you bring into the parsonage, the more there will be in the other; and whether there is to be much or little neither, depends in no small degree on you.—London Methodist Recorder.

An abandoned set of natural gas mains in East Liverpool, Ohio, is causing considerable worry to residents of that city. The pipes are leaky, in many places broken in two, and all gas is flowing through them the danger of an explosion has become alarmingly apparent. And the situation is rendered all the more dangerous by the fact that the source of the gas supply is a mystery.

"Clara has returned my engagement ring," sighed Charley, "and all is over between us." "What kind of ring is it?" asked experienced George—"diamond?" "No; a cheap affair; only cost a couple of dollars." "Well, don't you give up the ship, old man; she'll be all right in a day or two. It is only when a girl lets go of a diamond ring that she really means business."—Harper's Bazar.

A statute has been passed by the Legislature of North Carolina making it a misdemeanor for any person to dig ginseng, a medical plant, between the first of April and the first of September, and also fining each person so offending $10 for each day such offense is committed.

An organ in a San Francisco church is said by the Alta to have been benefited, rather than injured, as would naturally be expected, by the accidental discharge of a bullet into it. The instrument has been out of order, but since receiving the bullet, has given out almost as good music as when it was new.

A valuable watch stolen from a Troy, (Alabama) man in 1876, was recently returned to him. It transpired that after carrying it for a while, the thief lost it in a woods, where it lay until found, six years later. The finder carried it since until a few days ago, when he learned of the proper owner, and restored the timepiece to him.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, New York.

CATARRH CURED.

A clergyman, after years of suffering from that loathsome disease Catarrh, and vainly trying every known remedy, at last found a prescription which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self addressed stamped envelope to Prof. J. A. Lawrence, 212 East 9th St., New York, will receive the recipe free of charge

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

I heard the bells on Christmas day
Their old, familiar carols play;
And wild and sweet,
The words repeat,
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

And thought how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along
The unbroken song
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

Then pealed the bells more loud and deep:
God is not dead, nor doth he sleep!
The wrong shall fail,
The right prevail,
With peace on earth, good will to men!

—Longfellow.

WE GREET THEE, WINTER.

We greet thee, Winter! We are glad
To see the snowy mantle spread
O'er earth, to take undidlilit;
We're glad to hear the merry sounds
That tell us happiness abounds
Among sleigh-riders still.

We love thee, Winter! Thou dost bring
Upon thy cold and frost wing
Month, month con hearts to glad;
And though thou'rt bleak, we'll not repine,
For springs of joyousness are thine
That Summer never had.

The Merry Christmas' noisy glee,
And New Years when each heart is free
From aught of pain or care,
And the long evening a cheerful mirth
Beside the wintry fireside hearth,
Loudly thy worth declare.

Then, hail thee, Winter! We will greet
Thy pleasures with a welcome meet,
And taste them while they stay;
And when thou'rt gone, and joyous Spring
Comes with her robes of blossoming,
We'll bid thee speed away.

THE A M E CHURCH AS SEEN FROM WITHOUT.

DELIVERED AT THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION IN BETHEL CHURCH, PHILADELPHIA, ON FRIDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 25TH., 1887, BY JOHN DURHAM, OF THE "EVENING BULLETIN."

Is is it not a rare experience to hear a wretched newspaper preaching at the preachers? Well, that, I take it, is my duty here to-night. We sit in our pews Sunday after Sunday, and the preachers rave at us while we have no opportunity to talk back. They make our follies look so big that we often wonder how we manage to support the great burden of sin we bear. We would like very often to say: "Well, Mr. Preacher, do you in your work in life any better than I do mine?" Mr. Pastor, do you know any more about human nature than I do about house-keeping, or washing and ironing, or shoe-making, or doctoring? In your relations to the community in which you live are you any more conscientious and faithful than I? In any of these great moral questions which you discuss week in and week out, can you conscientiously cast the first stone?" We would like to talk back and right out in meeting, but they don't give us a chance As soon as they have done their talk, they pronounce the benediction and send us home. Well, they have given us a rest to-night, and it is for you to to determine, my fellow pew-fillers, whether I succeed in preaching everyday gospel to the preachers or not In discussing the work of the African Methodist Episcopal Church from the secular point of view, I shall attempt to follow the stereotyped plan of the preachers themselves, holding their failings up for examination and giving the great good which they are doing few lines in closing paragraph just before we take up the collection.

You will bear from our friend, Mr. Stewart, a description of the work done by the Church during its first century of existence Truly may the men who have effected this splendid organization regard it as a fitting monument to their ability and earnestness, a monument the more enduring because it will stand enshrined in the hearts of men as long as appreciation of worth shall impress itself upon the human mind. Is it not a most remarkable tribute to the character and natural executive ability of the African Methodist leaders that, without any previous training or experience, they should be able to prosecute their great work with such stupendous success? Is it not something of which we may be truly proud that a race from whose intellect the cloud of slavery has not yet cleared away, from whose sons the scars of servitude are not yet wholly effaced, should be able to establish churches in all parts of the country, to found a weekly paper of some merit, a magazine which has taken high rank among the church periodicals of the country, and to found a complete and effective organization extending from the senior Bishop in the General Conference to the humblest circuit rider among the pines of Delaware? It only too frequently happens that we are willing to accept beneficent results without due appreciation of the patient toil, the desperate anxiety and the self-sacrificing devotion of which we are now the beneficiaries I often look upon the young clergyman who are now enjoying the refinements of their professional life, and wonder how often they think of these things. I compare their lot with the early life of an Allen, a Payne, or a Campbell, and I can explain the veneration with which they regard the promoters of this marvelous church enterprise, some of whom have gone to their rest, while others are still with us enjoying the fruits of their labors.

To my mind the most promising feature of your church work to-day is the encouragement which you are everywhere extending to your young men. I consider it very remarkable, and indicating a high degree of liberal spirit, that the venerable Bishops of this connection have for years been behind their young men urging them on to that experience and learning which will fit them for the responsibilities of leadership. We know what a time the youngsters have in other departments of life They tell us that we must crawl before we walk, and they would have us playing "so big!" at 5. There are dozens of young men in this city who are idle or working in unsatisfactory places for the want of proper encouragement at the hands of older men. Contrast this spirit with that of the African Methodist Church. The older men say to a younger man, "Come up!" and when he has reached their level they push him ahead and say, "Go on." When we consider the noble spirit of generous encouragement, we can understand the development of the younger preachers, and their veneration for the heads of the Church who bore the brunt of the battle in the day, and whose evening shadows are brightened and hallowed by the devotion of these their professional children.

THE EDUCATIONAL INFLUENCE.

The work of these young clergymen at once suggests to my mind Wilberforce University. It must be remembered that the young generation of Methodist preachers are self-made, in the strict sense that their theological training has not been secured in schools. They have been taken from the school teacher's desk, from the work-shop, the plough, and are compelled to prosecute their theological studies at the same time that they have been collecting their Dollar Money. There are brilliant exceptions to this rule, and there are brilliant, self-made theologians who are fitting themselves to be Bishops. The need for a solid educational basis, however, is particularly to be noted in this connection. And it was with a view of meeting this need that Wilberforce was founded. It has suffered for the want of material support, and it is eminently the duty of the Church to give the managers of the institution every convenience for extending its work. The curriculum should be extended. The standard of requirements should be raised everywhere, and every effort should be made to have Wilberforce take its place among the leading educational institutions of the country.

Just here I want to say a word about the faculty of Wilberforce. It is composed of colored teachers. In that fact lies the germ of Wilberforce's future greatness. I am opposed to the colored institutions managed by the white churches, first, because they are colored, and, secondly, because they refuse to permit the appointment of colored men who have at great sacrifice trained themselves for educational work.

Lincoln University, with its hundreds of colored graduates in all parts of the country, has never turned out a man whom the white Presbyterians deem fit to teach in that institution under the title of professor; and when one is permitted to act as instructor he is denied those social courtesies which are common among professors, and which would exemplify the Christian spirit on which the institution was founded. Howard University has been more liberal; but its liberality is to be traced to political influences and not to the Congregational church. There is no disposition on the part of either of these institutions to secure trained colored men for the professorial chair. They are rapidly developing into asylums for broken down preachers who have failed in the pulpit. I know that I am using strong language; but I tell you, my friends, there is no educational influence that is more potent than the personality of a thorough teacher. Place in one classroom one of your clerical professors, of another race who has been loosed while he ends his days in the enjoyment of peace and a good salary. In the next class-room place a trained colored man, young, eager for the future of his race, devoted to his work and in perfect sympathy with the young men under his care. Which will turn out better men? Which will the more inspire courage and confidence and self-respect? There are to day more good men spoiled at Lincoln and Howard Universities than there are strong men who succeed in spite of the influences brought to bear upon them. Now, Wilberforce must show this country what colored teachers can do.

We need no demonstration The names of Prof. Reason—I name them in chronological order—of Prof Bassett, of Mrs. Fanny Jackson-Coppin, of Mr. Catto, Mr. Jacob C. White, of Miss Caroline LeCount rank with those of the best educators that this city has produced. But the nation at large does need such demoustration. It seems that we cannot do the work when white teachers are engaged to do it. I want to see Wilberforce a crowning glory to the A. M. E. Church, conceived by colored man's brain, developed by negro ability and thorough education, and represented by negro success in every department of public and private life.

To do all this it is necessary to make a high standard of scholarship for Wilberforce teachers. If you see a young man who shows particular aptitude in Greek, send him to the best schools of this country and have him finish his preparation for teaching by taking the course of study at the classical school at Athens. In all the departments of intellectual life develop specialists; for your all-round man of to-day is a mighty thin man, I tell you. We have produced orators and retailers of other men's thoughts by the score; but since Bannaker, I think that we have not produced one negro who has successfully followed any original line of scholarly inquiry. When Wilberforce shall develop a man who shall be peer among American scholars, she shall have justified her existence

THE LITERARY WORK.

The magazine, I have said, has taken high rank among the church periodicals of the country, but the CHRISTIAN RECORDER has not met its all measures of usefulness. Its scholarly and often brilliant editorials are buried beneath a burden of correspondence describing the meanderings of presiding elders and the doings of parishioners who want to see their names in print. I know something about this newspaper business. I know that readers delight in seeing their names standing out clearly in type—so long as the record is not a part of the criminal court reports I know that this taste must be catered to; but it seems to me that the RECORDER has gone too far in this direction. In its mechanical organization and its literary field, there is a great work awaiting the attention of your literary productions

The RECORDER office should be a complete "Book Concern." Its management should be prosecuted with a view to doing its work entirely, composition, press-work, book-making and publication. From press-room to bindery, there should be effected such a complete mechanical organization that colored boys should be able to learn all the trades incident to the publishing industry

Of far more importance, however, because of its more general application, is the necessity for inspiring a genuine literary spirit among our people There awaits them a peculiar work in this field, a fact, I think, which is not generally appreciated.

On every important paper at the North you will find among the brightest writers Southern men You know how the influence one Southern man on the negro question counterbalan es that of a dozen Northerners The consequence is that the North begins to see the negro through Southern eyes Go to your magazines and go to your works of fiction. Who are the brilliant portrayers of Southern life? Southern men and Southern women. They consciuciously describe Southern life as they see it; but they do not see it all. They know nothing of the young generation of men who are eager to get on in the world, and who are bitterly resentful against the caste prejudice which binds their very souls in fetters at the more galling and irresistible because they are intangible. From young boyhood, these youngsters see their half-brothers, children of the same fathers, growing in healthful prosperity while they must be hewers of wood and drawers of water in spite of their ambition to take high place in this everyday world. The Southern newspaper writers and novelists know nothing about this ambition. They can write charmingly about Uncle Remus and Brer Rabbit because Uncle Remus and Brer Rabbit are equally curious and interesting eccentricities of the animal creation. But they know nothing of the ambitious young men whose intellectual life Southern oppression makes such a cruel farce. They know nothing of the young women whose moral life Southern rapacity makes a tragedy. They know nothing of the real Southern question because of their sociological blindness. The portrayal of this phase of American life is therefore peculiarly the work of the future negro novelist. He need not be a creative genius. The heart aches and yearnings of this new American slavery need but a faithful reporter. Mr. Howells might bear and see this inner negro life from his window, but unfortunately it is beyond the conception of the most searching observation of those other race. Cannot the RECORDER and Review discover this novelist?

In explaining the rise of Shakespeare, Mr. Froude says, "We allow ourselves to think of Shakespeare, Raphael or of an Atlanta clergyman because he had not taken an active part in a political campaign. The Bishop promptly reappointed him because the clergyman had sufficient sense of duty to keep out of partisan politics. This distinguished son of Georgia, who has the daring effrontery to deny that the negro vote is suppressed in the South, would carry his work of political distortion into the pulpit itself.

It is the duty of every department of this great organization thoroughly to become a part of our everyday life. The great financiers of the connection have proved to the world that the ability which other races boast as the heritage of generations has come to us in times of almost hopeless struggle. The master minds of the Church have shown a power of organization under conditions more unfavorable than have ever attended the rise of any other race in the world's history. Each of the rank and file to prove themselves worthy of such leaders Everywhere in America, North and South East and West, this great work wants them. It is the making of vigorous men in spite of American prejudice, in spite of this deadly ether, whose insidious poison enters the blood of our young at their very birth and threatens them with intellectual and moral death The same antagonism which inspiree a Glenn bill at Atlanta, in Philadelphia shuts the doors of Jefferson College and the Medico-Chirurgical against colored students. Wherever floats the American flag may be found lurking in its shadow that cowardly assassin, American intolerance. And in fighting it, our preachers will find a foe as invisible and as obstinate as sin itself. With the courage born of intelligence and righteousness alone can such a foe be met. To succeed it is necessary to inculcate a spirit of genuine manliness—not that obtrusive self-assertion which offends the observer; but that quiet dignity of conscious power which commands the respect of friend or foe. To my clerical friends I extend my most cordial congratulations for the work of the past and my earnest wishes for the work of the future. In city or town, in pulpit or town hall, in the mansion of the wealthy or the hut of the poor, it will not be amiss to remember that before you can make Christians you must first make men

Prof. T. H. Jackson, of the Theological department, Wilberforce University, is making up a ministers' consulting library. Contributions of suitable books might be made by many preachers and friends.

"MORE BISHOPS" UNDER REVIEW.

BY REV. P. M. LEWIS.

No. 8.

THE XIII. ARTICLE.

This is a re-argument of the XI. and XII. articles with one or two strange additional ideas—that is, strange to Methodist Episcopals—and to these I shall give a few thoughts and pass the remainder as having been sufficiently answered in my last two papers. The dignity of the office of a Bishop, the good effect his presence has among his local churches and people, and especially when these churches and people are making extra efforts to build up the work, are fully recognized and appreciated by the classes of us as African Methodist Episcopals, both of the clergy and laity, who are destined to lead our Church, assisted by the grace of God, on to certain victories and to the most glorious Christian perfection.

Now, if we are Methodist Episcopals, we need nothing more to insure our complete success as a Church and people than earth; and at the end of our career reach to hear the well done, good and faithful servants, enter the joys of thy Lord, than to perpetuate these principles, rules, customs, habits, systems and spheres of labor which have been established by unsurpassable wisdom, unmeasured and incessant toils, and often untold and heart-rending sacrifices which have hastened some of our immortal legators to premature, but honorable, Christian graves

The Methodist Episcopal organizations were given to the world by Almighty God, and transmitted by the sainted John Wesley, Dr. Coke, Francis Asbury, Richard Allen, William P. Quinn and others to us, her and their redeemed children of to-day. These, our forefathers, have with a constant singleness to the glory of God and the happiness of man upon earth and in heaven, firmly founded Methodism upon the rock Christ Jesus the Lord of glory, and brought her adherants, white and colored, led by both white and colored immortal Christian heroes, safely from the most dreary wilderness of original sins, spiritual wickedness built up in high places. This latter brought on and held upon them by a worldly-wise, money-seeking, ambitious, and in many instances, bloodthirsty and irreligious hierarchy, who believed that a particular and superior degree of sanctity was attached to their ordinations over and above that attached to the calling and ordination of other gospel ministers; to the orders of presbyters or elders, and that they alone had the sole right to reign supreme in the Church on earth; in some cases claiming that only through them could sins be remitted; that they had exclusive right and power to confirm believers in the Church and faith, and to try and expel them from the same; to consecrate and administer the sacraments, baptize, declare who were worthy and ordain them at their will and to render every decision in all ecclesiastical matters, from which there were no appeals I say our fathers led the Methodists out of these deplorable conditions into the glorious liberty and new life and light of the New Testament Scriptures, wherein is declared that he whom the Son has made free is free indeed. The Scriptures which fully to recognize the full, valid ministry alike, but which we believe admits of and recognizes any human arrangements in creating and establishing different and additional grades of offices for the harmoniousness and effectiveness of both the work and workmen in the Church of God on earth, outside of those set forth in this Testament outline of our Lord's which teaches us the essentials, by the use of which we are sure to gain heaven when we come to die.

The Methodism of the Methodist Episcopal Church has been kept as a sacred heritage by her noble sons and daughters to this day. As a Christian denomination, and I include every Methodist Episcopal wing in this denomination, she has come from the dungeons of spiritual blindness and wickedness, braved all of her adversaries through fiery trials, settled herself in doctrines, well regulated system and usages, and for effective work, industrially, intellectually, morally and religiously for the same length of time and under similar circumstances, has not an equal of all the Protestant Churches in Christendom.

By adhering to the doctrines and governments as given us by Mr. Wesley and our Methodist Episcopal brethren in the United States, have not our sainted dead and the efficient leaders of to-day brought the A. M. E. Church from what once appeared to be the sloughs of spiritual darkness, cruel oppressions, comparative ignorance, inactivity, poverty and sins to the greatly improved, recognized and honorable position which she holds among the Christian denominations of the present time? Our improvements as a denomination have been general in every direction, constant and permanent; and upon the same principles as those of any other well-established Christian body, and by a strict adherence to the Methodism of our fathers' church we have been, and every good brother who ought to be leading prayer and class-meetings and we will be able to and will do more to improve our Church than we could if we were to elect one Bishop for every conference we have, which would not more than carry the plan which is proposed by the advocate of eight more.

THE XV. ARTICLE

The first section of this article begins to tell us of how grandly our Church has succeeded under our present system; and then begins the likeness of our children's play again, which is carried through it, which is that the making of this number of Bishops would compel the world to acknowledge our merits and so many more join and co-operate with us than have proportionately in the past. Our worth would be more completely exhibited by increasing our number of powerful preachers and business brethren, and sending them into all the world to be instruments in converting more souls, building and paying for better churches, collecting more money for educational work, opening and sustaining new schools, getting more people, and especially of our churches, to take our RECORDER, our Sunday school literature, thereby making these departments amply self sustaining, and collecting more money for our missionary work, raising money and providing a fund for our worn-out preachers, our widows and orphans and to pay our General Officers at least $1,500 each per year and paying all promptly Let our Church, throughout her length and breadth, build up and sustain these institutions, the unmistakable monuments to the world of our own unbounded care, sympathy and Christian love for our needy and dependent ones, and all will be well for her.

These provisions for all will make any church, nation or organization truly and lastingly great and universally famous for good and substantial work in relieving suffering humanity and building it up in all that ennobles and makes it more Christ-like. These, the wisdom of God through his redeemed ones here below, will seek and praise, and not the pompous array of big numbers of highest officers or the bombastical talk about numerical strength and all other qualifications attainable. Make propositions for this work, brethren, then let us do it and it will do more more good than we would do to make every qualified brother the connection has a Bishop, if needed, to carry the plan calling for fourteen. This work would compel universal recognition and respect for the A. M. E. Church.

WE HAVE received considerable Centennial poetry (?) that cannot be published. One writer makes Richard Allen a blacksmith and tells how he "threw down the hammer and put out the fire." A mistake, good brothers.

THE CHRISTIAN RECORDER'S Merry Christmas goes to all patrons, readers and others from oheerful and trustful hearts, trusting that the coming days of all may be made happy by full resignation to His will, who doeth all things well.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION denies the falsehood that the negro vote cost Atlanta the loss of local option, showing that the strongest anti-precincts in the county have a large white majority, while the only precinct that went for prohibition has the largest, strongest colored vote. Thank God for this defense.

MR. GEORGE T. DOWNING, of Newport, R. I., will deliver his popular lecture on "Charles Sumner," at Allen Chapel, Philadelphia, next Tuesday night. Everyone who attends is likely to be pleased. Mr. Downing's opportunities to know Mr. Sumner were greater than those of most men. Go, hear of the great man; nothing is more inspiring to youth than to read or hear of the doings of great men. Admission, 25 cents.

BISHOP BROWN has been very sick for two or three weeks. He was unable to attend the Macon Conference, which was presided over by Bishop Disney and Presiding Elder R. A. Hall. He was in Savannah at the Gegorgia Conference, but very feeble. He has had a long siege of conference holding and an immense amount of traveling during the past five months. It may be hoped that his winter rest will quite restore him to health.

AS THERE HAS been much discussion concerning the eligibility of local deacons and elders as delegates to General Conference as laymen, it may be well to say that all members of our Church who are not traveling preachers are styled laymen. Deacons and probably elders have occupied seats in our General Conference as laymen. Several are delegates-elect now. In the M. E. Church women have been elected delegates and one Bishop is said to have been elected to their next conference to represent an annual conference as ministerial delegate.

BISHOP CAMPBELL arrived home last Friday, after holding the North Carolina and Columbia Conferences, fresh and vigorous. Remaining but five days, he has gone to his Western field, intending to spend next Sunday in Cincinnati with Dr. Mitchell and Elder Johnson, who, it is to be inferred, have completed the payments on their respective churches, the former after a long effort of over fifteen years, the latter by a spirited stroke of two years. Both congregations are to be congratulated on this wise appointments that have been made to them and the blessed grace of God vouchsafed to them.

ON THE first day of November Mr. Joseph H. Ashe, of Galvestou, Tex., departed this life in hopefulness of a blessed immortality. On the 8th day of December Mrs. Ella A. Daniels, of the same city, leaving a brilliant testimony to the saving influence of the blood of Jesus, even in death, took her final departure. Mr. Ashe leaves a widow and eight children. Mrs. Daniels leaves three children. They were brother and sister, children of Mr. S. S. and Adelia Ashe, of Galvestou, brother and sister of Mrs. M. E. Lee, wife of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER editor. We give our "God bless you" to parents, widow and orphans. The Judge of all the earth will do right.

WHAT A wonderful grip the Christ idea has upon mankind. Could any power eliminate the Christmas tide anticipatious and feelings from the world? It deepens with its length of years. The days that made the hearts of Grecians and Romans glad have long since been forgotten; the feast days of the Jews are growing dim, but olasses that had known nothing of Christ are every year being brought into the ranks of those who move with the great Christmas hosts.

This day is the heart of the year, around which all others concenter. No man "keeps it up," it keeps man up. Shall the elevated cross actually elevate all men, as well in morals as in ideas? Shall the sacred thoughts that underlie Christmas, ever characterize the hearts of all men? Shall the year of universal jubilee ever come to men freed from sin? What a Christmas that would be. God hasten it.

A DISPATCH to the Philadelphia Preachers' Meeting last Monday announced the death of Mrs. Ward, wife of Bishop Ward. The meeting, after the announcement, adjourned, having resolved to attend the funeral at Bristol, Pa., this Thursday. In his solitude and sorrow the Bishop has our sincere sympathy. As was the case with Bishop Shorter last year, so with Bishop Ward this: he left his house to perform the duties of his office with little expectation of ever again meeting his wife on this earth. Such is the stern demand of duty; such the high sense of obligation. Looking at these things one may not wonder that there are others willing to obey it called to so vigorous and unyielding an office, but it does look strange to see any man put for this kind of service. Bishop Ward has been absent from that dying woman six weeks, in the most heightened suspense and anxiety. Doubtless he just arrived home in time to see her die, possibly as much from care and want of solace as any other cause. All honorable gentlemen who seek a position that compels them to forget and almost ignore home and its responsibilities are welcome to all they get; all who accept such responsibilities as a cross and bear it nobly are worthy of the highest respect of men.

THE COLORED people of Louisiana, indeed all colored and all other proper minded persons, are greatly indebted to the Louisiana Standard for its manly advocacy of human rights in the terrible siege necessary to gaining civil, social, judicial and moral respect from the ruling classes. Heroic indeed is the editor of that paper to stand in the breach and risk peace, prosperity and life in defence of his race variety. The Southwestern Christian Advocate, published in the same city, has also shown large moral courage in respect to treating that moral monstrosity of civilisation and that travesty on justice that characterise the actions, writings and judgment of most Louisiana white men and enter into the sickly, morally degraded, outrageous sum of what the North is too extensively attempting to hug as the "New South." It is the "Old South" in every other respect but this: that in lieu of slavery certain thrift and agility had to possess the enslavers in order to live, and that the large sprinkling of Northern settlers, together with the fact that the absence of slavery made it no longer politic to discard Northern literature, has given new impetus and teudeuey to business, industries and literary life. Doubtless these facts will ultimately make a new South—but it is not yet. God bless and preserve the noble colored editors; protect them and energise their pens.

REV. R. SPILLER, Baptist minister of Norfork, Va., and recently called to the Church in Hampton, Va., has spent a few days with Dr. J. S. Thompson, his brother-in-law, and other Philadelphia friends. Mr. Spiller gave us some of the methods of the "New Sonth," very different from, and perhaps better than, the methods of the old Sonth, to reduce the negro vote, but no more excusable, all proceeding from one source and tending to one end—the maintenance of all dominating advantages by the white people and the denial of all advantages to black people. The vile treatment which the noble "New South" gives the negro, in his exercise of his best judgment and highest rights in discharging his ballot, fails to awaken the great "New" North as well as the "New South" to the fact that these methods must ultimately lead to ruin. Even the great Dr. Talmage, whose sermons are read by many thousands of colored persons weekly, thinks that the case of the colored Southerner is not so very bad. He thinks he would rather be a colored man in the South than in the North. In all his popular sermons we do not remember seeing one against the most unreasonable and indefensible crime of American white Christians, the almost universal pressing by on the other side, with reference to the black American, priest and levite like. He has a lecture on "Popular Sins," or some similar title, but does not include this sin of sins.

"THE CHRISTIAN RECORDER" AND ITS CRITICS.

MR. J. S. Durham's centennial paper appears in this number of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. We are glad to give our readers an additional statement of the outside world's notion of the A. M. E. Church. Of course we do not agree with quite all the ontside world says. As a matter of fact, the young gentlemen who so nobly represent the Afro-American class on some of the most important papers of the day have a very important and honorable opportunity to benefit both classes of the American people, the Canoasian and the negro. We feel grateful to Mr. Durham for his criticism on our educational work, and much of that on our literature. The Afro-American really owes them high respect, but these same journalists have but a very poor conception of the proper management of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, or its relations to the 400,000 people whose extensive patronage offers so attractive a bait to many of their able pens.

Mr. Durham's ideas could be well carried out in respect to a patronage that had no further claim upon the paper than to furnish refreshing and educating news and literature, but the CHRISTIAN RECORDER has much to do that secular papers, under the full control of Mr. Durham, would not do. Evidently Mr. Durham does not know that the Church even fixes the subscription price of the RECORDER, mixes its affairs with those of book trade, that to fail to note presiding elders' rounds, church news, revival meetings, trips of ministers across their county—sometimes their township—is to make the paper less than an organ; that these very attractive 400,000 may all feel to have a claim on the CHRISTIAN RECORDER; that they give a much larger number of communities to be satisfied than is had by any other paper published by colored men.

Mr. A. H. Grimke, seizing upon the criticism of Mr. Durham, hastens to suggest that the sensible thing for the A. M. E. Church to do is to make Mr. T. T. Fortune editor of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. He is going to watch and see if the A. M. E. Church will be wise enough to accept his wise suggestion, as "Mr. Fortune is a member of the A. M. E. Church." If Mr. Grimke proposes to wait in a cold corner, he would do well to put on his overcoat, take extra rations with him and weigh well his own wisdom against that of the A. M. E. Church, which, by the way, according to his statement, includes the practical wisdom of Mr. Fortune. The CHRISTIAN RECORDER has been the CHRISTIAN RECORDER twenty-five years.

Mr. Grimke urges Mr. Fortune's seven years' experience in journalism as argument for his being just the man to make the CHRISTIAN RECORDER a mighty paper. In Mr. Fortune's seven years' experience, while he has made a successful and entertaining writer, he has, so far as business is concerned, been no more successful than the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. We should not like the CHRISTIAN RECORDER change its name three times on each seven years and in its great secular side change its politics three times each four years.

Following these gentlemen comes the colored writer of notes on colored people for the Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, and informs the readers of that paper that the Church has never had a "practical man in the editorial chair of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER."

Finally Mr. C. H. Shorter, probably the only African Methodist among them, seconds Mr. Grimke's motion, in the interest of laymen.

We would be very glad if our laymen would avail themselves of the opportunities offered by the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. We have urged them to do so. If the appointment of Mr. Fortune is what they wait for, it should be done soon. Mr. Shorter says Mr. Fortune was a member of the late General Conference. It is true that the General Conference foolishly so declared after some member, whose shrewdness merits more respect than his consistency, who was either ignorant of law or indifferent to it, offered a motion to that effect. Mr. Shorter, who was a member, knows that there are but two powers that create delegates to the CHRISTIAN RECORDER and as much thoughtful, original matter, as characterises any colored paper. It does not stalk out upon the arena, boast of its superiority and attempt to gain patronage by appealing to the prejudices and passions of readers, but to their reason and conscience. Were it to interest itself more in politics, fancies and funny things it would increase its circulation, but this is not its great object. We have in mind certain colored church papers that have so much nonsense, vulgarity, bombast, flippancy and blasphemy that more thoughtful, cultured and wise men must think they represent a very weak class of Christians.

The CHRISTIAN RECORDER is self-supporting. No competent man would object to taking it for what it is worth, drawing his salary from its revenue; provided it was under his control. As the race grows the CHRISTIAN RECORDER will rise to the dignity of a great church journal. Patience, brethren, African Methodism includes more than one successful and practical man. It would like to include even more than it does; won't you walk in?

Personal.

—Rev. L. M. Beckett, B.D., Elmira, N. Y., raised $300 in his church December 11th.

—Rev. J. W. Beckett, B.D., spent Sunday, 11th inst., with his brother in Elmira, N. Y.

A SAD LETTER.

REV. AND DEAR BROTHER:

This is the hour of darkness and sorrow. Death has flapped his dark wing over our dwelling. Mrs. Rachel Annie Ward passed through the gates of death to-day at noon. Four long, weary months she wrestled with the King of Terrors. Though conquered, she triumphed. She never faltered nor quailed through all these months of unutterable physical anguish. Each day found her more rooted and fixed on the promises of God.

She was a woman of extraordinary fortitude and endurance. Often during these days of suffering she chanted the Victor Psalm from Pisgah's glorious summit.

On the 15th I received a telegram that her symptoms were alarming. Though jaded and worn from excessive labor, working night and day in anticipation of the dreaded though expected event, I took train at once, riding nearly 1500 miles, and reached Washington twenty-four hours before death closed the scene. I asked her at once what was her prospect for eternity. She answered, "Bright, gloriously bright." After reading the 23d Psalm and from the 9th t 27th of 21st of Revelation, she seemed to be nearing the city of God and peacefully passed away.

To me this is a terrible blow. The strongest earthly prop I had to rest on is broken. She was in deep sympathy with my work, and when in the field directing the forces of God's Israel she held me be firm, valiant and true—true to myself, my race and to my God. She was a model housekeeper, the synonym of economy, industry, order and neatness I have been spliutered and riven by the bolts of Heaven The bloom of life is wilted and withered. This storm has swept away yard and mast. All that is left is my Church and my hope of Heaven. Four short but terrible years have passed since my first wife was called hence.

We shall celebrate the next centennial within the walls of jasper—walls where tears never flow, where the body is never wrecuhed with pain. Until then farewell, thou who stoodest by me in the dark, terrific, starless night of relentless persecution, farewell. We shall meet again, and with palms of victory and songs of triumph chant the wonders of his grace.

T. M. D. WARD

School statistics from the annual report of the New Jersey State Board of Education it appears that fifty new school houses were erected during the year. The amounts expended for support of schools was $2,678,186. There are 1603 school buildings in the State.

WHY?

BY "WANDERER."

[This article should have appeared before that on the same topic in a recent issue.—EDITOR.]

When Newton saw the apple fall, when Ferguson saw the chandelier at Pisa swing to and fro, when Cesar came to the Rubicon, when all men investigate causes, the first query is: Why this or that effect? In seeking out the true cause, the first and imperative act of the human mind is to think, and from thought some reason is found for the existence of certain phenomena in nature From thought some idea of the Supreme Being is attained; from thought problems in mathematics are demonstrated and solved. It is said the A. M. E Church is losing ground Why? If our statement is true or not true the point of contest will depend upon the facts in the case. Paul the apostle says in his letter to the Thessalonians, "Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power," &c. Does the A. M. E. Church promulgate the gospel? Yes, verily it does. Is the gospel losing ground? We answer, no. Why, then, this seeming retrogression? We say that too many "words" of the gospel are preached to the people and the power is not est By power we mean right thinking.

In many communities the youth are in advance of the preachers. They read better, spell better, write better and think better. In this not the argument for the declination of any church or society?

Not long since an eminent pastor in the Southwest was conducting an exercise on Children's Day. The children had been instructed and prepared by the teachers in the public school for the occasion The pastor's mistakes were so great that the pupils in the Sunday school sat down in disgust and after repeated failures the pastor asked the writer to conduct the exercises. Such preachers might preach until doomsday to such children and it would be like a "sounding brass" to their ears. The A. M. E Church boasts of intellect, and this she has, too; but where the great masses of people are men of many words, and wrong thoughts are permitted to go, alas! the evil they do. Here in our city, with a population of over 3000 colored people, and 75 members only. Why? Echo answers, why?

THE TWO GREAT QUESTIONS.

BY REV. S. A. HARDISON.

Again in our history as a Church the time is rapidly rolling on when our legislators from all parts of the country shall assemble, we trust, for the purpose of deliberating wisely relative to the needs of our Zion. I hope the General Conference will not resolve itself into a legislative body, and that we will cease to call it the legislative body of the Church, for the Church and in the Church. I was taught by the Methodist fathers that Jesus Christ is the only Lord and Law-giver of the Church, and that the province of the General Conference is to make rules and legislations for the people called Methodists; but we are getting to have legislative councils, judicial conferences, Bench of Bishops prerogatives and some provocations. Thus churches, or rather ecclesiastical systems, grow; but we have read in history how they grew. Even from apostolic simplicity and soundness of doctrine into prelatical pretensions and unto a form of godliness, while the power thereof is denied. May God preserve to us enough of primitive Methodism in the Episcopacy and the Church so that we shall not lose our identity with Methodism. It may be an unconscious growth, but a real tendency to put the episcopacy into a higher place than that occupied by the elder in the Church of God. We do not charge nor do we believe that those who put forward these ecclesiastical force pumps consciously indulged these dangerous tendencies, but they were seen and not a few expressed the fear at such manifest tendencies. Do we not believe that the Lord Jesus intended a complex and multiform ecclesiasticism in his Church on earth? Therefore it would be expedient for the coming General Conference and the connectional societies to tighten them up, we hope, for the demands of the connectional interest, which will come before that august body, for there will be two grave questions to be solved: 1st. Presiding Elders; 2nd. More Bishops. The Presiding Elder system; what shall we do with it? Shall it stand as it is, universal in our great Zion, or what shall we do? We ask of that legislative body justice. We will yield to what the does, as our question is surmountable. Leave or make the system optional with the annual conference, for she is loyal to the legislative power. She, the Church, has tried both and now she is the North-west wants optional laws. Let the annual conference say what she thinks is best for her. You may show or prove that the system is as old as time; but without a change it will not please the African Methodist Church of to-day.

We admit that the system is good where it is needed. Is it needed in the Northwest? Will you kill the churches in the Northwest to make it needed? The Church is too old now. Give it to her as she has had it and she will live. If she has gone too long without it. In every State in the Northwest she planted herself in cities, towns and villages, where the banner of African Methodism is without the system. This is not so in all sections; for this cause the General Conference should make the law optional. We see and know that as a whole presiding elders are not a blessing to the Northwest. It is either the office or the man, for one is a failure. My friend, J. M. Murchison, said that the present system should be retained. It may be needed in the South Arkansas Conference, my brother, but not in the West. The presiding elder should have all qualifications, educational, moral and religious. What of that if the office is a failure? So with the Northwest. We do not want to retain the universal system, but we want the optional system. This is one of the great needs of the Church The annual conference can use the optional system better than she can electing presiding elders.

MORE BISHOPS.

We must try and govern ourselves more by the actual needs of the Church; and again we want itinerant Bishops as well as preachers. If the episcopacy will live it must move, not only where it is needed, but where it is needed most, not all the time in some large city. God help us to move right Yes, we need more Bishops, but we want something else besides educational qualifications. Does the Church need right more? If so, for what? The Methodist Episcopal Church itinerant ministers number 12,911; local preachers, 12 225; number of members, 1,987,339; and with this vast number the only has twelve Bishops, and we are talking of eight more. God grant that we make what we can use, and no more. If all of our Bishops could get around, we would not need any; but give us some young men full of God and love for the Church.

ALLEN UNIVERSITY AND BISHOP CAMPBELL.

BY J. W. MORRIS.

MR. EDITOR:—Allow me space in your columns. The fall term of Allen University opened October 3rd, 1887, under the most promising auspices. We are having daily additions. The university is growing in great favor and usefulness. This is evidenced by the largest attendance up to date that we have had at any period since the founding of the university. We predict, from this and other circumstances, a bright and prosperous future for the school. The only drawback, at present, that we have is a mortgage debt of $3 500, which must be lifted June 18th, 1888. We have a present membership of 121 students, distributed in the different departments of the university as follows: In the College Department, 6; Normal Department, 38; Intermediate Department, 19; Graded Department, 58. This is the largest county representation. We have 18 counties of the State represented. The good that is being done here in the cause of Christian education is being highly appreciated. We had two delightful visits from Bishop J. P. Campbell, which were greatly enjoyed. The Bishop was much pleased with everything which he saw and heard. He delivered, by request, a very interesting lecture on his visit to Hayti. This was a grand effort; it was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated, for it was highly interesting and instructive, even in its minutest detail. Would that every man in America could have heard this lecture, so full of sound philosophy, cogent logic, research and learning, backed up with the lofty flights of rhetoric and impassioned eloquence. We indulge the hope that his useful and aged life be spared to us for many years to come. Of him it might be said, as it was said of the aged Doge of Venice, that notwithstanding more than three-score years have rolled by, yet time has not marred his intellectual vigor nor dimmed the lustre of his genius. We thank God that such a man as Bishop Campbell lives.

The president of the Chattanooga Railroad offered the women of the W. C. T. U. Convention at Nashville, a trip to Murfreesboro', to see the battle-ground and the soldiers' cemetery. Accordingly two car loads of women, with no man except the conductor, visited these celebrated places, collected old bullets, etc., as souvenirs, saw the house in which Charles Egbert Craddock once lived, and which she has described in her novel, "Where the Battle was Fought," and all came back to Nashville delighted with their visit.

The Indians on the Oneida reservation have a grand lodge of temperance societies made up of four subordinate lodges, two of which are located in Canada and two in Wisconsin.

OUR WOMAN'S COLUMN.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

BY MRS MARY BOLTON.

Solomon by one stroke set forth the imperial character of a brave and Christian woman. She was not a slave nor a subordinate, but a queen. Women are continually talking about their rights, but I say that women have their rights. It is the right to have charge of a home, to instruct the boys and girls of that home Think of this, women It was a mother's teaching that brought General Grant to what he was. It is a mother's prayer, a mother's tears and teachings that bring men to their high standing. Think you or dare you say that we have not our rights?

I say that a woman's position in the world is higher than any man's. For if a woman wants to preach she will do it. Name any one good thing a woman does in her head and thinks she ought to do it and will not? Yes, in one way women vote, and one woman's vote counts five to every man who casts his ticket in the ballot box on election day, because a woman begins at the cradle with her boy; this is the kind of voting we need Send a prayer to your Almighty Father for your baby boy or girl. Now say that a woman's right is not at her home around the fireside.

Again, a woman has the special and superlative right of blessing and comforting the sick. What land, house or street that has not felt the smiting of disease? The young men at college may scorn the idea of having a religious mother, and being under her care and influence, but at the time of typhoid fever he says, "Where is my mother?" It is an awful thing to be sick from home. If you have to be sick you want to be at home. Once in a while men come to see the sick, but with their hands over their faces for fear of catching the contagious disease. How rough they will handle you, how you long for the cheering words of a wife, mother or sister. The room may be gloomy, the face that looks into yours may be plain, but who cares for that? There are loving voices to sing God's praises and loving lips to read God's promises. The Lord will bless the woman at her home. In our great battles men knelt and asked, "On whose side did you fight?" Women asked, "Are you much hurt?" While men are in their beds asleep there will be a fight in yonder dark alley; there will be groaning in that dark and lonely alley; men will be sleeping while women are watching.

Again, a woman has a special right to care for the poor. Oh, Christian young woman, if you would make yourself happy and win the blessings of Christ, go out among the destitute! A loaf of bread and a bundle of wood may make a homely bundle to carry, but the angels of God will come out to watch over you, and the Almighty God will give his messenger host a charge, saying, "Look after that woman." So you need never fear going where God tells you to go.

Again, I say it is a woman's right to comfort Oh! what a mistake business men make by not telling their wives or mothers their business troubles. They do not remember that their first duty is to tell their wives all about it; she can help him to bear it easier and make it pleasanter to think of. Again, I say it is somewhat a woman's right to bring men to the kingdom of God. It is easier for a woman to become a Christian than a man. Why? You say she is weaker. No. Her heart is more responsive to the pleadings of Divine love. The fact that she can easier become a Christian, I prove by a statement that three fonths of the members of Christian churches are women. The most celebrated sermons now preached are preached at home, around the fireside with an audience of two or three. How can any woman now say she has not her rights?

DEATH OF REV. WILLIAM MURPHY.

BY REV. W. H. BRYANT.

MR. EDITOR:—It becomes my sad duty to inform you of the death of one who has done much in this place for the upbuilding of the A. M. E. Church. The person of whom I speak is the Rev. Wm. Murphy, who departed this life on the 25th of November, 1887, aged 84 years and 22 days.

On taking charge of our church here last May, I found four very old members, viz., Brother Thomas Bedford, who departed this life in the first of November, 1887, at the age of 107 years; second, Mother Murphy, who left the sickly shores of time last June, aged 86 years; third, Father Murphy, age as stated above. Father Murphy came to Chester in the year 1846. At that time we had no church here, but had started a mission under the care of the late Stephen Smith. This mission, however, was only a Sunday school and under the faithful care of Father Murphy that mission Sunday school grew into the present Asbury A. M. E. Church, of which he and Mother Murphy were members for over forty years. So great was the love of Father Murphy for the A. M. E. Church and the cause of his blessed Lord that he was not satisfied to stop at building up the A. M. E. Church here in Chester, but he went to what is known here as South Chester, and there, through his faithful efforts, built the A. M. E. Church which bears his name. And I am informed that after helping hand in the building of nearly avery A. M. E. Church in this county. For years his house here was the preachers' home, and Mother Murphy took great delight in caring for the minister for a number of years But their labors are ended and they are gone to share that rest which remains for the people of God.

Father Bedford, the third to depart this life since I have been here, was also a faithful member of Asbury A. M. E Church, and as long as he was able to go about, he would be seen making his way to the church at the appointed time for worship.

Father Bedford, Father Murphy and Mother Murphy were born in Maryland during the dark days of slavery, and embraced the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ in the days of their youth. The fourth aged member of whom I spoke above is Mother Ann Rump. She is a little over 85 years, but is still active, true and faithful. She is always found at her post when it is possible for her to be out. If our young members will be as faithful as have been the fathers and mothers who have just passed away and are passing away day by day, they will be able to do even greater work than the fathers and mothers have done.

My prayer is that the Great Head of the Church will raise up another strong man in Chester, Pa., like unto Father Murphy to help carry on the work of the A. M. E Church in this place. Truly Father Murphy's work will follow him and he will rest from his labor.

Natural Law in the Spiritual World.

By Prof. HENRY DRUMMOND of Glasgow University, Scotland. Ideal Edition, Long Primer type, fine cloth. Price Reduced from $1.00 to 40c.; postage, 6c.

"A great work."—BISHOP DOANE.

"Grand reading for the clergy."—BISHOP COXE, Buffalo.

"Its originality will make it almost a revelation."—Christian Union, New York.

"Fresh, clear, and suggestive. Just the book for every minister and intelligent Christian."—DR HAIGH, Chicago.

"Too much cannot be said in praise of it, and those who fail to read it will suffer a serious loss."—Churchman, New York.

"This is one of the most impressive and suggestive books on religion that we have read for a long time."—London Spectator.

"If you read only one book this year, let it be 'Natural Law in the Spiritual World.'"—Christian Thought, New York.

"This is one of those rare books which find a new point of view from which old things themselves become new."—Chicago Standard.

"In Drummond's book we have none of the nonsense of the new theology, but the old theology splendidly illuminated by the newest scientific knowledge."—DR. HENSON, Chicago.

"This is a most original and ingenius book, instructive and suggestive in the highest degree. It is wholly out of our power to do justice to the many points that press for notice."—Nonconformist.

"The enchantments of an unspeakably fascinating volume by Prof. Drummond have had an exhilarating effect each time we have opened its pages or thought over its delightful contents."—Clergyman's Magazine.

"This is a remarkable and important book. The theory it announces may, without exaggeration, be termed a discovery. It is difficult to say whether the scientific or the religious reader will be the most surprised and delighted as he reads."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"We enriched our library with it a year ago on the assurance of a scholarly clergyman that he had never read a finer work. We have found it to be the praise of many and the delight of a multitude. Scholars are unanimous in indorsing the work for its richness of thought and ripeness of conclusions."—Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dayton, O.

Complete Catalogue of ALDEN'S Publications (64 pages) sent free. NOT sold by book-sellers; same discounts allowed except to Booksellers in The Trade Book Co., which is open to all. Books sent for examination before payment, satisfactory reference being given.

BOOKS.

HINTS TO SELF-EDUCATED MINISTERS.

Reasons why all preachers should read Dr Jean Vorter's Hints; Jr., The Pastor furnishes the most natural method of preparing to preach effectively. 2nd Reason: It shows how to preach with ease and grace, and yet with power and success. 3rd Reason: It exposes humbug in all branches of ministerial service, and how to correct them. In reviewers advise ministers how to read the work carefully, when "they will find in it much that they never thought of." Reason 4th: The very hints they most need to receive are not furnished by other homiliteal works.—because "it is replete with three-card, flash-in-the-pan sensation." It is a book for all ministers, however educated,—because it is assured by many it is the most helpful book they ever read.

"Worth its weight in gold,"

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FOR PREACHERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

Dr. Porter's Hints to them is one of the most useful—"Worth its weight in gold," says the Christian Guardian. $1.25.

For teaching everyone how to do good, "The Winning Worker; or, the Foundation, Plan and Methods of Doing Good to Men," by the same author. Order of J. C. Embry, 91 Pine Street, Philadelphia. Why not make presents that will do good?

"WORTH MORE THAN ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD."

to young ministers and local preachers. "Many a preacher would have been saved from failure by the early study of such a book."—Christian Guardian.

Read Dr. Porter's book called "Christianity Demonstrated by Experience." It will settle the question forever and set your souls on fire. Buy a copy and keep it to lend to the skeptical, and especially to unbelievers. On sale by Rev. J. C. Embry. Price, $1.50. A new supply just received.

OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

LESSON HELPS IN FOUR GRADES.

THE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY. A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson helps for teachers and older scholars. Its value is enhanced by the introduction of appropriate forms for opening and closing exercises, hymns and tunes, maps, dictionary of proper names, etc.

THE SCHOLAR'S QUARTERLY. Similar to the above, but with much necessary change to adapt it to the wants of scholars in the main school. It is marvelously cheap. Five or more copies to one address, per year, 7 cents each.

THE JUVENILE LESSON PAPER is a four page weekly, designed for younger scholars who have outgrown the infant class, but who retain their fondness for pictures and simple stories. 26 pages for a dime!

THE GEM LESSON PAPER is a beautiful lesson sheet, four pages handsomely illustrated and printed on plate paper; for primary or infant scholars. Each number contains besides the lessons, a page or more of "baby-land" talk. All for 5 cents a year, where five or more copies are sent to one address.

THE CHILD'S RECORDER, now beginning its eighth volume with a larger issue than ever before, offers superior attractions for the coming year. With additional editorial force, and a list of regular contributors skilled in the style of writing required by the young, no pains will be spared to put the publication abreast with the foremost of its class.

Literature.

The attractions of the Christmas number of The American Magazine have compelled the printing of a second edition to supply mail orders.

In the January number of The American Magazine, Wm. H. Rideing will have the first paper of a series on Boston Artists and their studios, reproducing some of their paintings and showing their distinctive styles of art.

We know of no better or brighter magazine for the horticulturist than Vick's Magazine, of Rochester, N. Y. The winter numbers are as entertaining as those of spring. In fact, one who intends to have a garden in the spring, has flowers in the house, wishes to know what is going on in the garden world, can spend some of the leisure hours of winter's long nights most pleasantly studying Vick's Magazine. The December number is highly entertaining. James Vick, Rochester, N. Y.

The rumored visit of the ruler of Persia to Europe, makes the beautifully illustrated article on "The Shah and His Court," by Wolf von Schierbrand, with which the December number of The Cosmopolitan opens, very timely. Oliver Thorne Miller's article on "Mr. Crowley, the Chimpanzee," illustrated by J. Carter Beard, the well known animal artist, is a charming study of a creature in the Central Park Zoological Museum that attracts more attention than any other New Yorker. "From Forest to Floor," a profusely illustrated article by J. Macdonald Oxley, contains a graphic, interesting, and valuable account of lumbering and the lumber interest in Canada.

The January Quiver keeps well up to the promise of the December number. It is full of good things from the first page to the last. No wonder The Quiver has taken such a vital hold of its American audience, an audience, too, that increases with every month. The old-fashioned idea that a religious magazine must of necessity be dull is disproved by The Quiver. That periodical has not a page in it that its readers would call dull. The current number opens with a paper called the "Salt of the Earth," by Edward Garrett, which is followed by the serial "Wanted, a Governess;" then Professor Bleckie interprets "The Voice of Winter in Christian Ears;" the Dean of Canterbury's second paper showing "How God Preserved the New Testament," is given, and is followed by a pretty story, "A Boat to Heaven." "Growth Under Pressure," is the title of an encouraging paper by the Rev. Hugh Macmillan Cassell & Co., New York, 15 cents a number, $1 50 a year in advance.

The readers of that wonderful magazine for young people, Wide Awake, are so accustomed to good reading and pictures that they will wonder how it is going to be better than ever this coming year. But it is. The new year has already begun with the holiday number just out—a truly great number, larger and richer, more varied, and therefore it must be better than ever before. And the publishers have a primer to send to those who want to know what Wide Awake is going to have in it in 1888. The wonder is that such a library and picture gallery can be got together for $2 40 a year—a thousand pages and everything fresh and new—stories, history, travels, biography, sketches, anecdote, adventure—and all instructive as well as entertaining. Two worlds are drawn from to make such provisions for the education and pleasure of our children. So high is the best of young people's literature nowadays that we are all glad to be young. Nine-tenths of reading people prefer it to what is written for them; for it has the rare merit of being easy as well as good. We know of no Christmas gift so sure of bringing a happy response in a reading family. Send $2 40 to D. Lothrop Company, Boston

Cassell's Family Magazine for January has a real winter cheer about it. It makes no pretentions to being a holiday number, but being published just at the the holiday season it has naturally caught some of its festive spirit. The frontispiece of the number is called "Spell-Bound" and is an engraving printed in rich brown representing a young girl with a book in her hand, the pages of which have evidently proved all-absorbing. Both pen and pencil have been called upon and the sketches are thoroughly characteristic. "The Family Doctor" discusses headaches this month, and makes some practical suggestions for the relief of those who are afflicted with them. The Rev. S. Baring Gould contributes a chapter on some "National Characteristics." Frederick J. Crowest, who is an authority of musical matters, asks "What is an Oratorio?" and answers the question more or less lucidly. The fashions are given the usual space, and "The Gatherer" is full as ever. The editor announces "Our Amateur Free University," which is open to all the readers of the magazine. To be thoroughly understood, his prospective in this number must be read.—Cassell and Company, 15 cents a copy, $1.50 a year in advance.

The Pearl of Days for January, 1888, comes to us in new dress, with superior and attractive features. This unique and and beautiful magazine, devoted ed to the interests of the Christian Sabbath and the Home, is henceforth to be published monthly and to be finely illustrated it. The number before us indicates that it grows in worthiness and has taken its place among the excellent journals devoted to high Christian ideals. Under the editorship of Rev. J. H. Knowles, and with distinguished contributors, its high literary and religious character is assured. This magazine will grace any home. While its promise is to treat of every phase of the Sabbath question in a strong and sprightly manner, it is likewise to seek the elevation of the home. The present number presents among numerous worthy articles, "The Colonists of New England," being the first of a series of historical studies, and "The Sabbath Citadel." Also "The Sabbath in Ohio University," by Rev. C. H. Payne, D. D., LL. D., "The Threatening Peril," by Rev. W. W. Boyd, D. D., "The Sabbath Sign," by Rev. W. J. R. Taylor, D.D., "The Christian Standpoint," by Mrs. J. H. Knowles. The illustrations add a charming feature to that bright and widely popular magazine. We speak for it a still more brilliant success. One dollar a year. Single copy, 10 cents. Wilbur B Ketcham, Publisher, 71 Bible House, New York

In All Complaints

Of the Stomach, Bowels, Liver, and Kidneys, Ayer's Pills are taken with excellent results. Being purely vegetable, they leave no ill effects, and may be safely administered to any one, old or young, in need of an aperient and cathartic. Physicians, all over the country, prescribe Ayer's Pills and recommend them as a good Family Medicine.

"If people would use Ayer's Pills," says Col. D. W. Bozeman, of Franklin, Texas, "in course, as you direct, very many of the serious ailments that come from torpidity or derangement of the liver and from malarial infections would be avoided. I have used these pills above a quarter of a century and know whereof I affirm."

Herman Bringhoff, jewelry engraver, Newark, N. J., writes: "Costiveness, induced by my sedentary habits of life, became chronic. Ayer's Pills afforded me speedy relief. Their occasional use has since kept me all right."

Literature.

The attractions of the Christmas number of The American Magazine have compelled the printing of a second edition to supply mail orders.

In the January number of The American Magazine, Wm. Ridsting will have the first paper of a series on Boston Artists and their studios, reproducing some of their paintings and showing their distinctive styles of art.

We know of no better or brighter magazine for the horticulturist than Vick's Magazine, of Rochester, N. Y. The winter numbers are as entertaining as those of spring. In fact, one who intends to have a garden in the spring, has flowers in the house, wishes to know what is going on in the garden world, can spend some of the leisure hours of winter's long nights most pleasantly studying Vick's Magazine. The December number is highly entertaining. James Vick, Rochester, N.Y.

The rumored visit of the ruler of Persia to Europe, makes the beautifully illustrated article on "The Shah and His Court," by Wolf von Schierbrand, with which the December number of The Cosmopolitan opens, very timely. Oliver Thorne Miller's article on "Mr. Crowley, the Chimpanzee," illustrated by J. Carter Beard, the well known animal artist, is a charming study of a creature in the Central Park Zoological Museum that attracts more attention than any other New Yorker. "From Forest to Floor," a profusely illustrated article by J. Macdonald Oxley, contains a graphic, interesting, and valuable account of lumbering and the lumber interests in Canada.

The January Quiver keeps well up to the promise of the December number. It is full of good things from the first page to the last No wonder The Quiver has taken such a vital hold of its American audience, an audience, too, that increases with every month. The old-fashioned idea that a religious magazine must of necessity be dull is disproved by The Quiver. That periodical has not a page in it that its readers would call dull. The current number opens with a paper called the "Salt of the Earth," by Edward Garrett, which is followed by the serial "Wanted, a Governess;" then Professor Blackie interprets "The Voice of Wluter in Christian Ears;" the Dean of Canterbury's second paper showing "How God Preserved the New Testament," is given, and is followed by a pretty story, "A Boat to Heaven;" "Growth Under Pressure," is the title of an encouraging paper by the Rev. Hugh Macmillan Cassell & Co., New York, 15 cents a number, $1 50 a year in advance.

The readers of that wonderful magazine for young people, Wide Awake, are to be sustained to the good reading and pictures that they will wonder how it is going to be better than ever this coming year. But it is The new year has already begun with the holiday number just coming—a truly great number, larger and richer, more varied, and therefore it must be better than ever before. And the publishers have a primer to send to those who want to know what Wide Awake is going to have in it in 1888. The wonder is that such a library and picture gallery can be got together for $2 40 a year—a thousand pages and everything fresh and new—stories, history, travels, adventure, anecdote, natural adventure—and all instructive as well as entertaining. Two worlds are drawn from to make such provisions for the education and pleasure of our children. So high is the best of young people's literature nowadays that we are all of us glad to be young. Nine-tenths of reading people prefer it to what is written for them; for it has the rare merit of being as well as good. We know of no Christmas gift so sure of bringing a happy response in a reading family. Send $2 40 to D. Lothrop Company, Boston

Cassell's Family Magazine for January has a real wild or sleep about it. It makes no pretentions to being a holiday number, but being published just at the holiday season it has naturally caught some of its festive spirit. The frontispiece of the number is called "Spell-Bound" and is an engraving printed in rich brown tints, showing a young girl with a book in her hand, the pages of which have evidently proved all-absorbing. Both pen and pencil have been called upon and the sketches are thoroughly characteristic. "The Family Doctor" discusses headaches this month, and makes some practical suggestions for the relief of those who are afflicted with them. The Rev. S. Baring Gould contributes a chapter on some "National Characteristics." Frederick J. Crowest, who is an authority of musical matters, asks "What is an Oratorio?" and answers the question more or less lucidly. The fashions are given the usual space, and "The Gatherer" is full as ever. The editor announces "Our Attempt Free University," which is open to all the readers of the magazine. To be

In All Complaints

Of the Stomach, Bowels, Liver, and Kidneys, Ayer's Pills are taken with excellent results. Being purely vegetable, they are no ill effects And may be safely administered to any one, old or young, in need of an aperient and cathartic. Physicians, all over the country, prescribe Ayer's Pills and recommend them as a good Family Medicine.

"If people would use Ayer's Pills," says Col. D. W. Boseman, of Franklin, Texas, "in course, as you direct, very many of the serious ailments that come from torpidity or derangement of the liver and from malarial infections would be avoided. I have used these pills above a quarter of a century and know whereof I affirm."

Herman Bringhoff, jewelry engraver, Newark, N. J., writes: "Costiveness, induced by my sedentary habits of life, became chronic. Ayer's Pills afforded me speedy relief. Their occasional use has since kept me all right."

A COMMUNICATION.

BY REV. J. GOINS, M.D.

MR. EDITOR:—I thought that you and your many readers would like to learn how the people of the "Pelican State" (Louisiana), are doing. There has been generally a good crop of cotton. The colored people made it, but the white men are taking it. There is a terrible movement just now. There has been several families moved, and others are getting ready. The sheriffs are riding day and night, seizing all of the poor people's property. I mean such as live property. We are expecting a very cold winter and these poor people are bound to suffer. Men, women and children are crying over their poverty-stricken condition. It is a stormy, grabbing time. It is grievous to me to pen these few lines. All who chance to read this do not fail to send up a special prayer for the poor colored people in North Louisiana; they are sheep bawling no shepherd. But they have a just God to plead their cause. Faith is the Christian's prop. Rich men will oppress the poor, and do them over the other quietly loosening them. Till suddenly, like a flash, he snatched it off and bounded to the back of his cage. In vain the hapless policeman commanded and coaxed, begged and threatened. Mr. Crowley, entirely unmoved, sat calmly down to enjoy his prize. First he put it on his hand, using his teeth to help, and then held it up for the audience to see, with every finger spread grinning with delight. But now being able to arrange it to his satisfaction, he tore it to strings, and passed a happy fifteen minutes while reducing it to its primitive state of thread, holding one part in the hand of the thigh—the monkey's convenient pocket—while he worked on another.

On another occasion one of the Park men went inside of the rail to speak to the chimpanzee. Crowley sat quietly on the floor looking at him, and, thrusting his hands out to play, as is his custom.

"Look out, there!" warned the keeper.

"Oh, Mr. Crowley knows me," was hardly out of his mouth in response before Mr. Crowley fastened his finger upon the lapels of his coat, one each side, and gave them such a jerk that the man was dashed violently against the bars, and the coat split down the back like so much paper.

Church News.

Rev. M. Jackson, Monroe, Louisiana, writes: Through dashing waves of trouble and hard struggles the Lord has blessed us and enabled us to frame the church in Monroe, and ask the pastor and members please remember the church at Monroe, that we may secure our property in this city, and also give us your prayers. I have only been here one month and a half. Pray for us that we may have a grand success.

Rev. H. Chapman, Boiling Springs, Ark., writes: Weaver's Chapel is looking up. I was appointed here last conference and found the work prospering. I came here depending upon the Lord. He has blessed me with success. I have enlarged the work. Brought to six churches. I built one church known as "New Chapel." 30 x 40; organized a mission with 17 members. We have raised since last quarterly conference, $65. We hope to do better in the future. Pray for us.

J. H. Haller, Butt City, Montana, writes: Since the advent of the Rev. W. H. Willett in our midst a new Christian feeling has been engendered. The darkness that has been hovering over us so long has become scattered. The true Christian light has found its way into many families where it has not been heretofore. The Rev. W. H. Willett, by his energy, has drawn many willing workers to the cause as a shepherd doth his sheep to the fold. He found us without church or societies; he got us a church and parsonage and we are now proceeding to pay for them.

Rev. B F. Watson, Topeka, Kan. writes: After a jaunt of nearly three years on the presiding elder "mule," I am once more called as the pastor of a church. The North Kansas Conference closed a very pleasant and profitable session at Emporia, Kan., Oct. 6th. Bishop Brown was in excellent health, looking, to all appearance, that he might be here many years to come. Dr. Embry, the book peddler, was on hand and preached an excellent sermon at the Opera House on Sunday. Roll call found 57 names, traveling and local members of the conference. The General Conference delegates are Revs. John W. Wilkerson, J. W. Wilson and B. F. Watson; C. H. Williams and Henry Rodgers, lay. The ministers received their appointments cheerfully and with apparent satisfaction. Rev. J. M. Wilkerson has my old "mule" presiding elder district and he is learning to ride like a John. Rev. J. W. Wilson, presiding elder, has his Broncho well trained now. Presiding elders are a success in South Kansas. Keep the system.

E. F. Johnston, of St. Paul's, N. Y., writes: The Centennial of the A. M. E. Church was celebrated with much fervor at St. Paul's A. M. E. Church, 158th Street, New York City, the services beginning on Sunday, Nov. 13th. The morning sermon was preached by Rev. James R. Williams, assistant minister of the church. In the afternoon there was a sermon and address to the Sunday school by Rev. H. A. Monroe, pastor of St. Mark's M. E. Church. In the evening the sermon was preached by the pastor in charge, Rev. W. C. Cole, B.D. Subject, "The grain of mustard seed." The celebration was continued on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, 15th and 16th, with a harvest home and ladies' industrial exhibition. This was conducted by the lady friends and members of the church There was an interesting literary and musical programme each evening, consisting of addresses, essays, recitations, readings, duets and choruses. Proceeds, $38.14, for the purchase of fuel for the winter. St. Paul's Church is doing a very good work in the upper part of the city under the able pastorate of Rev. W. C. Cole. Since the advent of this reverend gentleman the church has increased rapidly in attendance.

Rev. J. B. Tyner, Smithville, Va., writes: Glad we was to say that Smithville is no longer a blank. Two years and six months ago Rev. Jno. E. Cook, presiding elder, took me from the Hampton Institute, where I had studied in the ministers' class since my graduation in the normal department in 1884, and sent me here. On my arrival here we found that the circuit had for some years been without a preacher, and that the members were few, poor and discouraged. At this, the best point on the circuit, the church consisted of 32 members, who had as their only place of worship an old remodeled blacksmith shop, 30x20. I knew this was historic, but as I saw that it was nearly in ruins and that the Lord had given the people a mind to "rise and build," we, in September, '86, took down the old house and commenced in one of the best places, only a few rods from the court house, to build a new church 32x40 and 18 to the pitch. Our building is now floored, hulled in, windowed and doored. In all this work we have had the advice and assistance of our presiding elder. But the other things necessary to the completion of this house are the ceiling, the stoves, seats, etc., all of which will cost about $150. By some this may be considered a small amount, but for this place and people it is quite large. Who will help us? Our very needy and willing people would thank you for the smallest amount.

Rev. T. Reeves, Oskaloosa, Iowa, writes: Oskaloosa in one of those thrifty business towns of Central Iowa, with a population of eight thousand souls, a thriving people; between three and four thousand of the above are colored. Mahaska county, of which Oskaloosa is the county seat, is famous for its rich coal fields. There are five active mines in this country getting out large quantities of valuable mineral annually, and the furthest one of them is not over five miles from Oskaloosa, and it is astonishing to see what a source of inspiration this mining enterprise is to all branches of business where it is carried on. Four of these mines work colored men principally. These mines alone give employment to nearly a thousand men. This plurality gives us the balancing power at the ballot box in the county. We have three railroads centering here, running close connection with nearly all of the leading railroads of this commonwealth of ours; so the representatives of the several departments of the Church will have a pleasant ride over solid steel rails in our elegant parlor cars to the Iowa Annual Conference which is to convene in Oskaloosa next August, 1888. The colored people of Oskaloosa, as a class, is an industrious, thrifty people, nearly all of them having bought homes of their own. We have a grand public school system here in Iowa, that is not governed by prejudice and caste like that of the State of Georgia, but the doors of educational institutions are thrown wide open to all who want an education; and, sir, I am proud to say that our colored youths are availing themselves of these great school advantages. There can be found colored children in quite a number in the schools in the State, and they are getting on nicely with the white children. They all study the same kind of books, play the same games, eat the same kind of food and no lives lost. We have four school houses and three colleges in Oskaloosa, one a business college. We have a young African Methodist to graduate in this business college this fall in the stenography and short-hand course. We are proud of him; he is ours; let no man despise him, but conduct him forth in peace. Our church in Oskaloosa was built this year. It is 30x50, frame, situated one block north and two blocks west of the public square, with a small debt, which is steadily dwindling down. Doctor, after two years' labor with the people of Oskaloosa, I have concluded that the A. M. E. Church is best adapted to such people as these. The people of Oskaloosa are people of sound mind, grand thoughts and high conceptions. They are disposed to have the best and biggest of everything here that is good. Some of them said in their Centennial orations last month that the A. M. E. Church of which they were members was the biggest negro Church in the world, and I said Amen. I believe, Mr. Editor, that it is with the will of the Infinite God that all good moral and religious enterprises should ever be perpetuated. I feel that the principles which characterized the origin of the A. M. E. Church were right and that shall ever live here. Articles of religion is a category of pure Protestant dogmas which is well founded upon Scripture, and this shall ever stand. Heaven and earth may pass away before one jot or one tittle of my word shall pass, says Christ. We have no time to fight between ourselves when the enemy is so stubborn and strong. The flag that Richard Allen hoisted one hundred years ago was the right kind of a one. Now let Africa's brave sons carry this grand old flag of African Methodism to the front until she floats victoriously over every fort and field.

HOW SOME LIVES HAVE BEEN EXTENDED.

In a physician's office in Philadelphia are filed numerous letters with expressions like these:

"My mother and self have been greatly benefited by the use of your Compound Oxygen. It has undoubtedly prolonged and prolonged her life these two years past." "I have improved in health using your compound Oxygen. I can ride without much fatigue. I am in my eighth year, I suppose that I cannot expect to be entirely relieved." "It has almost made a new man of me at nearly three-score and ten." "I will be eighty-two years old the fifth day of next November. The drops has left me, and my legs are all right. Every one that sees me says, 'How well you look!' I tell them Compound Oxygen saved my life and cured me." For full explanation of how such marvels are possible, write for brochure, which they send free, to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CENTENNIAL OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

LAST CALL

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do so at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing the same.

Brethran will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairman of General Committee.
B. W. ARNETT, Sec'y.

OUR REPORT DELAYED.

Our Centennial list will be published with the first issue in January. Reports have come in very slowly, owing to the conferences held in November causing much delay. J. C. EMBRY, Manager.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

We begin once more to send out subscription bills. We urgently request all who are in arrears for the paper to pay us immediately.

Please remember that subscription to the paper is payable in advance. We shall be compelled to stop sending to all who owe us until payment is made.

Respectfully Yours,
J. C. EMBRY, Manager.

The January Quiver keeps well up to the promise of the December number. It is full of good things from the first page to the last No wonder The Quiver has taken such a vital hold of its American audience, an audience, too, that increases with every month. The old-fashioned idea that a religious magazine must of necessity be dull is disproved by The Quiver. That periodical has not a page in it that its readers would call dull. The current number opens with a paper called the "Salt of the Earth," by Edward Garrett, which is followed by the serial "Wanted, a Governess;" then Professor Blackie interprets "The Voice of Wluter in Christian Ears;" the Dean of Canterbury's second paper showing "How God Preserved the New Testament," is given, and is followed by a pretty story, "A Boat to Heaven." "Growth Under Pressure," is the title of an encouraging paper by the Rev. Hugh Macmillan Cassell & Co, New York, 15 cents a number, $1.50 a year in advance.

HAPPY NEW YEAR comes to all who have made themselves happy in the old year and to all who will be happy throughout the year now new.

THE COINCIDENCE is a little odd that in this number we publish a paper from Rev. C. S. Smith in which the name of Mr. T. T. Fortune is mentioned, and one from Mr. Fortune, replying to Dr. Smith's article of some weeks ago. Both are able and well written articles.

IN THE McEnery–Nicholl fight, in Louisiana, it is interesting to observe expositions and acknowledgements made relative to the political methods by which Louisiana politics has been managed. NOTICE TO NORTH MISSISSIPPI AND SOUTH CAROLINA CONFERENCES.—Bishop T. M. D. Ward authorizes us to publish the meeting of the North Mississippi Conference for January 5th, instead of 3d, and the meeting of the South Carolina Conference for February 8th instead of 1st. The notice came too late for correction in the conference calendar.

WHAT WILL you do next year? Ah, do you not know? What have you done this year? More than you can recollect in one moment. What will you not do next year? Your will is supreme. What wrong tendency did you overcome last year? You were your own keeper. No man sinned for you; no man is responsible for your sin. These questions and responses may be of service to us all.

WE LEARN that the two Alabama conferences really did what it has been said the Florida Conference might do—elected some different delegates from those elected last year. The law is the best guide of action in all matters relative to delegates to the General Conference, and an annual conference has no more warrant for electing delegates one year before the time stipulated by law than it has for electing them three years before the time fixed by General Conference.

THE FACT that has been so extensively promised by newspapers, actually exists—Mr. J. G. Bergen, a well-to-do white gentleman, has married Miss Flora E. Batson, one of the most attractive colored singers of our times. Comment is unnecessary. Mrs. Bergen entertained large audiences at Zion Wesley Church, this city, December 13, 14 and 15. At the close of the last concert a committee of ladies placed upon her head a golden crown, nicely set, and proclaimed her the "Queen of Song."

DR. T. G. STEWARD is about to give the world his fifth book, entitled "The End of the World." We anticipate in it as deep, clear and scientific treatment as possible to the average mind of a subject concerning which all men are equal in positive knowledge. It is a subject that has suffered from confusion of biblical terms, theological speculations and material philosophy, yet which is postulated in the phenomena of nature, promised by prophets and preached by apostles. The new book will be in nine chapters.

WE DESIRE that our readers shall have during the next year the thoughts of the best and ablest writers in the Church. It has been our desire that the paper would be increased in size. In this we are still disappointed. The business of the house does not warrant any increase in size, but we trust to increase the attractiveness of the paper. It will afford us pleasure to hear from all our schools frequently. We trust also that our correspondents will glean the most entertaining facts of their communities for our pages—facts that are likely to interest the general reader.

REV. ROBERT BOSTON and Mrs Melsenah Boston, of 1207 Federal street, Philadelphia, celebrated in a quiet way their golden wedding, December 20th. Though both are somewhat feeble in health, they are active. Brother Boston is a local deacon in Allen Chapel, this city. He serves some of our city patrons with the CHRISTIAN RECORDER weekly, which requires him to walk from six to seven miles. His is seventy-three years of age and Mrs. Boston is seventy-two. They have buried seven of their eleven children. The remaining four are married and living in this city. The aged couple have thirteen grandchildren. The world may feel itself indebted to all couples who have sacredly and honorably maintained the sacred married life so long.

THE GLITTER of gold gets its work in upon us from many standpoints. There is not nearly the efficient service given in State or Church that would pertain were it not for the attraction of honors. The domination held by money over conscience is modifying the very character of the nations. Money is king. Duty is measured by it largely, legislation is regulated by it too extensively, jurists and advocates, writers and lecturers, statesmen and ministers all bow together at the shrine of gold. Domestic and civil life, morals and religion all pay their tribute to this uncompromising despot. But, after what one needs to perform the duties of life, is acquired what is all the balance worth? One ray of light from the sun of righteousness, one moment's realization of the possession of the pearl of great price, one moment's consciousness of redemption is worth more than all gold.

SOME WEEKS ago the Detroit Plaindealer passed criticisms upon Wilberforce University that called forth a lengthy and able response from the faculty of that institution. It is worthy of note that while the Plaindealer's opinion was being read, Mr. W. Gant, who is in such a relationship to Wilberforce as to observe its worth, thus did not act unadvisedly, was arranging to turn his earthly effects over to the University when he shall leave this world. It may be also noted that Chief Justice Chase, who gave Wilberforce $10,000, did so after visiting the school, observing its movements and passing judgment upon it, he being one of its trustees, and that few men were more familiar with it than Bishop Shorter, Mrs. Shorter and Bishop Campbell, each of whom gave it one thousand dollars. We doubt whether the same amount of money expended in any other section in behalf of advancing colored persons could be more effectual than at Wilberforce.

THE WEDDING of Miss Victoria Turner, daughter of Bishop Turner, to Mr. King, on 14th inst., is said to have been a brilliant affair. We borrowed our neighbor's Southern Recorder which contained a lengthy notice of the wedding as well as the Bishop's lamentations(?) Bishop Turner can afford to call the loss of Miss Victoria one of his troubles, and Mr. C. King can well afford to thank the Bishop for wishing him a hundred years' continuation of life; for this country has no more tender hearted woman than Mrs. Victoria Turner King. When a student at Wilberforce University some years ago she had an opportunity to evince that kindness that comes from the heart's natural tendency, when there is no reward but the joy of doing and no inspiration but the sympathy that comes from the universal similarity of the human race. A school-mate of only a few weeks' acquaintance was stricken with sickness; there was no one else to stay by her bed-side and minister to her wants so long and faithfully as Victoria Turner, who watched her to the end of life. Mr. and Mrs. King have our kindest regards.

REV. J. AUGUSTUS COLE, the very scholarly African, who has spent several months in America, departed on the Steamer Clyde, for England, Wednesday, 28th inst. Professor Cole is of the Wesleyan Church. He has collected while in this country over $10,000 for the establishment of an industrial school in Central Africa. His father is a Mohammedan priest, but Professor Cole does not seem in anyway inclined to recede into the religion of his birth, since he has found a more excellent way. In this respect he constitutes a significant contrast with Dr. Blyden, who has degraded his faith from the religion in which he was born and which he has preached, to the narrower Mohammedan religion. Both are eminently scholarly; both are intensely negro; which is right? From the Christian side every one says Cole, from the opposite side everyone says Blyden. A middle class says both, if true to their conscience. But this class only evades the question and closes the discussion. Christianity is the religion for man. It must not be charged with the weaknesses of men, nor must Mohammedanism be praised by black men for the single virtue that its disciples have been fair in their association with the Africans.

IT IS OUR impression that the men of our race variety who have arranged to distribute the largest amount of wealth in the interest of colored men's institutions have thus far been African Methodists. There are reasons for this and the ground for those reasons must be maintained. African Methodism has led the race variety in educational energy and has not been a whit behind the foremost in inspiring men with the necessity of husbanding, wisely using and combining for high purposes, the moneys acquired by earnest, honest living.

WE could publish every week the name of a great donor among ne to some philanthropic, benevolent or educational enterprise, if we could but get their hearts set in that direction; they are in our communion. It may be well to state that men who are contemplating doing an act of this kind sometime, can not make their arrangements too early. In most States a will must be drawn at least twelve months before the testator's death, to give unqualified legal force to any benevolent gift. Several of our institutions are needing endowment funds. Nearly everyone of them is known to some one who can leave it from $100 to $25,000 at death. It would be well for such persons to remember this and act promptly. Our ministers should urge this matter often.

THE FUNERAL services of Mrs. Rachel Annis Ward, at Bristol, Pa., 22d inst., were under the personal direction of Rev. J. W. Beckett. The chief eulogy was delivered by Dr. B. T. Tanner. Revs. L. C. Chambers, Coppin, Shaffer, J. W. Cooper, Staneberry, Morgan and Lee assisted in the service. The pall-bearers were Revs. Yeoonm, W. S. Thompson and Matthews, of the New Jersey Conference, and Buckner, J. S. Thompson and Davis, of the Philadelphia Conference. All the Philadelphia A. M. E. pastors were present, excepting Dr. Felts, who, being sick, was represented by Sister Felts. The sermon by Dr. Tanner was from the text, "Though weeping may endure for a night, joy cometh in the morning." It was nicely adapted to the occasion. The melody of the sad though florid tribute which the old poet Bishop paid, in writing, to the memory of his departed wife still rings in our ears. The picture is as of an old man scattering choicest flowers upon the bed of his beloved; again, in his anguish, it is a picture of an old man standing over the final bed of his beloved, weeping, refusing to be comforted, and yet again, the scene changes and the spirit of immortality, brought to light through the preaching of the gospel, illuminates the old man's face, and, as it were, the young woman's brow; death is swallowed up in victory and the living is believing to never die. May the benedictions of heaven come upon the smitten home and the stricken man.

THE REV. A. J. CHAMBERS demands that the readers of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER shall know what was published in the Southern Recorder from his pen, and declared by us an "untruthful tirade."

We very cheerfully yield to his demand. I. Though he says: "The [CHRISTIAN] RECORDER is not now, nor never shall he in this generation, the trumpet voice of an junta in the A. M. E. Church, though there are indubitable signs of a tendency in that direction," elsewhere he says, by implication, that the CHRISTIAN RECORDER is used as the trumpet voice of some particular junta. The implication is entirely false in direction. All articles written with respect to rules that must be observed in the office of all Church journals, are treated with uniform respect and courtesy in our office, coming from whom they may. We say this, making no pretentions to the possession of infallible judgment, granting that we sometimes make concession to the judgment of our brethren and that articles here are subject to the laws of fortuity attending all human affairs.

II. After stating in interrogative figure, that if the same things had been written to the CHRISTIAN RECORDER that were published in the Southern Recorder, speaking favorably of Dr. Derrick, they would not have been published—to which we say nothing, because we did not see what was published in this line by the Southern Recorder—Brother Chambers adds, "or what others have said of you [Dr. Steward] in the [CHRISTIAN] RECORDER, it would not have been published." This we deny. We have criticised and rejected more articles from Dr. Steward than from Dr. Derrick. We have certainly said about as much in commendation of Dr. Derrick's work as of Dr. Steward's and published about as many articles having him for their especial thought. Very little has been presented to us for publication in admiration or honor of Dr. Steward.

III. Brother Chambers declares Dr. Steward "an editorial pet of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER." We acknowledge to having pets. About this time of year the fact is pressed upon us so heavily and directly, that it is useless to attempt to hide or deny it. We have just six of them, but feel grateful that none of them is so expensive as Dr. Steward would be. Beyond these six we have no pet; not even one of these has a "pull with the editor of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER," as Brother Chambers implies some may have. In our official capacity we do not know nor serve any person with favoritism. In our office our judgment regulates all official affairs, under the law and for the people. The Church, its laws, humanity and the blessed and infinite God are remembered as having a just claim upon all our actions. We are known that for every act we are judged by men, and that in addition to this we are also judged of God for motives intents of the heart and thoughts.

Personal.

—Rev. M. F. Slaby is progressing nicely at Media, Pa.

—Dr. C. C. Felts has been on the sick list for two weeks, but is improving.

—It is reported that Rev. W. H. Bryant, of Chester, Pa., has been very sick recently.

—Miss Mary A. Crawford, the promising young elocutionist of Philadelphia, is said to have entertained the audience at Zion Wesley Church at its late concerts.

—The able Centennial address delivered by T. McCants Stewart, Esq., in Bethel Church, Philadelphia, November 25th, will appear in these columns next week.

—Rev. G. M. Witten has recently performed the marriage ceremony for Mr. Greenberry Sharp and Miss Sarah Harris; Mr. Edward Matthews and Miss Lydia Johnson, and Mr. T. H. Pincket and Miss Sallie Cade.

—We regret having been absent from the office when Dr. J. C. Price, president of Livingstone College, called a few days ago: Dr. Price is the one negro upon whom the mantle of the Hon. Frederick Douglass is likely to fall in the future.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

BY BISHOP A. W. WAYMAN.

MR. EDITOR:—When I wrote last I had just closed the Texas Conference and was making my way to Northeast Texas Conference. The ride from Houston to Dallas is one where I always get plenty of smoke, for every man, woman and boy who wants to smoke comes into the car where I have to ride to do their smoking, and I have to endure hardness as a good traveler, and endure it. On Wednesday morning I reached Dallas, where I met plenty of muddy streets. On reaching the parsonage of Brother Conner, which gave general satisfaction. A trusting, so great was the kindness of himself and wife I was soon made to forget the smoke and mud I had passed through to reach there. Brother Armstrong has completed a fine church in the city of Dallas, which is an honor to him and the membership that he represents. At the roll-call a majority of the members were present. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. Monroe Conner, which gave general satisfaction. The conference had a visit from Rev. W. A. J. Phillips, from the Arkansas Conference, who came to represent Drs. Townsend and Smith, and from the kindness extended to him caused him to fall in love with Texas work. As there are two new churches in Dallas, the conference held sessions in each one, which gave great satisfaction. Saturday was the day for the election of delegates to the General Conference. Every candidate was on hand at the roll-call and deposited his ballot, and when the counting commenced, it was ascertained that J. H. Armstrong was going to lead the ticket, and he came out ahead of all; H. L. Trapp followed next and just saved his distance. As there were three to be elected there had to be another ballot, when Monroe Conner was declared the fortunate man. A fine class of young men were received on trial, who bid fair to be very useful to the Church. Tuesday afternoon the conference closed up its business, the appointments were made and there was a rush for the train. I engaged a gentleman's buggy and horse to take me, and as his seat one was engaged he had to get another one, which proved to be very poor, and as the streets were very muddy the poor little fellow gave out and I had to walk to the depot. The reason why I got a buggy I thought I would get to the train before those preachers who received their disappointments got after me, but I was mistaken, for they were there crying out that they could not go to this place nor the other. One said he stumped a certain part of the State in favor of prohibition and therefore the citizens were down on him and he could not go there; and another could not go to his place because it was not such an appointment as a man of his abilities demands; another one wanted a transfer to another conference. It was a great relief when the train came and we were all on board. I stopped off on the way all night and then started next day for the seat of the West Texas Conference. On the train I met Rev. W. A. J. Phillips, who was on his way to the same conference, and he was sporting a fine gold headed cane, and while he was reading a paper, some white man very politely took it, and when he came to change cars his gold-headed cane was gone and another brother on the train told Brother Phillips that he saw a white man take it. And while he, Brother Phillips, was standing on the platform the man came along with his cane, then Brother Phillips said, "Let me see that cane;" and he handed it to him. Phillips said, "This is my cane," and the man gave it up. The only reason why he gave up so readily I think was that he thought Phillips was a white man. On reaching Bastrop, I found a plenty of mud, but a great many kind people waiting to receive the conference.

Bastrop, TEXAS.

"SAY YES."

BY REV. J. A. DAVIS.

MR. EDITOR:—While in conference session once the Bishop sent for me to come to his room, for what I knew not; and on starting in obedience to his request, the brother who brought the message said to me, "Say yes." Not knowing the import of the affirmative, I refused to consent. On reaching the Bishop's room I was offered a position I did not want, notwithstanding it was one of much honor. Had I consented to the request of that brother I would have accepted the position, which, possibly, I could not have filled successfully, therefore, before accepting a place so responsible as that of the pastorate a careful consideration is necessary, both by him that is seeking and his advocates. When God offered it to Moses, he sought to shun it, feeling incompetent; neither did Jeremiah feel competent, so he shrank from the consequences, claiming to be too young. These men surely saw there was office seekers do not see in these days. There are many grievous hindrances to meet. Just think how many have lost their moral and religious influence at this point, some of whom are numbered like Moses in the position, but the wheels of time are coming with great speed to bring the true record of their character. The surroundings are fearful. By their valient hands many have been dragged from the position; as Saul, the first king of Israel, and Judas, one of the disciples. And many of them, like Elijah, who sought death rather than meet the consequences, and Moses asked that his "name be blotted out of the book" of God, while Job "cursed the day wherein he was born." O what perils beset him who occupies that responsible position! Sleepless foes with listless zeal are more vigilant than his friends, and seek the destruction of his moral and religious influence. The poet says:

"My soul, be on thy guard,
Ten thousand foes arise."

And their only terms of peace are that you surrender all your moral and religious claims to them, and then "covenant with death and agree with hell" never to throw off the chains of sin and vice. He that intends to "obey God rather than men," dreads the position after carefully considering the surroundings.

The minister's responsibility is in proportion to the value of the things placed in his charge or under his control. Who can value that soul-reclaiming element which is sent into the world through the gospel? He that has it in charge stands at the head of affairs on which hangs the eternal destiny of the future. What fearful cruelties now infest the whole world on account of one mistake of Adam, if we should so call it; and while no one person has so great responsibility as he did, yet each moral agent is accountable to God in proportion to the influence wielded by each over the moral world, etc. The extent of one's influence is generally judged by the knowledge the world has of him, and surely he that occupies the position herein referred to must be very great and the responsibility not less so. Adam did not escape punishment by laying the fault upon Eve, neither did she by accusing the serpent, but each suffered at the hands of God according to the part they took in that terrible tragedy. So it will be with the man who occupies that responsible place; he may be influenced to do injustice to others in his administration; but there comes a day when he must answer to God for it. Why this high position is sought with so much zeal, is because the great responsibility is buried beneath the rubbish of worldly honor, fame and personal gain. When the liabilities are carefully considered the best of men will refrain from it. Just think of the contemptible great infamy with a satanic zeal, coming from every direction, seeking to capture, either by force or delusion, all who stand at the head of the moral and religious affairs. Therefore a careful consideration is necessary before consenting, etc.

Having carefully considered the above points, the stubborn question is, will you accept or not? Notwithstanding God has pronounced his all-sufficient aid, he desires further evidence that he shall not fail ere he accepts that great responsibility. See him imitating Moses, offering first one excuse then other, saying, "they will not believe me;" am not eloquent," etc., or Jeremiah claiming to be too young for that occupation, etc. There around him are seen scattered, as it were, the bleached bones of many who once held that position, from Abel to the present day. The flames through which many passed are still fresh in the mind. Accept it if you wish, but consider well before you say "yes;" lest you accept more than you can successfully manage. Know that God has especially called you to that position, then wrap yourself in the garments of righteousness, arm yourself with that never failing weapon—truth—then enter it under the guidance of the Holy Spirit and do your whole duty, regardless of friends or favors.

THOUGHTS FROM ATCHISON TO CALIFORNIA.

BY REV. R. SEYMORE.

I left my home in Atchison on the 15th of November and started for the "Golden Gete City," the metropolis of the great West, and, as we were greatly delayed on the way with break downs and dead engines, and so forth, and having, as you know, some of the grandest works of nature to gaze upon now and then, I was completely swallowed up at the wonderful works of God. There were several colored families on the train going to Southern California, I could hear them occasionally, in speaking of their former homes in Kentucky, turning over the preacher. These poor fellows are becoming the scape-goat to bear off the sins of every denomination. Thus, while contemplating nature, I was led to reflect upon human nature also, and having a copy of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, I looked over Dr. Johnson's article on "More Bishops," and another article on "The Union of the A. M. E. and Zion Churches," and having a little time to meditate on these subjects, I finally came to the conclusion to ask you to permit me, through your valuable organ, to give a few thoughts on these several topics to your many readers.

First, we will speak a few words of nature, as she is pure and contains the truth of all things real. She is like her God, unchangeable; she is always positive. Here is the fountain of truth, for even our theology, the best of it, has been deified by the touch of man. Nature alone must hand to us the real truth of God.

Now, a word on human nature. We find, when examining it, that there is something that is envious, deceptive and jealous—a principle that seeks to pull down and destroy everything that is above and beyond it. I have wondered if it was so in nature, if the mud-puddle, with all its poison and malaria, was jealous of the beautiful lakes, or the dung-hill of the mountain, and was constantly trying with the sweat and stink of its nastiness to pull down and destroy the majestic giant.

Now, a word on the union. This I am opposed to. First, because it is not man's work to unite these two great moral bodies of Christian worth and power. They are God's creatures, had their origin according to the wisdom and plan of God. An infinite Creator presided at their birth and for his glory were they born; and were not born simultaneously, but were started seriatim. Then, O finite man, hands off. Do not meddle with so great a work. Nothing but an all-wise God can unite and harmoniously bring together these two great bodies. Now, there is, in a ohio foot of air, a few drops of water, but you cannot press the air enough to produce the water visible to the eye; no difference what pressure you may bring to bear the air will remain the same, and yet contain the water. But let a small portion of electricity pass through it and it will burn up all the extraneous matter and will produce a few drops of water. So the Lord will, in his time, send the Holy Ghost flying through these two churches and burn up all of our creeds, dogmas, sectarian and denominational ideas, and melt these two great churches into one. This is what I want to see—these two great churches melted into one, not ecclesiastically chained together. There are many other objections, but I will not intrude on your valuable space to notice them now.

A word on more Bishops. Dr. Johnson, with many others, has said a great deal concerning the qualifications and classifications of the men that should be elected to the office of Bishop and clothed with the sacerdotal robe, and compose the hierarchy of the greatest colored church on God's footstool; but how sad, when Dr. Johnson has scraped the universalities and theological schools of the entire Church and found men with their sheep-skins, from the giant frame of Saul to the diminutive stature of David, and with the wisdom of a Solomon, sitting in kingly splendor and wielding a sceptre over a mighty people and nation; even to John sitting on the seashore mending his nets—when the mighty conquerors and antiquarians have searched the universe for saints to fill this sacerdotal office, alas! we have to make Bishops out of men. And being made Bishops, their prejudice is not diminished, neither does their intellect increase; but a lamb when a subject has been sometimes a lion when a ruler. Nil sine numine—Nothing without divine aid.

THREE MINUTES' TALK.

PAPER NO II.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

During the late rebellion and soon after its close the negro's future was a regular topic of discussion. He was regarded by some as being a mere pigmy and incapable of self government, and would soon sink into nonentity. Others argued that he could not be educated; that it would be a useless expenditure of time and money to attempt to educate him, and that all efforts would fail. These predictions were not true; twenty-three years of freedom have demonstrated the negro's ability to educate and to make a citizen. We have long since shown to the world that we are capable of doing anything which can be accomplished by any American citizen. But to the point.

Industrial education. The establishment of schools of industry among our people seems to receive but little attention. We praise God for our colleges, universities, seminaries, normal and high schools, many of which are under the supervision of the A. M. E. Church, and all are doing their portion of the work, but one can not fill the bill nor meet the demands of the race and age. We need within the bounds of our great connection one or more industrial schools, conducted upon a large scale, and, to say the least of it, there ought to be one located in each episcopal district; but where this plan cannot be properly executed it would be wise to hitch on an industrial department to each of our already established institutes. It would be well for the General Conference to look into this matter in connection with our regular educational work. An intellectual education is all right, but the hands must learn to work; the hands, as well as the brains, must be educated. Our boys must know how to build houses, make wagons, shoe horses, lay brick, run an engine and become master workmen in all trades. Our girls—African Methodist girls—must be taught all kinds of artistic work; they must learn all kinds of household work, such as sewing, knitting, darning, patching, cooking, washing and ironing. All of this can only be accomplished through schools of industry with able teachers in command. Industrial training is one of the safeguards of the Church and race. The African Methodist Episcopal Church will please catch the spirit.

WHAT WAS DONE AT THE MACON CONFERENCE.

BY REV. W. J. GAINES.

MR. EDITOR:—I have just returned from Talbottom, Ga., where I have been attending the Macon (Ga.) Conference, which convened November 30. We expected Bishop John M. Brown to hold this conference, but he was detained at home by illness. Many of the older brethren remember him well. He came to us as Bishop in 1868, and remained with us until the General Conference met in Nashville in 1872. Those were dark days, and I may say dark years, but Bishop Brown stood at the helm in all of its darkness and gave direction to the then Georgia Conference. Since that time we have made the North Georgia and Macon Georgia Conferences. These two conferences came from the seed planted by Bishop John M. Brown and others. You can imagine how disappointed we were at Bishop Brown's not meeting the conference. It was suggested, as the Bishop was not present, that Rev. B. A. Hall should be elected president pro tem. He organized the conference with dignity. In fact, he made a very excellent presiding officer. About the time the conference had finished its organization we received a telegram from Bishop B. R. Disney, who arrived at the seat of the conference that night. The next morning the Bishop was introduced to the conference by Rev. B. A. Hall and received by the brethren with kindness. Georgia African Methodism is loyal to our fathers' church and will stand by the actions of the General Conference until they are lawfully revoked. Bishop Disney is a gentleman of great kindness of heart, and seemed almost tender in his actions toward them. He has made many friends in Georgia. The brethren were very sorry Bishop Brown was not able to be with them. They expected him and wanted to see him, but as he did not come, Bishop Disney held the conference and gave out the appointments and I think he gave general satisfaction. Bishop H. M. Turner spent three pleasant days with the conference. Drs. B. T. Tanner, B. W. Arnett and Wm D. Johnson were present and each represented his department well as general officer. The Georgia ministers are always glad to see Drs. Arnett and Tanner. I somehow expected Drs. B. F. Lee and J. M. Townsend to be present, but they did not put in their appearance.

The reports from the various pastoral charges were good, both spiritually and temporally. The Macon Conference is called the "Banner Conference of Georgia," and in many things I must acknowledge that it is. Perfect harmony prevails in this conference. The election of delegates to the General Conference was the most remarkable election I ever saw. It was spirited, free and without any bitterness. The whole ticket was elected on first ballot in the following order: Revs. E. P. Holmes, Wright Newman, Louis H Smith, Lawrence Thomas, Richard A. Hall, Andrew W. Lowe and Wesley C. Gaines. This is a splendid delegation. The lay delegates are as follows: Mr. John M. Brooks, of Macon, Ga., and Mr. Thomas S. Price, of Columbus, Ga. They are both representative men. The white people at Talbottom showed the greatest kindness toward the conference. They really helped to entertain the preachers by giving liberal donations in provisions and money. They attended our sessions regularly every day and night.

On Sunday, at the A. M. E. Church, Bishop Disney, Drs. B. W. Arnett and W. D. Johnson filled the pulpit. At the opera house Drs. B. T. Tanner, W. J. Gaines and J. A. Davis stood on the rostrum. This congregation was about one-half of the best white citizens of Talbottom. They wept, laughed and gave hearty amens. A man who never lived in the South cannot understand the great change that has taken place in the last twenty-two years. A man who has not been in the South in that respect. Most all of the readers of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER know Dr. Tanner's feelings upon this subject; but I saw the little giant's handkerchief bathed in tears when he saw his brother in white and his snow-white sister bowing at the altar and weeping at the gospel of Christ preached by their former slaves. A Christian white lady sent her husband to Dr. Tanner to pay for the Church Review for an itinerant preacher who was not able to pay for it himself. What great things God hath wrought for us through the A. M. E. Church! Brethren, we owe the Church all of our time, wealth and influence. How surprised I am when I hear men say that the Church owes me this and that. Thank God, I do not feel that the Church owes me anything, but I owe the Church all. God bless the African M. E. Church for what she has done for the negro of the South. She has made him develop himself as no other church could do in manhood.

I represented Morris Brown College, as usual, before this conference, and the brethren responded with $427 50 cash and pledged themselves to foster the May day special collection for Morris Brown College. Drs. Arnett and Tanner left my home last night for the Columbia Conference. I shall leave Saturday for Columbia and then to Savannah to meet the Georgia Conference. I will write again after this conference adjourns.

THE TEXAS ANNUAL CONFERENCE

BY REV. W. D. F PYLE.

The twenty-first session of the Texas Annual Conference convened in Beaumont, Jefferson county, Texas, on Wednesday morning, November 30th ult., Bishop A. W. Wayman, D.D., presiding. After singing opening hymn and prayer offered, the former secretary, Rev. J. W. Randolph, being absent, roll was called by Rev. J. E. Edwards, of Galveston, who afterwards was elected Secretary, and Rev. E. E. Makiell, assistant; W. E. Smith, marshall, and W. D. F. Pyle reporter for the CHRISTIAN RECORDER and city papers.

The first day's session was taken up in statistical reports that came in quite meagrely on the account, possibly, of the distance many of the brethren had to come, much of the other business of the conference being expedited at intervals. Annual sermon at night by your reporter.

Second day statistical reports continued and other business. Rev. Z. W. Ward, formerly of the Oakwoods Church, was expelled from the connection. Sermons were ably handled each afternoon and at night by members of conference and visiting brethren from West Texas Conference.

The third day statistical reports were concluded, and among the other business transacted was the election of the following named elders as delegates and alternates to the General Conference: Revs. J. E. Edwards, Galveston; Russel Deale, Palestine, and J. P. Bradley, Houston. Alternates, W. D F. Pyle, Palestine, J W. Randolph, Honston, and E. E. Makiell.

Fourth day, reports from the various departments read and acted upon. Rev. W. S. Thompson, of the Presbyterian Church, was introduced, who made some stirring and cheering remarks. Rev. Mr. Whittaker, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is hereby commended for his Christian and very gentlemanly act, in that he closed his church that the concentration of Methodistic forces might be more conducive of good; while, on the other hand, the bell in the tower of the Baptist Church rang every night during conference, but to no avail, for the people flocked to hear of Christ and to see the preachers. This being the first conference ever held in that town, great excitement prevailed among colored and white people.

SUNDAY SERVICES

At the tap of the bell, 10 o'clock sharp, despite the inclement weather, the church, spacious and well furnished, was densely crowded by 10 30 to hear the ordination sermon by Bishop Wayman, who took for his text Psalm 126, 6, discoursing ably and eloquently, inasmuch that visiting white friends seemed at a standstill as to whether to retire or await the afternoon services. At two o'clock the edifice was again crowded, many remaining out of doors that could not be seated within. At this service Rev J. E Edwards discoursed quite ably and masterly from the words, "Let the mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus."

At night so many had gathered at 7 o'clock that at 7 30 it was somewhat suffocating and unpleasant by reason of the density when Rev. Henry Wilhite, presiding elder of the Austin District, West Texas Conference, spoke ably from the words, "The men of Nineveh shall rise up." All present throughout the services largely enjoyed themselves and would really have remained had all preachers a task to perform. The rival singing between Revs. Wilhite and Pyle had its lasting effect—a good time or a time that cannot soon be forgotten, should we never return there to hold another conference.

Memorial services were held on Monday at 3 o'clock as follows—Bishop Wayman conducting them feelingly—report of committee on memoirs read by Rev Pyle, followed with suitable hymn, Rev. Randolph presiding at instrument; soprano led by Rev. Edwards and the tears fast falling as he sang. The first speaker, Rev. E. E. Makiell, A.M., spoke touchingly and eulogistically of Bishop R. H. Cain, his knowledge of him as an able Bishop, and his great services to the Church he so nobly represented, as well as consoling remarks for the bereaved ones left to mourn his loss. The second speaker, Rev. J. W. Randolph, D.D., spoke of Bishop Shorter as a mark of Christian piety, a God-fearing and perfect gentleman. The third speaker, Rev. R. Deale, spoke of Rev. Henry Porter, a deacon who was summoned at his post—Calvert Station—and upon arriving in Palestine, his home, died. Rev. Porter, a deacon from Bishop Wayman, closed this tear-falling service. I cannot suppose that many eyes in the church were dry, so touching to all was this meeting.

Conference then resolved itself into missionary capacity, when the secretary, W. D. F. Pyle, called the roll, each brother paying his dollar promptly, led by the Bishop. Several amounts were appropriated to widows of deceased itinerant preachers. All reports submitted from committees and adopted; that sad, sad moment stole its way over many when the Bishop called a halt at 9 20 P. M., and after some fatherly remarks and commending the brethren to the

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousand- of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, New York.

BOOKS.

HINTS TO SELF-EDUCATED MINISTERS.

Reasons why all preachers should read Dr James Porter's Hints. 1st. Because it furnishes the best system of study for preparing preach effectively. 2nd. Because it shows how to preach with ease and grace, and yet with power and success. 3rd. Because "it exposes many serious errors in all branches of ministerial service, which have to correct them. It is a work we advise ministers to read the work carefully, because "there is still in it much that they never thought of"—because "the very hints they must need to receive are not furnished by other homiletical works," and because "it is replete with shrewd, hard, good sense;"—because "it is a book for all ministers, however educated,—because it is assured to many to be the most helpful book they ever read" —"Worth its weight in gold."

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FOR PREACHERS AND OTHER PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

Dr. Porter's Hints to them is one of the most useful books for the price, weight in gold," says the Christian Guardian. $1.25

For teaching everyone how to do good, "The Winning Worker; or, the Possibilities, Duty and Methods of Personal Effort," by the same author. Order of J. C. EMBRY, 631 Pine Street, Philadelphia. Why not make presents that will do good?

"WORTH MORE THAN ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD" to young ministers and local preachers. "Many a preacher would have been saved from failure by the early study of such a book."—Christian Guardian.

IS THE BIBLE TRUE, AND FROM GOD?

Read Dr. Porter's late book called "Christianity Demonstrated By Experience." It will settle the question forever and set your souls on fire. Buy a copy and keep it to lend to the poor society, and especially to sinners. On sale by Rev. J. C. Embry, Price, $1.50. A new supply just received.

kind care and keeping of our gracious Benefactor, the appointments were read to an orderly concourse of persons —about 900 persons. The closing hymn was announced by the Bishop, "And let our bodies part, to different climes repair," which was heartily sung by all, the benediction separating us from one of the most pleasant and agreeable conferences held in the State since my coming.

Thanks are largely due to Rev. E E. Makiell and his hospitable parishioners and friends, who did all in their power to complete the church so beautifully, and entertain the members of conference. Many thanks to them from us and blessings from God out of heaven upon them. Amen and adieu.

CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS.

The festivities which a hundred years ago were common as a part of Christmas celebrations, have even in England greatly decreased, yet it is but little more than twenty years since Washington Irving gave us in "Bracebridge Hall" some idea of the delightful festivities still enjoyed in the Old Country, but without the wild hilarity that characterized them less than a half century before he wrote. Christmas Eve was then the beginning of the revels, and was kept no, every day being a holiday, until the 6th of January, and often Candlemas Eve (Feb. 2d). In the house of the nobles, a lord of misrule," or an "abbot of unreason" was appointed, whose office was to make "the rarest pastimes to delight the beholder." His rule was undisputed, from All-hallow E'en till Candlemas Day. From the time when this "abbot of unreason" was appointed till he resigned his office, the larder was overflowing with beef, mutton, poultry, game of all kinds, with pies and puddings, nuts, sugar and honey. The oven was kept constantly heated, and the cooks were never idle. The Italians have a proverb which is very significant of the state of things during this season of misrule. "He has more business" they say, "than English ovens at Christmas." And yet, strange as it may seem, we cannot learn that the servants, who for a time were free from all restraint, abused this wild freedom, or wronged the lord of the manor, or his family. They were royally entertained at the Hall, and master and family encouraged all mirth and sports that conduced to their enjoyment. No doubt this "lord of misrule" or "abbot of unreason" was a trusted servant, who restrained his subjects from carrying the misrule into violence.

"On Christmas Eve the bells were rung;
On Christmas Eve the mass was sung:
Then opened wide the baron's hall
To vassal, tenant, serf, and all;
Power laid his rod of rule aside,
And ceremony doffed his pride.
The heir with roses in his shoes,
That night might village partner choose.
England was merry England when Old Christmas brought his sports again,
'Twas Christmas broach'd the mightiest ale;
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale.
Such Christmas gambols oft would cheer
A poor man's heart through half the year."

To deck the house with evergreens was a practice handed down from the old Druids, who taught that sylvan spirits might rest among these branches, and escape unblighted by frost till a milder season. Holly, ivy, bay, laurel, mistletoe, and rosemary were the favorite evergreens for adorning church—all but the mistletoe, for being a relic of the Druids, it must not be put up in a church—castles, and tenaments, and were kept on till Candlemas.

An old English superstition taught that "oxen were always found on their knees on Christmas Eve, as it was said that an ox and an ass were present when 'the Child was born' and fell upon their knees in a suppliant posture."

The mistletoe is still suspended in the English farm houses and kitchens all through Christmas, and the young men have the privilege of kissing the girls under it, if they can, plucking each time a berry from the bush. But when the berries are all gone, the liberty ceases. On Christmas Eve the waits go from house to house, just as the family and guests retire, and sing a Christmas carol, then pass on. This is often repeated during the twelve days of Christmas sports. Afterward they go to each of these houses, with their Christmas boxes for a small subscription. Christmas morn, before the family rose, it was customary for the small children of the family, or guests, to pass through the halls, hall at the sleeping apartments, and sing a few lines significant of the day, as

"Rejoice our Savior he was born
On Christmas day in the morning."

From this doubtless came the custom of calling "Merry Christmas" early in the morning of our time.

All were expected to rise early Christmas morning. The breakfast must not be delayed, "the hackin, or great sausage, must be boiled and ready by daybreak, or if not two young men must take the cook by the arms and run her round the market place to shame her for her laziness. The old ceremony of serving the boar's head for the first course at Christmas dinner is still adhered to in many portions of the old country." In more ancient times the peacock was the first dish, sometimes made into a pie, at one end of which the head appeared above the crust in all its plumage with the beak richly gilt, at the other end the tail full spread was suspended.

After the Christmas dinner came the markings or "mummeries," when the whole place was laid under contributions for the wardrobes, and when all were thus arrayed, it was finished by dancing.

Enough of these amusements still remain for those who witness them at the present day to be able, by a little stretching of the imagination, to gain a tolerably good idea of what Christmas festivities might have been long years ago, and also how much of the Druidical "yule-log" celebrations mingled with the Christmas sports of the Christian era.—Sel.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS FOR 1888.

It is just as well to begin the year 1888 with a good resolution as with a poor one, and there must be, even with the best readers of the Drawer, some things left undone in 1887 that they can resolve to do in 1888. There may be some people who have not made out a list of the one hundred best books for other people to read—an amusement as harmless as it is attractive, because one seems to have performed a sort of duty to the world, and is not at all committed to read the standard list himself. There may be those also who have not confessed in print what is their favorite poem, may not have confided to the world what is the best poem in the English language, and have not told what is the superlatively good "prose extract" in the English language, and what contemporary piece of writing is most likely to endure. These serious omissions of duty to the reading public, and to those who select what the public shall read, can be remedied in 1888, and the Drawer need only suggest them to conscientious minds hardened with the improvement of other minds. It is especially necessary that the one-hundred-best-book list should be authoritatively settled, so that we may throw away the other books, and have a clean deck for the twentieth century, which the Drawer must again remind its readers is swiftly approaching.

But none of these things are so important as the great modern movement of education called "What Books Have Influenced Me." The pushing of this inquiry has not yet gone so far as the investigation into the sort of diet that is best for everybody, based upon the experience of conscientious individuals who tell the world what agrees with them. Science has done much for our living, and we have even made progress in the direction of knowing what sort of food is most likely to produce not only a conscience devoid of offence, but brilliant intellectual effort. We never can estimate, for instance, the service to the world of those who have taught us to eat oat-meal (with cream), or to consume fish as a brain food, or to resort to milk, or to drink hot water three times a day. And yet we have still a good deal to learn as to "What Diet Has Influenced Me." If we could all eat the same things at the same time, we should not destroy the present inequality of brains, but we should cultivate a sympathy with our fellows, and do something toward that desirable uniformity which seems to be the object of a good deal of modern education. We desire not to be misunderstood. There are some who regard this "What Books Have Influenced Me" as simply a temporary literary "fad," or an advertisement, and they object that we get a good deal of information of this sort about people of whom we never have heard before, and about the intellectual processes of minds that never interested us in the slightest degree. This is a narrow view of the subject. When we are curious to know what the great Boston bruiser eats, it is not with the expectation that it we eat the same things we shall be able to knock out of time all the other bruisers not born in Boston, and we do not expect to write another "In Memoriam" when we have found out what Tennyson read when a boy. But as to these other people of whom we never heard, who are just like us in all probability, it is important to know that any books influenced their growing minds, for we may hope that the same diet will give us a right to the same pleasant publicity. The causes of our non-success in life will be apparent to us. It is because we have never read Robinson Crusoe, or Puss in Boots, or Pilgrim's Progress, or "Marmion," or Walt Whitman, or Cook's Voyages, or The Arabian Nights, or Sanford and Merton, and so on. To know that other minds have fed on these things, and then have had their productions accepted in the magazines is a stimulus and a hope; to know that light dawned on another mind after a perusal of Macaulay's "Lays" or of Baxter's "Call" is to show us the way to inspiration. We are searching for materials that make genius and success. Our means of determining what is necessary to the mind and to literary growth are still inadequate, and hence the value of this testimony. When we have enough of this testimony for comparison, we can determine universally exactly what to read in youth in order to become what these persons are whose minds have been influenced. We do not exaggerate the importance of this contribution to human culture. The notion has got about that these "influenced Men" are in the nature of certificates to the efficacy of certain medicines on the taker, and that they are skilfully drawn out by persons who want to use them to make money. We could prove this to be absurd if we had time enough. Equally untenable is the conjecture that they are the product of vanity. They are the product of philanthropy and of leisure. It is a spontaneous impulse on the part of the makers of the "Influenced Men" to impart to others the means of their extraordinary development in order to do good, and a person must be both at leisure and unselfish who can recall and expose the early intellectual processes of his growth, recognizing the importance of them to the world at large.—Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine for January.

Though I am imperfect in myself, there is a word tells I am complete in Christ, the redemption is completely wrought out: the righteousness that is unto all, and upon them that believe, is a robe of which it is truly said "no age can change its glorious hue." It would be our everlasting ornament in the mansions of glory.—R. Hill.

The Great Success

Of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is due to the fact that it meets the wants of the people, being economical to use and always reliable and effective. Its ingredients are the best, and their combination the result of profound study and skill. Thus, for all diseases originating in impure blood, Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands unrivaled.

"As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system," says Eugene I. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth ave., New York, "I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, Matron of the M. E. Seminary, Tilton, N. H., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful blood-purifier, it is superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla."

THE DRINK-TRAFFIC IN AFRICA AND THE PACIFIC ISLANDS.

The Board of Managers of the National Temperance Society have addressed to Congress a memorial on the subject of the drink-traffic with the native races of Africa, asking that body, in the exercise of the authority vested in it by the Constitution of the United States, "to regulate commerce with foreign nations," to adopt effective measures for discouragement and suppression of the wasteful and destructive African exportation of intoxicating liquors by American citizens. This memorial, presented to the Senate by Senator Frye, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, where it is now pending.

The Board also addressed to Congress another memorial, presented to the Senate by Hon. Wm M. Evarts, and also referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, asking that by international treaty, or otherwise, some provisions be made to prevent the traffic in intoxicating liquors with the natives of the cross Western Pacific Islands. The great devastation now being caused among the natives of Africa and of the Pacific Islands, by intoxicants, has awakened a deep interest on the part of Christian philanthropists in Great Britain, including Canon Farrar, and others well known on both sides of the Atlantic, for their relief and preservation. The appeal which the National Temperance Society now makes to appropriate preventive action by Congress ought to be widely and influentially seconded by Christian and philanthropic citizens in this country. All too long New England rum has been getting to Africa by American traders, to obstruct and destroy the work of American missionaries.—National Temperance Advocate.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE NOTICE.

To the North Louisiana Conference, A. M. E. Church:

All candidates for admission in the itinerancy in the North Louisiana Conference and all students for first, second and third years at Shreveport, La., must put in an appearance at Shreveport, La., on Tuesday morning, January 21st, 1888 for examination as the committees all will be positively instructed not to examine any one after that day. All the respective committees must also be present on same day, else others will be substituted. The conference will meet Wednesday, January 25th 1888, and reports must be ready on first day.

By order of Bishop Wayman.

"STAMMERING"

AND ALL DEFECTS OF SPEECH PERMANENTLY CURED

DEAR SIR: In reply to your letter I will be very glad to give you the testimonial asked for. I never saw worse stammering than some of those you brought to me, and the cure that was wrought upon them was very rapid and truly wonderful. I am willing to say this in writing, or tell it to anyone who may call upon me. Yours truly

Our London Suits, $9.00
Our Imported Trousers, $3.50
Our London Overcoats, $12.00

The choice is thus offered between good quality, Genuine Scotch goods and domestic imitations of the same. With prices in favor of the genuine articles.

Why should you pay $5.00 for a pair of "Imitation Scotch goods" Pants when the real articles can be had for $3.50, and cut by Thompson's Patent System. Unequaled for comfort, style, &c.

Again comes the question:
How does E. O. Thompson sell these excellent goods at such prices?

There is no tailoring business in the United States (to the best of our knowledge), that sells such large quantities of English goods as our three houses.

There is no house in London that has such favorable purchasing powers and opportunities as our own London house.

There are certain reasons we have for wishing to turn over these goods at a bare commission.

The result is—Almost before we knew it, we found ourselves underselling the entire clothing trade of the United States.

When Commodore Vanderbilt was introducing his line of boats up the Connecticut river, to make them popular, appreciated and in quick favor with the public, he carried passengers at twenty-five cents a trip, where the other lines were charging a dollar, and that is about the quickest way to introduce goods to people—to sell them about quarter of their value. People are not slow to appreciate this thing, and the merchant who has the pluck, determination and grit to do it, is he who is going to make the cerulean hit. The idea of selling all real Scotch fabrics at $9 a suit, and trousers of the same material at $3.50 is a cerulean hit. See the advertisement of E. O. FOREVER.

They sat together in the sun
And Youth and Hope stood hovering near,
Like dropping bell-notes one by one
Chimed the glad moments soft and clear,
And still amid their happy speech,
The lovers whispered each to each,
"Forever!"

Youth spread his wings of rainbow light,
"Farewell!" he whispered as he went,
They heeded not nor mourned his flight,
Wrapped in their measureless content;
And still they smiled and still was heard,
The confidently-uttered word,
"Forever!"

Hope stayed, her steadfast smile was sweet,
Until the even-time she stayed;
Then with reluctant noiseless feet
She stole into the solemn shade,
A graver shape moved gently by,
And bent, and murmured warningly
"Forever!"

And then—where sat the two, sat one!
No voice spoke back, no glance replied,
Behind her, where she rested lone
Hovered the spectre, solemn-eyed;
She met his look without a thrill
And smiling calmly, whispered still
"Forever!"

O, sweet, sweet Youth! O, fading Hope!
O, eyes, by tearful mists made blind!
O, hands which vainly reach and grope
For a familiar touch and kind,
Time pauseth for no lover's kiss;
Love for its solace has but this—
"Forever!"

THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED AT BETHEL CHURCH, PHILADELPHIA NOVEMBER 25, 1887 BY T. M'CANTS STEWART, OF THE NEW YORK BAR.

The history of Methodism is the record of the greatest religious movement since the Reformation. It challenges the attention of the speculative student and thrills the heart of the practical believer; for nowhere do they find a spiritual uprising more heroic and courageous in its origin, more wonderful and rapid in its growth, or more extensive and helpful in its influence than the protest which Wesley made and the new departure which Wesley led a century and a half ago.

Equally marked in all of its features, equally notable in its evolution and development, equally sublime in its declaration of God's Fatherhood and Man's Brotherhood, was the wonderful religious revolution which Allen led, the beginning of which, one hundred years ago, we celebrate to-night.

When a boy in my native city, Charleston, C. S., I was selected in the year 1867 to take part in celebrating the Centennial anniversary of American Methodism. It was a day of great rejoicing among us children of the Sunday school; and it was an hour of boyish pride when it was my turn to face a vast multitude whose hearts, filled with the enthusiasm born of conversion and training under the fire of Methodism, shouted hallelujah as we spoke of the remarkable origin, marvelous growth, phenomegal influence and great destiny of the Church which God established on earth through the instrumentality of his servant Wesley.

Since this historic event of my boyhood, the fleeting years have come and gone, throwing ever and anon the dark shadows of sorrow into the bright light of joy, and I stand to-night in the full measure and stature of manhood to join with you in celebrating the Centennial anniversary of a form of Methodism which is as broad as humanity and as helpful as the pure Word of God.

I frankly confess that I do not feel worthy of this great honor, and that I approached the preparation of this address with a full sense of reliance upon our Heavenly Father for thought and expression; and standing here now, the focus of these thousands of eyes, the leader for the moment of the thought of these hundreds of minds which represent in such large measure the strength of our Church, I earnestly ask your assistance in the discharge of the duty which has been imposed upon me by the unanimous vote of the committee having charge of this Centennial celebration.

We are told that when Massilon, who stands with Abelard and Bossuet preeminent among French divines, was called to pronounce the sermon at the funeral of Louis XIV., he took to the pulpit a golden urn and a locket of the deceased king's hair.

The audience was brilliant beyond description. The reigning king, the royal family, the Chambers, the ambassadors of France and the ambassadors of the civilized world filled the Cathedral in Paris. Massilon stood up amidst them with downcast eyes, holding the urn in his fingers. He did not at once begin his address. All eyes were upon him. Seconds passed into minutes, still the great pulpit orator did not speak. He stood motionless and pale as a statue. It was for a moment painful. Many believed Massilon dumb; many groaned aloud; tears were in scores of eyes. But slowly the hand of the great orator was seen raising the golden urn; his eyes were lifted and fixed upon the eldest assembly. His lips parted and his sonorous voice carried to every nook and corner of the Cathedral the mighty truth, "God alone is great, my brethren."

There is no need of such a reminder here to-night; for while we revere the memory of Richard Allen, while we rank him with Luther, Calvin, Zwingli, Wesley and the reformers of every age; while we delight in Allen's life and applaud his achievements, yet he was so modest and unselfish, so child like and unpretentious, so much like a broken and emptied vessel for the Master's use made meet"—so completely did Allen in his work and in his history hide himself behind the Cross of Christ and point to it as his boast and glory, that we who by the blessings of God have received from him a glorious heritage are in no danger of exalting the creature Allen above the Almighty Creator. We see in the founder of the African Methodist Episcopal Church just what he would have us see, "a reed shaken by the wind." We see in his great mission and work just what he would have us see, the manifestation of divine inspiration and power and the presence and guidance of our Heavenly Father.

As Luther and Wesley were Christ-like, so Allen became Christ-like in personality, into whose Master's keeping adowa the keys, he [illegible] who are gathered here to-night [illegible] historic city where the Church [illegible] bated: In lifting up the banner of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in protesting against unjust and [illegible] criminations on account of color and condition in our common Father's house where men are taught that there is no respecter of persons, but that God of one blood has made all nations to dwell upon the face of the earth; in seeking to redress to practice, especially in the Christian Church, the doctrine of God's fatherhood and man's brotherhood, "I am but the voice of one crying in the wilderness."

No, my friends, we need not fear. Such a character as Allen's does not inspire to hero-worship, but, on the contrary, it leads us to behold in his beauty, in his glory, in his majesty, in his power the source of Allen's being, strength, wisdom, inspiration and meekness. So we need no Massilon to warn us to-night with his sublime utterance, "Only God is great, my brethren."

The history of the world is the aggregated history of individuals. Millions of people live and die like the flower that "is born to blush unseen," but their influence is not. So sweetness, wasted on the desert air. There is no desert air in human life. The silent forces of character act and counter-act upon mankind as in the physical world with its conservation and correlation of forces. Every individual, like the pebble dropped into the sea, starts a ripple that, though lost in the vastness of the ocean and in the fierceness of surging billows, never stops entirely but rolls ever onward. The inexorable law of human life and God's providence is, that no one, however humble or unknown, can escape contributing his quota, whether little or much, whether like the rich man's gold or the widow's mite, whether of evil or good, to the formation or the direction of the character of mankind.

In every age a few names appear bright and dazzling in the sky of the world's history like the shooting comets or like the fixed stars—some challenging attention with their momentary brilliance and others fixing our gaze by their steady, dazzling light. But these are the few. The stars in the heavens are countless; human intellect is utterly unable to enumerate them. Man's arithmetic has no figure with which to number them, but we can count and name the major stars. Looking, however, into the heavens "bespangling with disheveled light," we remember that these few stars do not fill the firmament with the beauty and the grandeur which doubtless challenge the admiration of angels. So in human history, those whose "foot-prints on the sands of time" are seen of men, have around them the silent forces of unknown and unseen [illegible] characters without which history would be impossible.

The history of the Ptolemies is indissolubly connected with Egypt, the mother of civilization, whose boast and glory even to day, after all these centuries, is that, like her national emblem, the Sphinx, she is both a wonder and a mystery—a wonder because the world's latest civilization is but a development of Egypt's earliest; a mystery, because in spite of the accumulated wisdom of the ages, men cannot thoroughly comprehend the civilization of the Ptolemies. But these great kings could not have of themselves and by themselves built the pyramids and those other wonderful works of mechanism and art; could not have made Egypt the mother of civilization and the cradle of practical and speculative learning. The Ptolemies are the products of countless individuals, whose names are lost and whose activities are merged into their great and immortal kings. And so was it with Greece and Rome, Plato and Lycurgus; Epaminondas and Alcides, Solon and Demosthenes; Scipio and Cæsar; Cato and Cicero, are only indices among countless human factors whose indispensability in the problem of human life is an axiomatic truth. Hannibal, Toussaint L'Ouverture and Napoleon stand in history as great generals; and so they were, and the greatest of them was Toussaint, but who can imagine a general without at the same time instinctively thinking of an army? Grant goes down to generations yet unborn as the saviour of the Union, but great as was his military genius, he would be unknown among men to-day had he not risen to eternal fame on the shoulders and the arms of millions of his fellowmen who fought, bled and died in a righteous cause as their great leader directed, and who followed where he led.

And so it was with Luther and Wesley and Allen. They are the indices of a great problem in which numberless earnest ministers and people filled the place of indispensable factors.

As a rule—of course I grant the exception—a human character is evolved out of its environment. Philip was philosophical when he asked, "Can any good thing come out of Nazzareth?" An unanswerable argument in support of the claim of the supernatural in Christ is that he is the product of an age of vice. Indeed, at the time of the Saviour's birth, it seemed as if the vices, the immoralities, the debaucheries, the excesses of the ages were centering around Rome and spreading into her dependencies; yet in an age which naturally grew such monsters as Caligula and Nero we find such a character as Jesus Christ. It is an unanswerable argument in favor of his divinity.

Richard Allen was the natural product of his age. The century in which he was born was a period of wonderful changes. In it [illegible] away, as perhaps never before in the history of the world, long cherished ideas and institutions that had grown hoary with age. Rousseau, Voltaire, Montesquieu, Diderot, Condorcet and the Encyclopedists led attacks upon accepted and established conditions which had their reflex influence and effect upon both Europe and America. Allen's age was an age of restlessness, an age of relentless opposition to every form of oppression and tyranny and to accepted ideas, both political and intellectual. It witnessed the uprising of the people against the abuses of feudalism and the divine rights of kings. It witnessed one of the grandest struggles of human history for the inalienable rights of the people—the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It grew Kant and Locke, who broke the shackles of philosophical slavery and led men into the bright sunlight of intellectual liberty. Mozart and Handel arose in Allen's age and led us out of the heavy bondage of ancient into the inspiring freedom of modern music. And so it was in every department of learning. Black discovered carbonic acid gas; Laplace formulated the mathematics of astronomy in his Mecanique Celeste; Cavendish discovered the composition of water, and Priestly oxygen; Adam Smith systematized political economy in his Wealth of Nations; and Watt made steam a practical motive power. It was a restless age, in which intellect and heart seemed impelled by some unseen force into sympathy with the hard lot of the masses and with a determination to improve it.

Richard Allen, in contending for freedom of worship, was in harmony with the great intellectual throbbings and deep heart impulses of a generation and an age that saw the culmination of centuries of struggle for civil and religious liberty. Allen's religious revolution was instituted while the American people were repeating at every fireside from every platform and pulpit, in every schoolhouse and in every paper the famous words of the Declaration of Independence, "All men are created equal." His religious revolution began while the Old Liberty Bell was pealing forth from your State House in this very city paens of victory over British tyranny, and when the American people everywhere were shouting the gladtidings of the free. Allen heard all around him the triumphant shouts of victory over oppression, and yet he felt in God's house the iron heel of injustice, of discrimination, of inhumanity. Allen listened to sentiments of liberty and freedom in connection with the Constitution of the United States, which was being framed in this very city, and which on its completion was proclaimed as the greatest charter of freedom known in human history. Is it to be wondered, then, that Allen's soul revolted against the inhuman, the unjust and unchristian conduct of his white brethren in dragging colored worshipers at God's holy shrine and in his holy temple from their knees into the galleries or into the streets? Could Allen submit to the command to wait for the holy communion until the white people finished eating and drinking the emblems of the suffering and death of our common Master? No. The spirit of liberty which was in the very air; the spirit of Christ, which makes a man free indeed; the spirit of manhood, which dwells in white and black the same, moved upon that holy man of God, and Allen proclaimed a declaration which was broader in its practical humanity, more important in its scope and more far-reaching in its influence than that of Thomas Jefferson, and as a result, in the same year which has witnessed here in the city of Philadelphia the Constitution of the United States; indeed, while the echo from the exultant lips of millions of freemen lingers in and around this historic city, we meet as members of the denomination which Bishop Richard Allen founded to thank God for the Church of our fathers and for bringing us into the full measure and stature of redeemed manhood and womanhood and into the complete enjoyment of our inalienable rights, wherehy we have been able to preserve without spot and blemish the Church of Allen, about which our scholarly and poetic Dr. Tanner writes:

"How glorious, then, this heritage,
Burdened with storied wealth,
Enriching us and all mankind
With life and peace and health."

It is not my purpose to sketch the life of the founder of our Church or to follow our connectional history from decade to decade. Read Bishop Allen's Life, Payne's Semi-Centenary of African Methodism, Tanner's Apology, Wayman's Recollections and Arnett's Budgets. I shall, as briefly as the great occasion will warrant, refer to a few historical events in the life of Bishop Allen and the progress of our Church, and then indicate in a word the work which the connection must do to insure its permanence, increase its influence and fulfill its high destiny.

Richard Allen was born a slave in the State of Delaware, on the 14th day of February, in the year 1760, on the very threshold of the struggle for American independence, indeed in the midst of those agitations against the Stamp Act and the Navigation Act, which led to Lexington and Bunker Hill. Allen, as he grew in years, caught the spirit of freedom, which was then the warp and woof of American life, and by industry and economy he bought himself at an early age.

He grew up in the midst of the most trying period of Wesley's struggle against the form of godliness and for vital piety, for true and undefiled religion. He grew up while Methodism was pushing its way across the sea, and he was early brought in contact with the self-sacrificing heroes of Wesleyanism. He was converted while in his teens and immediately the call of God was upon him to go and preach the gospel of salvation. He began his itinerant work when only twenty-three years of age. He was immediately thrown in contact with Benjamin Abbott and Bishop Asbury, who strengthened him greatly in Christian zeal and broadened his intelligence. He preached in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania; and in 1786 he came here to Philadelphia and interested himself in religious work among the colored people, whom a series of unchristian events forced to withdraw from fellowship with their white brethren. These events have been written and transmitted to us by Bishop Allen himself in these words: "A number of us usually attended St. George's Church in Fourth street, and when the colored people began to get numerous in attending the church, they moved us from the seats we usually sat on and placed us around the wall, and on Sabbath morning we went to church and the sexton stood at the door and told us to go to the gallery. He told us to go and we would see where to sit. We expected to take the seats over the ones formerly occupied below, not knowing any better. We took those seats. Meeting had begun, and they were nearly done singing, and just as we got to the seats the elder said, 'Let us pray.' We had not been long upon our knees before I heard considerable scuffling and low talking. I raised my head up and saw one of the trustees having hold of the Rev. Absalom Jones, pulling him off of his knees and saying, 'You must get up—you must not kneel here.' Mr. Jones replied, 'Wait until prayer is over.' Mr. H. M——, said, 'No, you must get up now or I will call for aid and force you away.' Mr Jones said, 'Wait until prayer is over and I will get up and trouble you no more.' With that he beckoned to one of the other trustees, Mr. L. S——, to come to his assistance. He came and went to William White to pull him up. By this time prayer was over and we all went out of the church in a body, and they were no more plagued with us in the church. • • • Notwithstanding we had subscribed largely towards finishing St. George's Church, in building the gallery and laying new floors, and just as the house was made comfortable we were turned out from enjoying the comforts of worshiping therein. We then hired a store-room and held worship by ourselves. Here we were pursued with threats of being disowned and read publicly out of meeting if we did continue worship in the place we had hired; but we believed the Lord would be our friend. We got subscription papers out to raise money to build the house of the Lord. By this time we had waited on Dr Rush and Mr. Robert Ralston and told them of our distressing situation. We considered it a blessing that the Lord had put it into our hearts to wait upon these gentlemen. They pitied our situation and subscribed largely towards the church and were very friendly towards us, and advised us how to go on. We appointed Mr. Ralston our treasurer. Dr. Rush did much for us in public by his influence. I hope the names of Dr. Benjamin Rush and Mr. Robert Ralston will never be forgotten among us. They were the first two gentlemen who espoused the cause of the oppressed and aided us in building the house of the Lord for the Africans to worship in. Here was the beginning and rise of the first African Church in America. But the elder of the Methodist Church still pursued us • • • and told us that if we did not erase our names from the subscription paper and give up the paper, we would be publicly turned out of meeting."

You will observe, my friends, that the colored people, though worshiping as one, still felt themselves to be under the jurisdiction and control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but the ministers stationed by the Bishops of the M. E. Church acted in such an intolerant manner toward these colored brethren who were forced out of the white church that when the colored people were called upon to decide by an election to what religious denomination they would go, a large majority favored the Church of England. Allen opposed this course and favored remaining in the Methodist Church. His reasons may best given in his own words, to wit: "I informed them—the majority forming the Church of England—that I could not be anything else but a Methodist, as I was born and awakened under them, for I was a Methodist, and would leave you in peace and love • • • I bought an old frame that had been formerly occupied as a blacksmith shop and hauled it on the lot in Sixth near Lombard street. • • •

I employed carpenters to repair the old frame, and fit it for a place of worship In July, 1794, Bishop Asbury being in town, I solicited him to open the church for us, which he accepted * * * The house was called "Bethel" agreeable to the prayer that was made. Mr Dickinson prayed that it might be to Bethel to the gathering in of thousands of souls."

We are met here, my friends, in Bethel to-night; but, lo! the blacksmith shop is replaced by this commodious structure, and from this spot have gone forth influences which have belted the earth and which have ascended to heaven. But the opening of Bethel under Allen and by Bishop Asbury was the beginning of a struggle white intensity was equal only to its anomaly. It seems anomalous that as late as the end of the eighteenth century a systematic and desperate effort should be made by a Christian denomination to utterly destroy a struggling Christian enterprise The Church and State combined to crush out the Allen movement. The Bethelites were excommunicated; their property was seized by due levy and held by illegal interpretations rendered in courts of law It was the weak against the strong; poverty against wealth; a handful of people without any defined status-a citizen against the courts of the State and an unfair and unjust public sentiment. But God was for Allen, because Allen was right; and, as we have seen, God raise up friends for our cause, chief among whom were Rush and Ralston, whose Christian generosity and courage Allen asked posterity ever to hold in grateful memory; and, gathered here to night as we are, let us weave a chaplet of flowers and lay them on the altar of our hearts in memory of these noble Christian heroes who, in the days that tried men's souls, dared to stand up in behalf of oppressed, down-trodden, struggling humanity

Time will not permit me to dwell upon the persecutions to which the colored people were subjected by the Methodist Episcopal Church even after they had withdrawn from the white churches and established their own places of worship Bishop Allen in his autobiographical sketch says: "Many of the colored people in other places were in a situation nearly like those of Philadelphia and Baltimore, which induced us in April, 1816, to call a general meeting by way of conference. Delegates from Baltimore and other places which met those of Philadelphia, and taking into considerable of their attributes and to order to secure the privileges promote union and harmony among themselves, it was resolved: That the people of Philadelphia, Baltimore, etc., etc., should become one body, under the name of the African Methodist Episcopal Church."

Following, it seems, the political history of our country, we shall have occasion to observe three centennial events In 1876, as a nation we celebrated the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, which took place it 1776; in September last we celebrated with great display here in Philadelphia the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, which occurred in 1887: in 1889 we shall cele rate, in New York City, the inauguration of our Government by the installation in 1789, of Washington as the first President of the United States So we celebrate tonight the beginning of African Methodism one hundred years ago by the withdrawal in 1787 of Allen and the colored people from the white church; in 1891 we shall celebrate the centennial anniversary of the opening of Bethel on this very spot, which took place in 1794, and in 1916 there will be another centennial to celebrate the organization of our Connection, which occurred in 1816 Most of us may live to unite with joyous and exultant hearts in the next centennial event in 1891, seven years hence; but few of us will be here to raise our voices in thanksgiving and praise in 1916, thirty years hence, when the third and last centennial event in our connectional history will be celebrated by our children and grandchildren.

But, my friends, the time admonishes me to turn aside from historical considerations Our growth and development is the wonder of every thoughtful and impartial student of religious history The planting of our Church may be truly likened unto a grain of mustard seed Small and insignificant to its ovum, it is great and extensive in its evum. At first so small that it could not shelter, so weak that it could not protect, so insignificant that it could not command respect, it has become in this Centennial year so large that the spiritually weary and sin sick of every clime find rest and refuge in it; so strong that it has helped to carry liberty to bondmen, and so influential that men everywhere seek it to promote their political, their industrial and their educational enterprises. Surely it is not out of place to ask, "What hath God wrought?"

Our eloquent and able Financial Secretary, Dr Arnett, has given us in his Budgets certain historical facts and such a collection of figures as are interesting, instructive and inspiring They show that the Church, which Allen planted in prayer and which was watered by the tears of those who were with him in self-sacrifice, in privation in suffering, has enjoyed from its origin to the present day the blessings of Almighty God; and that we have inherited an institution which it is our duty to strengthen, to preserve and to transmit to generations yet unborn. As this is not the centennial year of our ecclesiastical organization, I shall not dwell upon the facts of our Church history or point out and analyse the influence which our connection has exerted among men The centennial orators of 1916 will naturally and necessarily follow these lines of thought. I may be permitted, however, to say—and I say it with some pride—that the African Methodist Episcopal Church has its work in every part of this land, in Canada, the West Indies, Hayti, San Domingo and Africa; that its membership and congregation comprise certainly more than a million of human souls, the Sunday school alone numbering upwards of 250 000 children; that this vast multitude worships in 3 392 churches, which are valued at $5 341 809; and that 10 615 traveling ministers, local preachers and exhorters administer in word and doctrine to these followers of Richard Allen. What a work! What results in these few generations of labor!

But, my friends, we cannot consistently be contented with what has been accomplished. Every generation has its work and no man can escape his share of it. The duty of the present generation of African Methodiste is to strengthen the connection by developing a spirit of systematic work under established rules and laws and in accordance with the Disciplne of the Church To this end there must dwell in Bishops as well as ministers and laymen the spirit of obedience Our chief pastors should conscientiously obey the General Conference and its legislation, and not seek to circumvent or evade it; and our ministry and laity should loyally follow the example of our Bishops. Anything less than this will eventually produce disobedience, disloyalty, disintegration Our work at home and abroad will languish and die unless we shall maintain an intelligent, a self-sacrificing, a pious superintendency, keeping out of the episcopacy scheming, unsettleble and self seeking men whose aim and effort are a personal gain and a worldly glory. And again, the work of the Church will drag will suffer, will fail unless our Bishops and conference shall maintain a high standard of morals and thorough system of practical education for those who in our pulpits shall expound our doctrines and execute our discipline.

Conceived in an educational atmosphere, born amidst educational surroundings, nutured by educational influences, Methodism is the natural promoter of Christian education, and African Methodism has given and still gives proof of its determination to establish and maintain educational institutions We must go forward in this work. We must everywhere, North, South, East and West, take strong ground against what may be called "heel and fist religion," and while we worship God with the spirit we must worship him with the understanding also, and thus we shall guard against establishing the throne of faith either in the reason or the emotions, and those who shall make, as well as those who shall administer, our laws and superintend the workings of our complex system of ecclesiastical machinery, being intelligent men of God, filled with the Holy Ghost, will do their duty in love and in wisdom and in the fear of Him who is the author of all law and who will be the judge of all men.

Gathered to night upon this sacred spot, we feel the thrill of the presence not only of the spirit divine, but also of the spirit of him who here, three generations ago, lifted up his standard, unfurled his banner and established the Church which is our heritage to night Upon his work Allen invoked God's blessings, and he did not appeal in vain, for Bethel has been the house of God and the gate of heaven to many a redeemed soul. Speaking to us adown the ages Bishop Allen bids us go forward, my friends, and he exhorts us to remember that as it is man's chief end to glorify God in his life, so it is the chief duty of the Church to lead erring humanity back to the truth, to lift fallen humanity back to its feet, and to bring to earth the kingdom of heaven, for therein is the fullest measure of peace and happiness and the complete realization of the doctrine which underlies Christianity—"God our father; Christ our redeemer; man our brother."

METHODISM AND EPISCOPALIANISM.

BY REV. J. M HENDERSON.

In the RECORDER No. 45, of current volume, under the caption, "Dollar Money and Presiding Elders," appears an article which contains the following: "The African Methodist Episcopal Church has an individuality of her own. She is not in the field to perpetuate Methodism Episcopacy or Africanism either, but to maintain her identity and usefulness as the A M E church. * * * Whenever changed circumstances demand a change in her machinery, she should make it. No matter how old forms must be relinquished their right to survive perishes when they become useless. If we become Episcopal Methodists rather than Methodist Episcopal so long as we become more powerful and more useful, it does not matter, nor does it make us one whit less African Methodist. Episcopal we are only growing (that is, our identity is preserved though our forms may be changed)"

The issue of November 17th contains an editorial headed, "It Is Material." This article takes issue with the quotation referred to, and, in my opinion, is one of the most able dissertations upon our "ecclesiastical status" now in print. It sounds of sentiments and proclaims principles which have never before been pronounced, although felt and seen to prise certainly more than a million of human souls, the Sunday school alone numbering upwards of 250 000 children; that this vast multitude worships in 3 392 churches, which are valued at $5 341 809; and that 10 615 traveling ministers, local preachers and exhorters administer in word and doctrine to these followers of Richard Allen. METHODISM AND EPISCOPALIANISM.

BY REV. J. M HENDERSON.

In the RECORDER No. 45, of current volume, under the caption, "Dollar Money and Presiding Elders," appears an article which contains the following: "The African Methodist Episcopal Church has an individuality of her own. She is not in the field to perpetuate Methodism Episcopacy or Africanism either, but to maintain her identity and "diocesan episcopacy." As we, the A M E Church, grow in Methodism the "diocesan episcopacy" will grow stronger, also the authority of General Conference As the "diocesan episcopal element" develops, the office of presiding elder and pastor become more marked and definite.

The power of the presiding elder is intensified, and, at the same, rendered more ministerial than absolute. The pastor is made more prominent in conference and less absolute in the society. The society becomes stronger and more marked in character, because brought into closer contact with superior power. As Methodism grows the "society" attains more marked individuality; as episcopacy grows the union of societies and the power of superior authority increases. Were episcopacy to become supreme, societies would be fused into one. The General Church As Episcopal Methodist the development of the Church is impossible, but the development of the connection is certain.

The creation of an episcopal committee is a breaking out of the methodist spirit, while the creation of presiding elders is a recognition of the rights of episcopal superintendency and is a unique feature, originating from Methodism alone. Episcopal Methodism recognizes two orders in the ministry. Episcopal methodism recognizes two ministerial offices: Presbyter and Bishop.

The presiding elder function is an office in the conference. It is a feature born of the necessities of diocesan episcopacy on the one hand and society methodism on the other The fact that these two are united in the conference, and not absorbed and fused as a church, makes presiding elders a necessity.

Diocesan episcopacy of a part of one Church, so much for the congregational and the episcopal elements of our polity As to dicipline the societies should and must always agree so long as the episcopal element is strong in our Church polity. If it ever grows weak we may have another repetition of the "Welsh Calvanistic Methodists: Whitfields and Wesleys. Connectional authority holds the societies as one in doctrine, but the prevalent society tendency diversifies as to form and manner of worship. The form of worship should, in a great measure, be left to the societies The field preaching, the simple mode, etc., of early days are not to be expected as models for these more highly shaped to meet circumstances. Societies still in the "Salvation Army" state of development should have methods of worship, in part, the cabin meeting house or the chapel. The established churches with culture and progressive refinement can have ritual, robes and choir. This liberty is the strength of Methodism and renders her a most efficient missionary church because of her wonderful power of adaptation As the societies grow stronger and more advanced they tend toward an established and formal mode of worship.

In conclusion, let Methodism grow; let Episcopalianism be the nucleus around which Methodism shall crystalize in a grand, permanant and powerful church.

THE FUNERAL OF MRS. BISHOP WARD.

It may be said with the least possible fear of contradiction that Bristol, Pa., never had a more touching burial service than that of the late Mrs. Bishop Ward. Everything seemed to appreciate the exceeding solemnity of the hour The singing by the little choir was weird and moving, and as the soft tones of the organ floated out upon the quiet air every heart seemed to be melted. Rev J. W. Beckett was master of ceremonies. In addition to what the editor said last week, we present the following. The first is from the pen of the Bishop himself, he requesting Dr Tanner to read it:

Mrs. Rachel Annie Ward was born in Bristol, Pa. Her father, whose name was George Smith, was a man respected, esteemed and loved by all who knew him. He died some twenty years ago. Mrs. Ward desired to rest by the side of h father. Her mother, Sarah A. Smith, still survives her

She was converted in Baltimore during the administration of Rev John W. Beckett Went to Washington July, 1879, and was married to the Bishop of this conference in 1884. For the past two years her health has been gradually failing until finally she yielded to that terrible malady, consumption, on Sunday, December 18th, 1887, in great peace After hinder hand had ridden fifteen hundred miles and reached home just twenty six hours before death closed the scene. She had lingered for four long, weary months and only God knew the depth of her suffering, only angels could appreciate the heroism of this saintly matron. Near two months of this time her husband was absent, compulsorily so, holding his conferences. He would write her nearly every day, but she could only look at the letters, could not read them.

She comes back to the scenes of her childhood and is not only mourned by the people of her own race, but by many of the best white people.

This comes from a heart surcharged with grief and burdened with sorrow God has taken my best earthly friend, the noblest woman I ever saw There are many women more wise, learned, beautiful and brave, but none more true, more staunch in her friendships, more solid in her love. When my heart-ing began to fail she never was known to speak so low that I could not hear her, and when others would speak in an undertone she would lift up her voice and let me know what was said, though of en it was not worth hearing. She never allowed any one to sneer at my age or infirmity of deafness. When sway from home she would promptly answer all letters and always send words of cheer and hope. As a housekeeper I never saw her superior. Her rooms looked as though fairy fingers had touched everything. She was the cynosure of moral loveliness, the embodiment of spiritual excellence. She was as chaste as the virgin snow. During her sickness there was a measure of patience which bordered on heroism No murmur, no complaint; calm, submissive to the will of Heaven. Her was an analytical mind, thoughtful, prolific with ideas. Her opportunities for acquiring knowledge did not extend beyond the common school She taught school for a while, and was one of the best of teachers, because she won the love, respect and confidence of her scholars. She traveled extensively, taking in Egypt, Persia, Africa and Europe, and made friends wherever she went. She especial favorite of well-bred people of all classes and conditions. The vulger held her in mortal dread, for the reason that she was a natural born lady. The last hour was one of signal victory and triumph She died as she lived—a consistent Christian.

SYNOPSIS OF DR TANNER'S ADDRESS.

His text was: "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning".

The doctor said: "We are in the presence of death. What answer more fit to his text could be found. Of the text: 'Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning' And yet, how sadly true is it that death is always the occasion of weeping as in the night. Is the babe but of yesterday—the babe whom we have yet scarcely learned to love torn from us? How dark and trying is it, and how bitter the tears. Does the patriarch of a hundred years pass away? How sad the lament. But our present lament is not for the loss of a babe; neither is it for the loss of the father of a century. On the contrary, we mourn the loss of a beloved wife and the source of middle age, and of recent strength and beauty The loss of a wife, did we say? In truth, almost the loss of a bride, for few indeed have been the months and the years, since the venerable Bishop led her to the altar. But alas! she is gone. The light of his fireside, already lonely, has again gone out. And again in darkness and in weeping the solitary occupant may be seen.

Nor is this all to add to the greater darkness of the night, and keener grief to the weeping. Were the surviving husband young and vigorous and hopeful, we could afford to say to him: 'Brother, look up.' But he is full of years. He is burdened with labor. His strength is sensibly abated What can we say? Who now, for his remaining years, is to be another and strengthening staff? Upon whose breast is he now to depend? Upon whose reader ear now to rely? Returns he home; who is to greet him at the threshold? Who now to cheer the loneliness of the lonely? In the greater loneliness, O friend, but! Ah, unhappy man! Ah, grief-stricken soul, look up! Your weeping may endure for a night, but your joy cometh in the morning. Nor can that morning be far off. Already over the hill-tops its shimmering rays may be seen."

THANKS FROM THE BEREAVED.

Members of the Philadelphia Conference: I thank you for this expression of substantial sympathy and genuine respect, and while I lay my loved dead among you, I am conscious that I, too, am, at the very least, will rest in your soil The State where I was born, converted and licensed will one day receive my dust. The dust of my parents and relatives sleep here and now, last of all, I deposit with you the remains of a woman, though unknown to fame, who had few superiors as a daughter, wife, friend and Christian The pastors, as well as the citizens of Bristol, have my heart-felt thanks for this evidence of respect for my loved and sainted dead.

BY "WANDERER."

No. 4.

OUR CHILDREN'S EDUCATION.

More than thirty years ago Mr. Henry Taylor, an author of some note, published a book bearing the title "Statesman." This book is full of excellent matter, consisting of a variety of essays on points connected with the administration of government. In the number of subjects treated he speaks of the education of the statesman. This fact leads us to consider the above-named subject. It has now grown in popular theory or diction, that some kind of an education is necessary, that some kind of trade is indispensably necessary to a livelihood, and to the maintenance of this idea schools of industry, art and science are being established in every quarter of the globe It shall not be our purpose to formulate a system of education, for of all the systems invented to provide a final solution of the difficulties and doubts which attend all human questions, there are none but, in some one part or another, contain a most prodigious assumption.

"We are sure to ourselves the thing we like, And think we make it, on the rock or sand, For thought is tired of wandering through the world, And home-bound fancy runs her barque ashore."

These words we would make the motto of every writer who professes to give a system of education and guide. Mr. Taylor says, "At the age of sixteen or there abouts the general education should for the most part be complete." He then proceeds to recommend a variety of studies and exercises in which boys should work whose parents design them as political leaders. All these are necessary to make him a practical statesman, but not as the interests of his manhood and the expansion of his character as a man. Certainly Mr. Taylor does not mean at the age of sixteen character is so expanded, generally speaking, that there is no one direction for it to take by itself. Of course he does not mean that we should so educate as to cripple and ruin or neglect one-half of the character in order to give greater intensity and effect to the other. This leads us to the babe but of yesterday—the babe whom we have yet scarcely learned to love torn from us? How dark and trying is it, and how bitter the tears. Does the patriarch of a hundred years pass away? How sad the lament. But our present lament is not for the loss of a babe; neither is it for the loss of the father of a century. On the contrary, we mourn the loss of a beloved wife and the source of middle age, and of recent strength and beauty The loss of a wife, did we say? But a good education looks first at the man in man. Its final cause is the well being of the pupil, as he is a moral, responsible and immortal being. So we think because a man is to be a minister, all that is necessary is piety for the heart, theology for the mind, and he is equipped for the work; but bad and sorry messengers of the cross such men make. A minister should be a parliamentarian, versed in law, both human and divine. He should be a financier know the real as well as the nominal values; devise ways and means to relmburse the exchequer of his particular charge; he should know the chemical affinities and relations; he should comprehend the sciences, be able to read the wonders of the starry decked heavens; he should compute with accuracy. If possible, his knowledge of geography should be such that he could locate the very spot from whence Moses viewed the promised land More yet, he should know all that can be known of heaven, earth and a universal brotherhood. Then, as he communed with the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world, they would rejoice and accept salvation because it was proclaimed unon the broad and universal principle of common love to all, and not by the am of some particular church, because limited education metes man a bigot, an enthusiast, and far too often a bigot.

There is no reason because to every man there is appointed a certain ministry, a service, a path a duty prescribed, a race to run, an office in the economy of God's providence, that they are to provide only to accomplish this particular end.

A good education always provides a good apprenticeship, for usefulness is an essential quality of goodness. Hence we urge the necessity of all ecce sible knowledge, if we would be useful in any particular calling in life. Therefore, in securing the proper education of our children, the greatest responsibility rests with our teachers. It is the teacher who fits, moulds, shapes, squares, places, dresses and presents he ideas that are to be reproduced and acquired by the pupil in theory and practice. We do not wish to be a critic, but too little attention has hitherto been given to this important subject.

Many of our schools to-day are mere machines, which grind and grind, never quitting, never perceiving never conceiving what force of duty, what weight of responsibility, what care of immortal souls, what trust from the Almighty, what germs and fragments of a binding character they preside over, that are to be united in their moral, spiritual and intellectual elements.

A CHRISTMAS ADDRESS.

READ BY MRS. STEPHEN WATSON, BEFORE THE A. M. E SABBATH SCHOOL, LONDON, O, DEC 25, 1887.

With joy we come to greet you on this our festal day, because to us a child is given. To us a Prince is born, a mighty Saviour, the King of kings and Lord of lords.

More than 1800 years have come and gone since the morning stars together sang, the sons of men shouted for joy, and the angelic host caught the keynote and joined in the chorus of the heavenly hymn, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good-will to men."

What hallowed memories the place of the nativity awakens in the human breast. What sweet influences have gone out from the little town of Bethlehem, forming character and deciding the destiny of nations. If we blot out the associations of Bethlehem, we would plunge the world into moral darkness and ruin.

This anniversary day we meet to celebrate the birth of Him whom the Father gave to save fallen men. Far away on the other side of the world, above that sacred spot, the golden and silver lamps are burning like vestal fires over the silver star that marks the spot where the Prince of Peace was born, and a thousand votive offerings in incense and prayers are ascending to him "whose kingdom there shall be no end."

While our hearts are bounding with joy, may we not offer a prayer for festive reunion of loving households, and cementing more firmly our earthly ties, but let us consecrate it more closely in fellowship, and more appreciative sympathy with the God man whose birth gives this day all its sacred beauty and power.

Let us honor this day with an entire devotion, with stronger purposes and with pure unselfishness. Could we but gain you mountain's height and look down upon the myriads worshiping at the shrine, what a grand spectacle would meet our gaze! What an army of heavenly forces marching on, conquering and to conquer!

Just think for a moment. The whole Christian world in adoration. Europe Asia, Africa, and the Americas, and all the islands of the sea, celebrating in commemoration the greatest event in the world's history. The Passover has been regularly observed for thousands of years, West Indies' emancipation 35 years, and ours of American slavery. But this event stands out in history alone never to be repeated.

In all Catholic countries they regard their festive anniversaries as sacred, though the associations of the Catholics is all the Gospel there is in it.

Notwithstanding all this, if we were as sincere in our devotions in the worship of our Lord, with our educational privileges, what a world of peace would we bring.

But our neglect of entering the door of opportunity, which the hand of God has silently swung open, is treason against the King and his Royal Bride Opportunity is God's command. We can plant the fir tree instead of the briar, the myrtle instead of the thorn Instead of the voice of revelry and blasphemy, we can send rolling over this vast country and other lands, a tide of holy song, the praises of Him who did salvation bring to a suffering world

In Spain, the children hang their little shoes and stockings up at the doors and windows, having been taught that the wise kings of the east are supposed to be journeying hither to Bethlehem to proffer and homage to the heavenly child, and in front of their abundance, which they pass by the homes where all good children sleep, they will drop in their shoes some of the treasures they are bearing to the Holy Infant in Judea. This thought is never absent from their feelings at Christmas tide In Spain Every hour of the time is sacred with them.

The favorite toy of the season is pretty indeed, and appropriately illustrates the occasion. It is called the Nativity. Sometimes it is elaborate and costly.

The Nativity represents a landscape under a starry night, the shepherds watching their flocks The Magi coming in with wonder and awe, and the child in the stable shedding upon the darkness that living light which was to overspread the world.

But with all this, they are ignorant bigoted and superstitious, which is the leading principle of their religion. If they had our opportunities with their devotion we would fall behind them. With our Christian institutions and Sabbath schools, we ought to be far in advance of what we are. It is to our shame when we consider the privileges we have at hand and the results of our labor so meagre.

Let us take a stand to-day to consecrate ourselves fully to the work that will brighten all our future forever. My heart is oppressed with the possibilities of the hour, and sends out the question in prayer, who is sufficient for these things, when we consider the forces in the field arrayed against us Say or do what we will, the darkness or the brightness of the future depends upon us.

There must be more prayer, more faith and earnest work to meet the destructive forces about us. Parents must meet their obligations to their children in family prayer, teaching the word of God in their homes and in the Sabbath schools. If we as parents, ministers and teachers would do our duty, God would take care of the results, and in the next ten years we shall capture and hold for Christ and his Church realms grander than Alexander or Cæsar ever conquered with the sword. "If two can put ten thousand to flight, what could fifty do?" Then my trusty them every year for ten, what a mighty host put to flight Satan and his kingdom. The event which Christmas reminds us and which we celebrate is the advent of power Not the power which surrounds earthly thrones, which pervades States and kingdoms, which emanates from human laws, which is taught in schools of philosophy or science, and which the great and noble, so-called, affect or patronize, but which, unlike all other powers and beyond all others, has been increasingly felt and is destined to stand until shaken brass and sculptured marble shall have crumbled into dust. That power is love; not human, not selfish, not stinted nor feeble; but divine, unselfish, unbounded, intense, infinite love, unhindered in its movements by the unmitigated depravity of the race, over which it yearns, unchilled in its ardor by the worthlessness of the objects whose welfare it seeks—love in action with a power which overleaps all barriers, sweeps aside all obstacles from its path, and provides, in spite of sin, and death, and hell, the means of deliverance and of life for a world in ruins; power that prepared and furnished the effectual remedy, and shall crown with complete and grand success, its redeeming scheme amid the songs of paradise and the glories of eternity No wonder, then, God should commission angels to make the announcement. No wonder that their first notes should be, "Glory to God in the highest," that the second should be "peace on earth," nor that the third should be, "good-will to men." When we consider how that power has been working silently but evenly, slowly but steadily, in all the frame work of human society, permeating its laws, forming its manners, shaping its institutions, moulding its character, giving it an upward, onward impulse, inspiring its hopes, animating and directing its activities, and leavening it with purity, it is not strange that the world should, as the world does, celebrate the day with song and festivity. As the thing celebrated is love, intense, infinite eternal, the Christmas celebrations should be grateful love, which displays itself in deep piety toward God and in benefice ce toward men. At the family altar, around the Christmas feast, in the great congregation, the increase of praise and prayer should be offered. We should feed the hungry, clothe the naked, minister to the sick and comfort the sorrowing. We should do this in grateful remembrance for the sake of Him who came from heaven to save the race.

SOME STRIKING SITUATIONS INTO WHICH WELL INFORMED PERSONS ARE LED.

There is no end of witchcraft and deception. Years ago persons suspected of the "strange infatuation" were thrown into the water—if guilty of witchcraft, they would drown.

For many years the world was shocked at such inhumanity of man to man, but if we were to declare that people are persecuted to-day quite as remorselessly as was the so called witches of old, our statements might be received with great incredulity.

But it is a fact.

If you do not believe it, enter any one of the schools of medical practice, and attempt to use a preparation which the code does not recognize, or even to recommend indirectly any popular remedy, such for instance, as Warner's celebrated kidney remedy, and then relate your experience.

Then you'll admit the fact

Let us be frank with you, reader We tell you that this is downright bigotry. Merit dema ds and is entitled to recognition, never found If experience tell us that diamonds must always be found in sand, would you not be a fool if you found one in gravel, not to take it and realize on it?

Your friends would call you foolish.

The trouble with the doctors is that they can't cure advanced diseases of certain forms, and they know it. And yet they will not allow the use of any outside proprietary medicine, which they know has cured the disease.

For instance:

Kidney disease has no marked individual symptoms. It produces all sorts of symptoms of the commonest diseases. Not being able to cure the disease itself with success, the bigoted physician treats these symptoms!

But what good does that do? In order to stop the freshet, you must stop the flood. It would be to try brushing it away with a broom.

Dr. J. G. Holland, whom all the world admired as a teacher of sense, wrote in Scribner's Monthly: "It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day are more successful than many physicians, and most of them were first discovered and used in actual medical practice.

Dr. Robson of the Royal Navy of England, enthusiastically endorses Warner's safe cure, as indeed do many hundreds of thousands all over the land. Dr. Dio Lewis, who almost never used medicine, commended it highly and said it be had any kidney disease he would use it.

This evidence is conclusive.

Paralysis, consumption, pneumonia, apoplexy, heart disease, general debility, rheumatism, all these common diseases are often only symptoms of kidney disease. Instead of admitting their inability to cure this disorder, doctors give their attention to the symptoms. If they cure one, another comes, and finally death takes the case out of their hands. Then they disguise the fact that it is Bright's disease of the kidneys, and say that death came from paralysis, apoplexy, pneumonia, consumption, general debility, rheumatism, heart disease, blood poisoning, or some other of the names of the direct effects of kidney disease. They are not the real disease itself.

We do not believe every advertisement that we read. Some people may perhaps regard this article as an advertisement and will not believe it, but we are candid enough to say that we believe the parties above mentioned have proved their case, and under such circumstances the public is unwise if it is long influenced by adverse prejudice.

COMMENDATION.

DEAR BRO. LEE:—I depart from my usual custom and write a line of commendation of the pastoral work of Rev. Theodore Gonid, of Boston, Mass., who became pastor of the Charles Street Church in June, 1887. During his remembrancy the membership has been largely augmented and taken on a higher tone of spiritual activity. The finances of the church are ably handled and in prime condition Taken altogether, the outlook for African Methodism in New England, and the Charles Street Church in particular, is of the most promising character and endearing type, and for many years to come the agency must continue as the medium of spiritual interest in negro life.

DEATH OF REV. J. H. HORTON.

Rev. J. Henry Horton departed this life Monday, October 4th, 1887. He was stricken with consumption in the early part of this year, on the Philadelphia circuit, where he was a worker until the day of his death. Rev. Horton was one of the lovers of African Methodism. He held successively every charge that was assigned him, and was much loved by all who knew him. He passed away in full triumph of faith on the day and date above mentioned. He has left five little children without a mother to mourn his loss.

"This much and this is all we know, He is supremely blest, Has done with sin, and care, and woe, And with his Saviour rests."

THE SELF-SUFFICIENCY OF STUPIDITY.

—The most frightful exhibitions of stupidity occur when men, not by any means stupid or illiterate, are called to judge of work which lies quite outside their experience and information. Likewise when men, of fair general information, try to pass themselves off as possessing knowledge that they do not possess. We are not a bookhead, but a man of moderate learning and of very great smartness (self-sufficiency), who seriously declared that he never read either Shakespeare or Milton; and further more that he did not believe that anybody had ever read either Shakespeare or Milton. Having looked into "Hamlet" one evening, and found that he was not interested, he concluded that he was a fair specimen of educated humanity, and that what could not interest him could not interest anybody.—Longman's Magazine.

THE ANNUAL REPORT of Bethel Church, New York, for the year ending June 6th, 1887, has been received. The figures show that the total receipts for the year were nine thousand two hundred and eighty-five dollars and fifty-eight cents, ($9,285.58), and the disbursements seven thousand six hundred and nineteen dollars and fifty-five cents ($7,619 55). The receipts and debts are itemized and show that the church, under Dr. Derrick's direction, has done an immense work for those outside its immediate communion.

A SERIES of meetings, beginning at Bethel Church, Philadelphia, on Saturday night, 1st inst., are in progress. On Sunday morning after a solemn communion, an invitation was given to those desiring salvation to make it known by coming to the altar. Several presented themselves, and among them was a woman who was recognized as a mistress of a disreputable house. She confessed faith in Jesus, and expressed herself as being desirous of serving God more faithfully than she had served Satan. She went to her house where the bar room was kept and ordered all the liquor to be poured out into the street, which was done; then she, with some of the members of the church who had accompanied her home, held a prayer meeting. She entreated the girls to reform, advising them to follow her example in accepting Him who says "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Is the conversion of this woman there is one place less where vice and immorality is practiced.

IN LOOKING over a bulk of communications for our "valuable columns" a few nights ago, we were led to ask if the great number of persons who fled the CHRISTIAN RECORDER an avenue for their thoughts could not well afford to spend the strength of their pens more fully on a new list of topics this year? Have we not too much of interest committed to us by circumstances and by God, to occupy so much precious time in equalizing our thoughts by comparisons and criticisms? Does physical science keep herself so far removed from church affairs as to be necessarily so rarely mentioned? Is the subject of social economics as well as that of literature unworthy of our notice? Do we not engage ourselves too extensively in self-congratulations and praise of one another? Can we not encompass more at each reseb of the pen than our mero society advancement? Can we not observe the logical, natural and necessary connection between this advancement and other important facts?

FOR SEVERAL years Mrs. Elizabeth Ralls, President of the Sarah Allen Mission, this city, has given an old folks' Christmas dinner in Liberty Hall, on Christmas day. Mrs. Ralls' name has been mentioned in this paper frequently, but cannot be mentioned too often. Her labors among the poor are so incessant, so beneficial and so noble that she deserves far greater recognition than she receives. The Christmas dinner this year is said to have been served to a greater number of persons than ever before—about five hundred aged persons and children. There are many other noble ladies as well as gentlemen assisting Mrs. Ralls in her good work. The Sarah Allen Mission Society, though named after the wife of Bishop Allen, is non-sectarian. Last summer about one hundred old persons of this great city were given from one week to ten days in the country at the Sarah Allen Mission Home, at Darby, Pa. In the winter hundreds are aided by the Mission. No question is asked concerning church affiliations; the only questions are, are these old people in needy circumstance, and are they of good moral character? Mrs. Ralls is a member of Bethel Church. The Mission Association is arranging to build a summer "Home" in the country. Many wealthy persons, Canaasian, are assisting in the good work. Dr. N. F. Mossell, who so generously gave his services to the mission last year, has kindly tendered his medical aid for the ensuing year. This mission home is another step by our people towards self-oaro and self-protectvcnoe.

WE PUBLISHED last week an article from Rev. R. Seymore, in which occurs a very remarkable passage, considering that its author is a preachor of the gospel. It is this:

> First, we will speak a few words of nature, as she is pure and contains the only real truths we have. She is like her God, unchangeable; she is always positive. Here is the fountain of truth, for even our theology, the best it has been defiled by the touch of man. Nature alone must hand to us the real truth of God.

We have italicized the remarkable points in the passage. Alexander Baio could not have uttered a more cold and unqualified materialistic statement; as inconsistent as materialistic. If nature contains the only real truth, why preach the gospel, which does not direct men to nature exclusively nor first?

The whole scheme of Christianity rests upon the supernatural and spiritual: if only nature is the source of truth then the direction of the world to Christ, with the injunction to repent and believe, would seem folly. To exclude everything else in order to declare nature positive does not commend the philosophy of the argument.

To charge the best of our theology with being defiled is simply uttering a sentence as ambiguous as it is dangerous. The best theology might mean the pure science as it exists in the Divine mind. But no one can hardly believe this the author's meaning; it might mean the science in best conception in human minds—conception far above the best formulations—or it might mean the best theological formations underlying the beliefs and practices of great bodies of Christians. However this may be, a comparison of theological and material science, from any standpoint and by any means, will expose the fact that there are certitudes in theological science as real as any that can be presented by material science. Declining to treat the matter in this way, he will find that, though natures is true, there are other truths, and that pure theology is one of those truths—as clear a source as nature, to say the least. It is not pure theology that has been defiled, but mind that has become defective.

Men have gotten false notions of theology. But have not the blunders of mind in respect to nature been equal to those in respect to theology in number and in results? Is not this "only true source of truth" read through as many sets of lenses as is theology? Is theology to be reckoned impure because misread and misinterpreted, while nature has her purity sung by those to whom she is as truly a mystery as is theology, constantly misread and misinterpreted?

It seems rather unnatural for ministers, teachers of and by, theology, to give Biblical theology second place. This subject has been discussed many centuries, but in the latter centuries has found very few Christian philosophers who were willing to take the side unluckily chosen by Brother Seymore.

Personal.

—Rev L. C. Chambers will be assisted in his quarterly meeting next Sunday by Revs Tanner, Cooper and Buckner —On December 8, 1887, Robert Henderson, Sr., one of our oldest members of the A. M. E. Church, Meadville, Pa., died. He was 96 years old. He died trusting in the Lord.

—A New Year's card consisting of a neat box of cake announced to us the wedding of Miss Mary L. McKinnelly to Mr. T. D. Scott, A. B., at Macon, Ga. Both were students at Wilberforce University. Mr. Scott graduated in 1886 The good couple have our very highest regards and best wishes.

—Dr. C. S Smith spent Christmas in Detroit, Mich., with his parents, child and other connections. He now is in his office in Nashville. His presence in our city for five months has been exceedingly agreeable to his friends. The full and clear contact of those at the head of our Church departments works no ill, but much good to the connection.

A VOTE.

BY REV. W. H. COSTON.

A false allegation is often established by apparent credible evidence. Direct evidence is more easily established or disestablished by the reputation for fidelity to duty, whether secular or sacred; if one has been highly appreciated for his integrity, his testimony has less timable weight. If the allegation be thus authenticated, time and publicity tend to secure its establishment. The time it has been accepted as true may be made to defend its dislodgement, for it may be argued in defense, that if it had not been true it would have been denied. As time ebbs it gains credence. The time consumed in disahusing it is by far greater than that which it consumed in deceiving. Publicity, though anything may be published, gains to it devotees. It is clear to all that a false statement as to a delegate to the General Conference may work to its injury. There may be some who palliate the offences committed against the Iowa Conference. It reviewed with conscious responsibility the alleged election of Mr. Solomon Taylor, and found it irregular and refused to give to it its sanction. His claim was ably prosecuted and defended by two efficient members of the annual conference; one of whom assumes, with very poor grace, to speak for the conference and contrary to its expressed decision. By such action the claimant's claim may be enhanced, the organization of the General Conference made more difficult, its time consumed and the Church injured by hasty legislation.

Bishop Brown, after hearing the relevant facts referred it to the approaching General Conference. The Iowa Conference has not reconsidered its work nor any portion of it since August 16, 1887, and the General Conference has not convened. Mr. Taylor's status, then, has not been determined by either conference. The General Conference, it has been said, will be the creature of a few shrewd men, as was the last.

The Iowa Annual Conference differs essentially from the General Conference other than in its non-legislative character It has no accredited "shrewd men," it is a conference of peers. Its sovereignty is the expression of the majority. However conspicuous any one of its members may be, he cannot, with impunity, assail its action. A few weeks ago a brother wrote: "Some conferences have elected delegates from sinister motives." and the Iowa Conference in electing Rev. A. J. Barton had elected "a wire-puller." The writer was doubtless best acquainted with the motives of those who gave him honor and position in the conference of his choice. It was at least unkind to impugn their integrity, but to denounce to the public that they had elected in the person of Rev. A. J Barton "a wire-puller," was criminally false and malicious. It was false as to the action of the conference and malignant as disposed to the person whom the conference elected. Homo sum humani nihil a me allenum pruto.

DR. JOHNSON'S "MORE BISHOPS" ENDORSED.

BY REV. W G ALEXANDER.

MR. EDITOR:—After a careful review of Dr Johnson's elaborate discussion of the above topic, published from week to week in the lastly increasing popular CHRISTIAN RECORDER I come not as an apologist, for the learned writer needs none—the articles cut their own way. But I congratulate the African Methodist Episcopal Church who has produced such a far seeing thinker, whose articles on the episcopacy are unparalleled in the history of African Methodism.

A learned prelate whose episcopal service covers nearly forty years, and whose name is honored wherever Methodism is known, said of these articles: "I have been in the A M E Church for many years. I am 73 years of age and one of its Bishops for over thirty-four years I have watched the progress of the Church, and know its thinkers and writers. No man in the A. M E Church has written so learnedly and so thoroughly on the episcopacy as Dr. Jas. H. A. Johnson"

I freely admit Dr Johnson has covered much ground, and ably discussed what the thinkers of the Church desired, and what the vast membership ought to know. The people at large have followed him in every article, hence colored Methodism is stirred as never before. Since the publication of these articles, friends have been made for African Methodism who had it before. Leaders for our organ have been procured, and many have just seen the power that the Church could, and we believe will, wield

Dr Johnson has just shown the latent power, that Methodism will accomplish when her vast machinery is put in motion.

Some individuals reason otherwise. These articles are not tinged with infallibility—doubtless the learned writer himself admits,—but it is undeniable, any reviewer to the contrary notwithstanding, that he has elevated this important subject, removing it from the old weather-beaten stage rut method of discussion (which had almost made being a colored Bishop odious in the eyes of cultured Methodists), and restored it to its pristine dignity, potency and responsibility. It caused the Bishop in Methodism in general, and African Methodism in particular, in twenty articles, to pass in grand review before the gaze of an admiring, yet astounded, world.

Men, however, are given to criticism. In fact, anybody can select this overcrowded vocation. Who of us but could criticise Demosthenes, Cicero, Hugo, Carlyle, Milton, and the philosophic Cobb, passing of the world's literature? But can we equal them?

In conducting a discussion of this character, in which so much for weal or woe is involved, men should perform this duty who can rise sufficiently high above personal considerations as to view matters in the light of facts, which these articles not only claim, but verify.

We are proud to note the fact that the A. M E Church is listening to hear her most learned and experienced men—men who both know and love African Methodism; men whose loyalty is unquestioned. Those men we wait to hear, and we will be silent that we may hear. None others need apply.

Jas. H. A Johnson could not be actuated other than for the prosperity of the A. M. E Church, to which organization he has given his best days, an uncompromising Christian character, life long study, consecration of brain and heart, and stands to-day as an admitted scholar in philology, philosophy, theology and literature. This, in connection with his abundant experience and contact with the episcopal heads of general Methodism, gives him the ability and doubly qualifies him for the task so learnedly and fittingly done Out of a full head and heart guided these facts which have started colored Methodism to thinking as it had never done before.

Dr. Johnson stands out as a seer in Israel upon the threshold of another quadrennium, pointing out the weak places of four hundred thousand African Methodists, showing the Church what must be done that she may occupy her rightful position in Christianizing, civilizing and evangelizing the world. Let those articles be read that throttle the much barped upon and injurious theory that to save a few dollars we are to crowd several influential departments into one—departments which have been and are powerful factors for good, which means virtually to crowd upon the shoulders of one or two men the work at the least consideration requiring seven, ten or a dozen.

It seems that the individuals who make our Church so insignificant don't know much about business, or else but little about the business of such departments. For instance, petty newspapers and some religious journals employ two editors, seven, ten and a dozen men to keep up the status of a paper in providing and flashing the latest news to their patrons in a single city or State; and here we have an organ supposed to supply information for four hundred thousand members, not including readers in other denominations. With this vast responsibility to properly discharge, cries come up of "Too many offices; put two or three into one." I assert in the same sense, as Dr Johnson shows, but let us arrange for them and see how it would work, viz:

One man editor and business manager of the A. M. E. Church Review, a magazine representing the negro culture of the world. Same man editor of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, providing church news, etc, for three thousand clergymen and three hundred and ninety seven members. Same man manager of the Publishing Department, publishing hymnals, disciplines, rituals, paying off debts of all kinds, look after presses, paper, material and a dozen other details connected with that department. Same man Secretary of Education, with three or four universities and eight or ten growing schools and colleges to provide for.

The second general officer (to save money,—it will save it, too), let him be Financial Secretary, whose business it is to plan for the collection and proper distribution of the finances of four hundred thousand members. Same man secretary and business manager of the Sunday School Union, with its constantly increasing demands and responsibilities to supply Child's Recorders, Superintendents papers, Teachers' and Scholars' Quarterlies, including Gems and Lesson Catechisms, with managing Children's Day matters, editing and publishing the Sunday School Hymn. Secretary of Missions, with our great Home Mission work, providing and looking for funds to spread the illuminated Cross of Christ in Hayti, the West Indies, Africa, and the islands of the sea, whose inhabitants now sit in darkness.

Where are the two, nay, three men, no matter how great their ability or experience, who could satisfactorily perform this service?

Their lives would be destroyed by overwork, and they would pass to an untimely grave. This country to-day mourns the loss of giant statesmen who were worked to death by a constituency who had raised false economy.

But aside from this view, it would cripple and compromise the already brilliant record the Church, our fathers' church) has made, show that the General Conference, composed of the best men the Church possessed, did not know what they were doing. Nay, nay, let us take no step backwards. Our fathers br ught the old ship safe this far, and don't let us for the want of energy to do our duty make ourselves a hiss and a by-word for creation.

By spreading out our work as necessity demanded, look at the excellent results crowning Dr. B T Tanner's labors as editor of the A. M. E. Church Review; Wm. D. Johnson, our noble Secretary of Education; the peerless C. S. Smith, of Sunday School Union fame; the indefatigable Embry, who will soon make his department pay its expenses and turn the Church a handsome revenue; Dr Lee, whose able editorials are read far and near, and last, but not least, Rev. J. M Townsend, the untiring Secretary of Missions, whose name is becoming a household word. Wherever our work is known, the eloquent Dr. Arnett, Secretary of Finance, whose Budget is dotting the world with facts setting forth the power and influence of our Methodism. Let us not retrench, but improve and perfect these departments.

Where is the man who knows what has been accomplished for the race, nay, for God and humanity, who regrets the action of the last General Conference in these particulars at least?

Dr. Tanner alone, with the Review, has given the African M. E. Church and the negro race standing and a name among the refined Anglo-Saxons and thinkers of the world that we never had before, and wherever this A. M. E. Church Review lifts its proud and cultured head, it stands the exponent of negro culture and refinement.

Tanner has immortalized himself by immortalizing his race. In this we see the wisdom of Dr. Johnson's argument for an increase of our episcopal force. In my next, attention will be given to our ability to support fourteen Bishops, taxation, etc.

PULPIT SIMPLICITY.

BY REV. J. C. AYLER.

MR. EDITOR:—Having not annoyed you much in the past, please allow me space in your valuable paper to write a few words on this very important subject. I mean by pulpit simplicity just what the phrase implies and not what is implied in the general demand on the part of many who cry, "Simplicity, simplicity!"

Pulpit simplicity is to present the doctrines of Christ in the simplest form of expression possible. This ought to be done by the Christian preacher. Yet the demand for this may, and is, in many cases, too extravagant and unreasonable. There are certain terms that should be quoted verbatim, hence it would be unreasonable to expect the preacher to substitute the quotation with some other word or words. In a case of this sort it is the duty of the preacher to tell it and the duty of the people to know it. While the preacher should study to simplify, the hearer should study to hear, understand. So the one ought to be done and the other not left undone. This same God once said, "Precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there a little." Is not this simplicity, said, "Hear" What is the inference drawn from these words? Why, it is to be inferred that a two-fold preparation, at least, should be made. There is great need for the one, while there is but little put on the other.

While it cannot be too strongly urged that the preacher should prepare himself both spiritually and intellectually to "preach," to present God's truth in the simplest form and with the greatest power possible, it also ought to be taught that the "hearer" should prepare himself both spiritually and intellectually to "hear" with the greatest ease and most successfully. Hearing—earnest hearing—is as hard as preaching when one is unprepared to hear, unprepared in his heart, unprepared in his head. It would be well for him to be prepared educationally, so as to know what words mean, for words contain doctrine, or make the preacher a dictionary. He should be prepared spiritually, so as to understand the doctrines of the Bible, for "things are spiritually discerned."

I, with the masses, cry "Simplicity, simplicity!" but I do not mean by the cry what many of the rank and file do. While I emphasize simplicity in both "word and doctrine," yet I do not mean to transcend the bounds of common sense That is, the preacher should learn to teach—preach—and the people should learn to "hear." I emphasize simplicity in "word and doctrine," first, that the words of a sermon or exhortation should be as simple as simple can be—even monosyllabic in style; and secondly, that a sermon or exhortation should be something besides abstract words (though they be simple), they should be so connected as to produce teachable thought, the thought should be simple and pure. The words of a discourse may be simple and the doctrine confused; the words should be simple in themselves, but so connected as to produce simple doctrine. But this is not what many people mean by simplicity; they mean much of the ridiculous, which would be an assault upon every common sense and ministerial dignity.

MISTAKEN VIEWS ON THIS SUBJECT.

There is a strong tendency to divorce intelligence and simplicity. This is, or ought to have been, one of Talmage's big hinedars, for it is contrary to reason and common sense. Three things we think if a man is intelligent, he is therefore non-simple. This controverted meaning is just the other way. If a man is really educated, he is really simple. Of course "a little learning is a dangerous thing," but enough learning is a good thing. Not abstract book learning, but book learning founded on common sense and tempered with grace. "A little learning is a dangerous thing" in the preacher would talk about books at the expense of Christ. But, on the other hand, he would talk about Christ instead of books; it would be Christ in his introduction, Christ in his plan and manner, and Christ in his conclusion; Christ as a Prophet, Priest and King

We young men get learning, because the fathers tell us to get it; then let us never lose sight of Christ in books, but let us find him therein if possible Let us find him in language, science and nature—let us find him in our Bible, in the grass of the field, in the starry heavens, and, best of all, let us find him in our hearts. But to the point, "pulpit simplicity." Does the brother preacher know what he is talking about when he introduces his subject by saying, "I am none of your educated preachers, but can preach a plain gospel sermon?" Does he know that he is paying himself one of the highest ministerial compliments possible? On the other hand does the would-be educated man know what he is doing when he attempts to ignore one of God's angels, because he has not been to college? Colleges are good things, but they do not make men; men make colleges. Colleges draw men out so that they can use their possibilities for God and his Christ. Colleges do not put capacity into man, but develop that which they have

What is the difference between an educated and an uneducated man? The same difference that there is between two pieces of India-rubber the same size, the one drawn out and the other not The educated man, in the broad sense, is the same man improved, not converted into some one else.

A word to young man in the ministry What is a young man in the ministry? There is a tendency to confuse the phrase "young men," with that of "young preachers" There is in many cases a vast difference. A "young man" is not necessarily a young preacher. It depends upon what time he began Neither is a "young preacher" always a young man, for the same reason. It is very much like the terms "age" and "experience." They are by no means synonymous; "age" relates to time, and "experience" to what one goes through. But to "young preachers," either in the popular or technical sense of the phrase, let us not fail to be simple; let us learn enough to be simple still and simple in word, simple in doctrine As models of simplicity, I recommend Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner," and the writings of Shakespeare.

MANAGER'S GREETING.

To the Bishops, ministers and friends of the Publication Department, we tender to you all our thankful New Year's greeting.

With this number we begin another year of earnest endeavor to serve you with the RECORDER and other requisites of the Church The year just past has been one of embarrassment, labor and care No one outside of this place can know fully or appreciate readily the difficulties attending its conduct. Yet, with the blessing of God and your kind, constant assistance, we have been able to go ahead through another year. We have labored to make the paper better than ever, to have it neater in appearance and in every way a better representative of this leading people. We have tried also to give the people using our Hymnal greater variety and taste in that line. We have revised, enlarged and electrotyped the Ritual and Order of Service for the Church; so that, to-day, we have, in the opinion of men capable of judging, the most simple, complete and beautiful order of Church Service in the world. How well we have succeeded in doing our work we leave to your own decision. And now, although clouds still hang about us and have angry spots, we can truly say that the condition and prospects of the Concern are better than they have ever been, so far as we know or can learn

Our Centennial passed off nicely. Reports show that there was a large and hearty participation in the exercises under our programme, and in many places large and liberal collections were raised. Had these collections been sent to the Department as designed by the Bishops in their original call and as instructed by the committee arranging means, our hope of discharging all claims outstanding against the Concern would have been more than realized. At any rate the churches had a good time We got, or rather will get, by-e and by, some relief, and so "we thauk God and take courage."

Now, brethren, only four short months remain of our time up to the General Conference Three things we ask of you, one and all. 1. That each pastor will try—honestly try to send us one subscriber for, the RECORDER during each of the four remaining months One for January, and so on, up to April 2. That every stationed pastor will try to supply his church with the Hymnal and Church Service We shall offer them to both churches and merchants at a slight reduction from regular rate during the next two months. We want to sell two thousand Hymnals and four thousand Order of Service before the close. 3 That you will one and all pray for us and not scold us. Help us and remember us in your prayers, and it shall be well with you and well with us.

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do so at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing the same.

Brethren will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairman of General Committee.
B. W. ARNETT, Sec'y.

FINANCES OF THE AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH.

BY CETHE C. FELTS.

The absorbing question of dollars and cents as it relates to the A.M.E. Church work, is a subject of more interest and greater magnitude to the people inside and outside of the Church, outside of aspirants, than the well-discussed and used-up subject of "More Bishops," suggested by a recent article in the RECORDER by Dr. Lee.

Subjects of much less importance can be made to appear to far greater advantage, when well handled, than subjects of far greater importance when awkwardly presented.

However, I humbly embrace the opportunity to offer a few thoughts upon the above subject, hoping they may appear practical in some one who will be able to enlarge upon them, that the Church may be benefited and the well-being of humanity served.

The Old and New Testament plans of moral financiering, as to many other plans and regulations governing the best interests of humanity, have long since been set aside for what are known as progressive and improved ideas.

The plans made use of as recorded in the Bible, were eminently successful. Perhaps, however, because of them novelty and particular adaptation to and for the occasion; but more probably because of their being inspirations of God in all their moral and social tendencies.

They always so commended themselves to the mind as to be very popular; Moses restrained the people from giving when they had been put upon their freedom and pleasure as to the amount or what they should give to the Lord. The repairs of the second and neglected house of God under King Jehoash could not be accomplished while the collections could be indiscriminately used by the priests for other than for the purposes collected. But when Jehoida took a chest and bored a hole in the lid of it and set it beside the altar on the right side, as one entereth into the House of the Lord, the priests that kept the door put therein all the money that was brought into the House of the Lord."

In 2 Kings, 12, we see that this work went on in a most satisfactory way. There are three points of importance in this money transaction to be noticed: Success to come with the use of the money in the way for which it was collected; confidence in those handling the money was implicitly imposed. Moreover, they reckoned not among the men" And lastly, those handling the people's money, "For they dealt faithfully." Hence no hesitation on the part of the people to give when their agents lived above suspicion. There was no lack of means with which to repair the Lord's house.

The returning captivity from Babylon under Nehemiah contributed its labors in the restoration of the walls of Jerusalem as freely as did the early Christians sell all their possessions and "have all things in common." Paul's preparation for a "Grand Rally" by a certain Sabbath, does not conflict with Christ's "Do not give your alms before men to be seen of them."

Now, if our modern plans are mere modifications of the Bible ideas in our money getting for the promotion of Church work and the elevation of humanity, the willingness of Israel under Moses, the confidence inspired under Jehoida, the zeal displayed by Nehemiah, the cheerfulness and preparation of the apostles with the ability of the poor widow, should never be forgotten by those whose business it is to collect public charity.

Frankford, Phila.

DOING WITHOUT.

The crying sin of the day is dishonesty. One hears so much of it in public life; but, as we have said, there is too much of it altogether in private life. And its cause is to be found in the want of self-control in the indulgence of lusts and appetites. Reckless, extravagant living is at the bottom of it all. Habits of living had any true foundation in any hearty desire for any desirable things, there would be more hope of amendment. But when one comes to see what things ill-gotten gains are spent upon the outlook is a sad one. Dress, display, amusement, costly things bought just because they are costly; wealth worn evilly, merely that it may be wasted foolishly; these are the signs of a time which is not a pleasant time to contemplate. If a man loves any one thing—say rare books, or pictures, or objects of art of any kind, or music, or science, so well that, for the sake of the one thing in which he would be rich, he is willing to be poor in everything else, no matter though his choice be an unwise one according to the best standards of choice, he will yet have a motive which will help to keep him upright. But for those who love none of these things, but simply desire them because it is the habit of the time; because, like pampered children, they must needs cry for whatsoever they are just out of their reach, for them is needed the wholesome self-discipline which shall teach them to let alone whatever is not theirs.

And the beginning of self discipline is in the home. Parents must teach their boys and girls the great lesson of doing without whatever cannot be fully theirs. There need be no disorderly restraint, but in some way the first lesson for childhood should be that of earning its pleasure To get whatever it craves as soon as it asks for it, is the worst training a child can have.—Churchman.

A SWEET VOICE.

There is no power of love so hard to get and keep as a fine voice. A kind hand is deaf and dumb. It may be rough in flesh and blood, yet do the work of a soft heart, and do it with a soft touch. But there is no one thing that love so much needs as a sweet voice to tell what it means and feels, and it is hard to get and keep a voice that will speak as all love the thoughts of a kind heart. But this is a time when a sharp voice is apt to be got. You often hear boys and girls say words at play with a sharp, quick tone as if it were the snap of a whip. When one of these gets vexed, you will hear a voice that sounds as if it were made up of a snarl, a whine and a bark. It is often in youth that one gets a vile or a tone that is sharp, and sticks to him through life, and sure to ill and annoy. It falls like a drop of gall on the sweet joys of home. Watch day by day as a part of great price, for it will be worth more to you in days to come than the best pearl bid in the sea. And the key is to the heart as the light is to the eye. It is a light that sings as well as shines. Train it to sweet tones now, and it will keep its tone through life.—Elihu Burritt.

On next Wednesday evening Rev. Nosh Temple, of Morris Brown, Philadelphia, will deliver a lecture on astronomy, in the above church, which the public would do well to attend.

A DREAM AND A LESSON.

Some people have great faith in dreams. I share their feelings to this extent: that God may make a dream the means of valuable instruction. I had a dream. I seemed to be in Africa. There were people with me—possibly Dr. Livingstone or Mr. Stanley. We were surrounded by savages who sought our lives. We witnessed deeds of cruelty, and sometimes associated with heathen worship. Suddenly we came to a large building which seemed familiar. It was like the Widow's Home in Cincinnati. As we entered I saw on the one side of the hall a picture of the Good Samaritan, and on the other a tablet, with some words in regard to the poor, which read like an extract from the Book of Deuteronomy. This seemed strange, but I remembered that Moses was born in Egypt, and so passed into the room where the widows—a hundred or more in number—were at dinner. I realized that I was hungry, and as the sight of the tables, well filled, made my mouth water, I turned to a window and looked out. Near by was another large building, which they told me was the public school, and then everything disappeared, and I knew that it was a dream. So, after the fashion of the dreamers of the olden time, I pondered the interpretation. I said: "It is very strange that heathenism, with its vice, ignorance and cruelty, should be mixed up with the Widows' Home and public schools. There is probably no institution of either kind in all heathendom." I could not understand it, until I remembered that I had visited the Widows' Home on Walnut Hills and come home by the public school house, and before going to bed had read an article on the debauchery of heathen worship in a certain district in Africa. By this time I had dressed, and, going to my study, taken up a paper. There my eye fell on these words:

"The Bible, teaching that religion is just a matter of feeling, is the thing we must fight. The man who thinks he is holier than others because he sleeps in church, while others sleep at home or go about to visit and help those who have suffered, is a fraud of the first water.

* * * Men and women go up the marble steps, dressed in extravagant styles, and sit in luxurious pews, to hear such twaddle, while they never give a thought to the starving eyes and hungry stomachs of thousands of their fellow-beings. God pity the poor."

At once the thought came into my mind, "Isn't my dream an answer to this kind of writing?" God does pity the poor, so do his people. These who go to church, whether up marble steps to luxurious pews, or in plain and uncomfortable houses, are the real helpers of humanity. The Bible does not teach that religion is just a matter of feeling. It teaches that men must show their faith by works; that they must love every man his neighbor as himself, and every man his fellowness everywhere. Christians so understand it, and although far from perfect, act on it. Heathenism builds no hospitals, or widows' homes, or public schools. No more does infidelity. These things are found only where Christianity has or has had power. There may, indeed, be charitable men and women who do not profess Christ, or who even deny him. They have absorbed something of his spirit from the atmosphere in which they live So such institutions may continue and live on their endowments after the spirit which established them has passed away They are, however, the fruit of Christianity, and as such no mend it to all who can appreciate the argument, "By their fruits half ye know them" My dream brought before me the fruits of Christianity and the fruits of heathenism at the same time, and so has strengthened my faith in Christianity as the power of God and the wisdom of God unto salvation, not only in the life to come, but in this life.—Herald and Presbyter.

We are not afraid to go alone on a journey to a strange place where we are since that a friend will meet us at the end of the journey. The husband in a distant city telegraphs to his wife to come to him and he will be at the station to receive her. She sits amid strangers in the cars all day. She enters the depot filled with strangers at night But there is the one familiar face, there are the outstretched arms of love, and the loneliness that faith obeyed during the journey now ends in joyous fruition. But our blessed Saviour does not ask us to go far away into the spirit world with the assurance that he will meet us by and by. He comes down to the starting point of the strange journey. He takes us to himself the moment we enter the dark chariot of death. That terror of the unbelieving soul is the charioteer of Jesus for those who trust in him. So there is no loneliness in this trying hour. It is as when a bridegroom comes for his bride, takes her in his arms as she leaves the threshold of her old home, and bears her to the new home that he has prepared for her. There is nothing sweeter in all the revelation of God's love than that promise of his presence which removes the loneliness of death.—Interior.

THE COMING YEAR.

Before our feet, untrodden, lies
Another year;
And in our hearts grave thoughts arise,
Imbued with fear.

We know not what for us it holds
In coming days;
If we shall walk through dreary wolds,
Or pleasant ways;

If we shall waken to dismay,
Or grant surprise;
If o'er us skies be ever gray,
Or azure skies;

If we shall, pleased, survey at eve
Our work well done,
Or o'er our bootless task shall grieve
At set of sun;

If we shall mourn o'er quenched resolves—
As in the past;
Or joy to think, to know ourselves
Grown true at last;

If we shall weep o'er Christ denied
By deed or word;
Or find—we walking at his side,
Lifd are our ways
With him who openeth not to man
His book of days;

And so we dread this stranger year,
And from it shrink;
Yea, fain would pause reluctant bare
Upon the brink.

But hark! across the unknown way
No foot hath trod—
Comes to the fainting soul to day
The voice of God!

And courage kindles at the words:
And dread is fought:
For faith and doubt with "measure swords"
At God's "Fear not!

For I, the Lord thy God, will hold
E'en thy right hand!"
We shrink no more from brake or wold
Or desert land!

Dear Lord, since 'tis thy voice divine
That bids us go,
We lay our trembling hands in thine,
And face each foe:

With thee into the opening year
We bravely tread;
Our wandering feet shall know no fear—
Divinely led.

THE ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY.

"The Pennsylvania Society for Promoting the Abolition of Slavery, the Relief of Free Negroes Unlawfully Held in Bondage and the Improvement of the African Race," as it is called, held its annual meeting on Friday, Dec. 30 h.

The present is the 113th year since this Organization. During the past year, this society has been the active trustee of that portion of the income from its estate of the late John Parrish, devoted to the benefit of the colored people, (the other two-thirds being under the trusteeship of the Friends and Westtown Boarding School.)

The Treasurer reported receipts from this fund, including a balance in the hands of the late Dillwyn Parrish, of $1155 37, making with the interest, $1,200, the annual income of $2229 98 There was expended $2030 37 during the year, the following objects: Industrial Department Howard University, Washington, D C; Mount Pleasant School S C; Weaver School, Rosafras, Va.; Tuskegee University, Ala.; Mutoe Orphanage, Mount Pleasant, S C; three scholarships in Hampton University, Beaver College, Harper's Ferry, Va.; Colored School of Frankwork, Christiansburg, Va.; Schofield School, Aiken S C; Wilberforce University, O.; Laing School, S C; The Friends' Freedmen's Association; the Home for Destitute Colored Children, Maylandville; Home for Aged and Infirm Colored Persons; House of St. Michael and All Angels for Crippled Colored Children; St. Mary Street Day Nursery, and Bethany Mission for Colored Persons.

Several new appropriations of funds were made from the balance in hand and expected within the next three months. Interesting letters from various persons in the South were read.

The following was approved:

On motion, 26 in Boston, whilst on a visit to his children, suddenly, our friend Edward M. Davis was removed by death in his 67th year. This quick transition from life to futurity was in consonance with his feelings, and he had premonitory symptoms that such might be the result.

He took an active interest in the cause of anti-slavery when a young man and continued a prominent worker in it and other reformatory movements until his death, being particularly identified with the American Anti-Slavery Society and its Pennsylvania branch.

He was an earnest laborer, and was ever ready not only to give his time and efforts, but his means also, to further that which was for the good of mankind.

During the late slaveholders' rebellion, he was for awhile connected with General Fremont's staff at a time when that distinguished head of freedom was regarded as being in advance of other military generals in his understanding of the situation and the belief that the removal of slavery alone would settle the conflict. But when the emancipation proclamation which he had aided in preparing was published by order of the President, Edward resigned his position on the ground of principle.

After the war and the dissolution of the anti-slavery societies, he laboured in the cause of peace, rights of labor etc.

On the evening of 12 mo. 12, Wm. B. Thomas died in his 77 h year.

Born in this country and of Quaker descent, he soon found he must sever his connection with the Democratic party and identify himself with the cause of freedom. Removing to Philadelphia, his earnest sympathy, purse and address to principle made him a leader in the Liberty and Free Soil ranks and the main organizer of the Republican party in the city, being its first candidate for mayor, when less than 100 votes were polled.

President Lincoln appointed him Collector of the Port of Philadelphia and when there was a prospect of the rebels approaching this city he took part in the military ranks.

His interest in the cause of liberty continued to the last, although of late years not voting with the Republicans.

The following were chosen officers for the ensuing year: President, Parsons Williamson; Vice Presidents, T. Edwood Chapman, William Still; Treasurer, Henry M. Laing; Librarian, Thomas H. McCollin; Secretaries, Joseph M. Truman, Jr., and Wm. Hasket; Acting Committee P. Williamson, Alfred H Love, Albert R. Williams, Jacob C. White, Jr. William Still, H. M Laing, T. H McCollin; Committee on Property, P. Williamson, Nathaniel E. Janney and T H. McCollin. Board of Education, William Still, H M. Laing, W Hescock, J. M. Truman, Jr., M. Busby, N. E. Janney, M. Balderston, Alfred Moore, J C. White, Jr., Robert M. Janney, Lukens Webster, George T Laing and A. B. Love. Counsellors, Edward Harper, George H. Earle, Joseph Parrish, Joseph R. Rhoads and Alfred Moore.

The tobogganing season has been pursued in Essex county, N. J.

A good way to encourage a tramp is to show him a pile of cold wood and other little axe of kindness.

"I'm glad to see you in the Sunday school at last. Is this your first Sunday?" "Yes, sir." "How do you like it?" "Oh, I guess I can stand it till after the Christmas tree."—Tid-Bits.

Pennsylvania has two of the thirty-eight widows of Revolutionary soldiers who drew pensions from the Government. Susan Curtis, of Maine, and Nancy Rains, of Tennessee, each aged 95 years, are probably the oldest widows.

A Muff.—The Bangor, Me., Commercial says: A Belfast man is being constantly laughed at there this week, and our readers in this Christmas time would do well to profit by his experience He wished to make his wife a present of a muff and took home two for her to select from, one a cheap and the other a high priced article. Thinking to have a little fun at the expense of his better half, he changed the labels. The cheap one was very much admired but seeing the price on the ticket, the wife said they could not afford that and would take the other. It took a little as th ugh the joke was on the man of the house.

An extensive lumber enterprise is contemplated in California, and is thus referred to in a Fresno paper: The San Joaquin Lumber Company will start the building of a gigantic milling and lumber plant this month. The company will erect in the mountains three large saw mills, capable of turning out 200 000 feet of rough sawed lumber per day. This will be conveyed to a point about twenty miles from this city by a flume seventy miles long. Fourteen million feet of lumber will be required to build the flume. From the end of the flume lumber will be brought into this city by a dummy railroad. It this city there will be erected a large planing-mill and sash, door and blind factory, and all the timber sawed by the mills will be used up in that manner here. There is stand up in the belt of timber in the mountains, where the saw mills will be built, fully one billion two hundred million feet of rough sawed lumber, 9 0 0 0 0 0 0 of which is redwood. Fresno county has the largest grove of redwoods in the world, it being 3600 acres in extent, and the majority of the trees being from 20 to 35 feet in diameter. A branch flume, twenty miles long, will be built to tap this and a belt of sugar pine and yellow pine, which is estimated to contain 750 000 0 0 feet. Capital in the enterprise of $2 000 000 will be required for the undertaking.

OUR CENTENNIAL RETURNS.

In the list of names and amounts given below, we aim to be exact. We have every pastor to scan the report and see that it is correct, and that it corresponds with the amount mentioned in the receipt from us. We cannot give the names of officers and churches in every case, because not one-half of them were sent in, and while the whole amount raised is less than half what we reasonably hoped for, we tender our hearfelt thanks to the pastors and churches who generously raised the money sent us

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Jan 2nd, 1888.

IF YOU CAN'T COME TO THE STORE, SEND BY mail for sixth by you want, samples or goods

AT THE DRESS GOODS COUNTERS, HUNDREDS of seasonable, in trable stuffs.

The unprecedentous every day goods, which for a month past have been put into the background at many counters, are now coming to their own again. What's come many things that the great Festival has crowded out of thought; things that you will be glad to find within your reach

Look about and look about, there's a plenty to see The Store is like a river at the foot, of a mountain down whose sides a score of steady streams are pouring While the outlet is into the ocean of people, the daily inletting keeps every thing full and fresh

A SURPRISE IN BLANKETS. ABOUT THE BIGgest Blanket we have is 84x90 inches—8½ pounds of it One of the best and prettiest Blankets we ever sold is 11-4 size, 7 lbs. To-day you shall have them at $6 50 a pair; a fifth or one-fifteen (15th) inch) and a little (lighter 7½ pounds), $5

Number of the Blanket surprises Seven pounds of wool—no, there is maybe half a pound of cotton wrap in it. $4 25 for a pair

And so on through all our Blankets from baby's size (3 feet by 4) to the Best Fleecy "Californian" or "North tar" (12 10 38.50)

WHOEVER WANTS TO KNOW WHAT GOOD Judge think of the just-out Books, and of the same in general, can find out by looking. Nobody sold for, has a direct interest in Book NEWS. 8c., 50c. a year.

Our London Suits, $9.00
Our Imported Trousers, $3.50
Our London Overcoats, $12.00

The shelves is those offered between good quality, fashionable woolen goods and all woolen imitations of the same With prices in favor of the genuine articles.

Why should you pay $5.0 for a pair of "Imitation Scotch goods" when the real article can be had for $3 50, and cut by Thompson's Patent System. Unequaled for comfort, style, fit

Again comes the question:

How does E. O. Thompson sell these excellent goods at such prices?

There is no tailoring business in the United States (to the best of our knowledge), that sells such large quantities of English goods as our three houses.

There is no house in London that has such favorable purchasing powers and opportunities as our own London house

There are certain reasons we have for wishing to turn over these goods at a bare commission

The result is—Almost before we knew it we found ourselves underselling the entire clothing trade of the United States.

BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES

Contain ingredients which act specially on the organs of the voice. They have an extraordinary efficiency in all affections of the Throat, caused by cold or over-exertion of the voice. They are recommended to Singers and Public Speakers, and all who, at any time, have a cough or trouble with the throat or lungs. "I recommended their use to speakers." Rev E. H. Chapin. "Practically the best."—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

A Vermont school-teacher, who sent out a request to parents that she should specify in writing the principal reading of their children, received the following terse reply from one head of a family: "Dear Madam: The main reading of my boy is Mayne Reid."

Health is impossible when the blood is impure, thick, and sluggish, or when it is thin and impoverished. Such conditions give rise to boils, pimples, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, and other ailments. Ayer's Sarsaparilla purifies, vitalizes, and vitalizes the blood.

A Vassar girl being asked by her teacher what kind of noun "kiss" was, replied with a blush, that it was both proper and common.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a purely vegetable preparation, being free from all injurious ingredients. It is rarely ever necessary to exceed one bottle to effect a cure pable of improvements, as such, upon the same conditions and by the same means as the white M. E Church and our colored M. E's connected with them; and that, therfore, we African M. E's must have an extra arrangement to accomplish the same kind and amonot of work that is performed by a similar number of white people under like circumstances. With nothing to particularly retard our desired progress but poverty and ignorance, which must be surmounted by degrees, and in times to come, if we will but strive, we will succeed in common with others, and by the use of the same ordinary means.

From any standpoint which it may be urged that it is necessary for our Church to have this unusual number of Bishops in order that we may have success, when carefully considered it must reflect upon us in one or two distinct ways. 1, That we are not capable of concessing of the great and all essential principles of true and fullest success, or, 2d, that we are not capable of developing our beings through those principles, as other people develop themselves. To claim that we need this number of Bishops to give a force sufficient to do the work of that office in our Church is equivalent to admitting so many words that come Bishop in the M E Church and the M. E. Church, South, not excepting the cases of the M. E Church where she has to deal with and govern a wing of her church composed of colored people in the same coud tions as we, and almost as numerous as we are, to be equal to, and to actually do as much effective work as four or six of our Bishops. Or, if you say that we need this unusual number of Bishops to act as restraints upon our people, in order to properly govern and discipline them, so as to make them competent lor any and every useful position in life, then you either admit (indirectly, at least), that we are not answerable to the same all-important principles of greatness that the white man is, or that we have not the abilities to improve ourselves upon these principles as the white man has and does. Any way you argue these affirmatives, the logical consequences are of the same damaging effect upon us.

Now, I am one of those who believe that all the colored man needs, in State or Church, in the United States, is to let the authorities to take out of his way every legal obstruction, give him protection in all of his rights, and he will be found worthy. Give him access to the same means and channels of improvements as other people have, and the time to do the work, and he will, as a whole, improve proportionally, as other people have, and will become useful, influential and strong in like manner. Then if I am right, we need no such unusual number of Bishops on the grounds of any of the arguments in Article XVIII, "More Bishops."

NOTES BY THE WAY.

BY BISHOP A. W. WAYMAN.

MR EDITOR:—After spending a few days in New Orleans, when I was making ready to go to Thibodeaux, where Rev. A. A Price is stationed, I heard it was not very safe to go there at that time for a war was raging between the owners of the sugar plantations and the laborers who had struck for higher wages. The affair grew alarming, the soldiers were called out. The colored people began to leave the town and to seek refuge in the city of New Orleans. When the pastor, Rev. A. A. Price, came to the city—for he had to flee—he gave the correct information of the condition of the whole affair, which was very sad indeed. Without entering into the particulars, he stated that there was considerable shooting at that place and several persons were killed, and among them an old blind woman, one of the oldest members of our Church there. She was shot down in her house, and that the town was entirely deserted by our people. From the last accounts from there everything was quieted down and the laborers were going to work again. These disturbances affect the financial interest of our Church very much in that part of the State.

On Saturday, with some fears, I left the city of New Orleans for Franklin, La I had to pass through that part of the State where that excitement had existed, but I saw nothing that showed any more signs of war. On reaching Franklin I found Rev. T. D. Smalls, the pastor of our Church at Pattersonville, who informed me that he had to leave his charge because he had taken part with the Knights of Labor. In his flight he had to lay in a pond of water for several hours; finally he escaped. On Monday afternoon I moved toward Texas, and by 11 o'clock P. M., I reached Beaumont, Tex., where the conference met. The Texas Conference is the mother conference in the State, but the most of her members are young men of great promise. There was some interest in the election of delegates to the ensuing General Conference On the first ballot Rev J. E. Edwards and J. F P. Bradley were elected, and on the second ballot Russel Deal was the successful candidate. The conference was well sustained for a small place like Beaumont On Sunday there was a gathering of the friends and members of the A. M E. Church The pastor of the M E. Church closed his church and his members worshiped with us.

Monday afternoon memorial services were held in respect to the memory of Bishop Cain and Shorter and also Bro. Henry Porter, a member of the Texas Conference. The chairman of the committee on memoire, Dr. Pyle, read an elaborate report. Addresses were delivered by Brothers Makiel, Randolph and Deal. The conference met at 7 o'clock on Monday night to close up its business, and finally adjourn at 11 o'clock and 1.30 o'clock the preachers took out from Beaumont like wind geese from the North, when the winter is approaching. When we reached Houston, there we met the ministers of the Texas Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and when the train started there was a large body of divinity on board, and as soon as the ministers found out that we were from conference also—Rev. J. M Bird, missionary secretary of the M. E. Church, gave them that information—they were anxious to know something about the extent of our work, and in order to avoid talking much I gave them one of Dr Arnett's Budgets and they read for themselves and said it was a history of itself.

THE BIBLE: ITS RELATION TO MANKIND.

BY D WILSOBN.

The Bible is the only book which has brought relief to the human soul and which mankind never tiers reading. This book has never caused mankind any mental uneasiness, but has brought him relief whenever he needed it; it is still on trial and will be until time shall be no more. Men have tried all other books, but this grand old volume still shines forth like the moon at night, giving light to all the world. The Old Testament is being the most severely criticised; but, thank God, with all her critic sm she still shines forth in her glory. The apostolic history and the story of Christ, although attacked and criticised by men of all creeds, has been authenticated. So will the Old Testament pass through the struggle triumphantly the same. The Bible has grown in the midst of all its opposition. Its numbers of copies has increased immensely and yet the demand for them, to-day, is incomprehensible.

Some may ask: "What has the Bible done?" It has civilized the Sandwich Islands, and its influence is rapidly spreading throughout all the heathen lands. The ray of light which has been taken there by the missionaries has convinced many of the idol worshipers that there is a true God What it has done in Scotland, in Rome, in France, in England and the United States is already known. It is the common law of the United States The Chief Executive takes his oath of office with his hand on the Bible. Scientists have tested it and found it consistent with science. It has escaped the astronomical errors of the ancient and accords with modern research. It is the only ancient book that has escaped such errors, and hence, it must have been inspired The conflict is between science and the human interpretations placed upon the Bible. Some men have construed that their interpretations are not the teachings of the Bible. I believe in the inspiration of the Bible and also in the authentic facts of science. When both are properly taught there can be no conflict whatever. The Bible gives a rational account of the creation of the world and is the only ancient authority that does. The Bible is triumphant over all the earth and is adapted to all people no matter how different they are. It is as perfectly adapted to man as the air is to be lungs. It triumphs over the individual and this is its greatest triumph. No science has ever saved a drunkard from his sins; but the Bible has. It has triumphed over its enemies—ancient and modern. It has no enemies now as of old. It can easily withstand the attacks of Robert Ingersoll or any other skeptic who is trying to contradict its authority. Thomas Paine has failed to accomplish its ruin, and Ingersoll will follow in his footsteps. The Bible is overthrown frequently according to its assertion that Christ has said, "Before one jot or tittle of my word shall fail, heaven and earth shall pass away" Every one who attacks the Bible admits that previous attacks were fruitless Some say the Bible is obsolete Then why not let it alone? People do not attack obsolete books as they do the Bible. Slavery has been killed and now no one attacks it because it is dead. Men attack the Bible because it is alive. It comes to bless your homes, to baptize your children, to bury your dead and to bless until the last century of time. Men of all ages must have acknowledged the grand old book, and generation after generation yet to come will pay their homage to it and acknowledge its superiority over all other books. Well has it been styled the "Book of books."

OUR CHILDREN'S EDUCATION.

The moral culture of a man, and so much of the intellectual as is coudcive hereto is essential to his education. Whatever of intellectual culture is beyond this may be regarded as partaking to apprenticeship and should appertain to the demand for which the apprenticeship is designed to qualify. Thus if a youth is to become a sculptor or artist, he should be instructed, first, morally; secondly, intellectually. Not in a limited degree, but as far as such instruction can go, and he is capable of receiving, and that which may be termed excess of knowledge go into the apprenticeship of the coming artist in order that he may have a high conception of the beautiful, true and good It is axiomatic that limited moral, as well as intellectual, training nulls the man to produce beyond his ability to see.

Let us here define apprenticeship. By the term we recognize the fitting or adapting of ourselves to the special or specific work or profession of life. By education we mean the leading out of the mind in all directions or the taking in of all kinds of essential and accessible knowledge. An eminent writer was wont to say: "The man whose education is without apprenticeship will be useless." The man whose education is all apprenticeship will be had, and, therefore, pernicious, and the more so in proportion as his function is high, noble and influential. This fact makes a thrust at many of the present systems of educators. The cry of reform comes to us across the mountains, from every city and hamlet. The history of America and her institutions produce proofs beyond doubt that reformation is necessary in the education of her youth, if they are to administer the affairs of this great Republic.

That a man is had whose education is all apprenticeship, we have only to read the pages of church history: Alexander was educated to be a king; Hannibal, to be a general. Their entire course of training was an apprenticeship, which resulted in no great benefit to mankind nor real good to themselves. Suicide was the end of each. In later days it was a custom among the clergy of England to educate their sons for the church. Hence, their education was confined to just such studies as were necessary to make efficient ministers. The outrageous and atrocious acts committed by these very men show the force of our assertion as quoted. "He whose education is all apprenticeship, will be bad" Had they been educated on the broader and more universal principle, first learning all they can of things or getting knowledge in general before entering upon a course in preparation for the church, they would have become benefactors to mankind and succeeding generations would have sung their praises. But we will not speak a word for the embordinate classes to which most of the negro race belong.

The system of education for them, for the most part, is defective. It aims to qualify the pupil for his or her station or gives him the hope of rising above that station, either to make the man a laborer or the laborer a gentleman, in the society me of the term, discipline and improvement being postponed, and too often altogether neglected or omitted. Likewise, the libation of the higher classes is defective. When it makes a gentleman to be a gentleman only; when it refers the primary duties, the rank and not to universal obligations. Again, when it inculcates the acquirements of mental and personal accomplishments as ultimate ends, without reference to practical utility or to self-education. Again there is defect when all apprenticeship is omitted or when the apprenticeship is antagonistic to the peculiar individual and functionary duties, as when a section of nobility is crowned with the arbitrary technicalities of professed scholarship or when the pupil will waste time in learning to do for himself what his wash-woman could do better for him.

Again, where the whole education is subservient to the apprenticeship, this, perhaps, is the greatest defect to which both classes are victims. The great attacks were fruitless. Some say the Bible is obsolete Then why not let it alone? People do not attack obsolete books as they do the Bible. Slavery has been killed and now no one attacks it because it is dead. Men attack the Bible because it is alive. It comes to bless your homes, to baptize your children, to bury your dead and to bless until the last century of time. Men of all ages must have acknowledged the grand old book, and generation after generation yet to come will pay their homage to it and acknowledge its superiority over all no claim to title or ancestry which will advance them to a standing among their fellowmen. A well grounded education bears a creditable resemblance to steadiness and industry. It wins the applause of parents and tutors. It makes the shining and rising young men and women—statesmen, judges, chancelors and ministers of state. But it does not make good men or wise men either Even if it does leave the heart uninjured it keeps the mind unnaturally ignorant, for, viewing all things in an artificial relation to one object, it sees and therefore knows nothing in its true relation to man, the universe. The more the knowledge, the greater the error. Hence the greater their command of the written Word, yet, cheering fact, it keeps the mind unnaturally ignorant, for, viewing all things in an artificial relation to one object, it sees and therefore knows nothing in its true relation to man, the universe. The more the knowledge, the greater the error. Hence the greater their command of the written Word, yet, cheering fact, there are thousands of negro families who have copies of the Bible.

I summon the American Missionary Association and the African Methodist Episcopal Church, who were the first to leap into the breach at Norfolk, Va., and bear the blood-red banner of the army of Christ during the war, to testify through their missionaries as to whether their parishioners are destitute of the Bible. I summon those lion-hearted labourants who have traversed every State in the South. D. A. Payne, J. P. Campbell, John M. Brown, A. W. Wayman and H. M. Turner, men whose battle cry is, "We seek our brethren!"—I summon them, I say, to tell the Church whether the lamp of life shines in only a few negro families in the South. I stand by the clayey mansions of silence and ask the departed Shorter, Dickerson and Cain to speak, and with one accord they say: "The Word of God is not bound" Smith of Mason's time." I summon Bible societies and colporteurs to tell what they know about it. I call upon Baptist, Presbyterian Episcopal, Methodist, North, A. M E Zion, and resident pastors of all orthodox denominations to inform the Boston Watchman: It was caught napping, not in the South; but in Israel Massachusetts. In vivid response to the challenge, "Watchman, what of the night," is heard the cheerful declaration from those watch towers of the church, the pulpit and school house, "the morning dawneth," and in emphatic contradiction to the report of "B. Griffith, Secretary," is ever whose sequitur the statement in question was written, they reverse his weapon by adding the truth that thousands and tens of thousands of the young people of the South can and do read the Holy Scriptures.

The reports of hasty observers, newspaper correspondents who make flying visits to southern fields, should be read with mental reservation. They usually enter a city or town; carry a few hours or two or three days; converse, not seldom, with the fallen brethren who mourn the loss of their black, brown and yellow property (?) and afterwards the sympathetic, well-fed visitors write tearful communications to Northern papers depicting that semi-barbarism, the Southern negro. They substantially say:

"The negro in the Southland Bows down to God unknown."

To array statistics before the readers of the RECORDER to disprove the statement that there are but a few Bibles among the colored people of the South is as needless as would be an attempt to prove that Alaska is in the interior of Africa, or that Cape Horn is in B. T. Tanner's coat pocket.

The statements of those who abide in the field and hear the burden and heat of the day, weigh a thousand fold more than those of any transient visitor.

PROF. SAMPSON REPLIES TO ELDER DIGGS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN RECORDER:

MY DEAR SIR: Since an article in the RECORDER of November 24 b, by Rev. J. T Diggs, in reply to Bishop Campbell on disembordination, refers to myself, please allow me a few words. Now, there is no use of "beating around the bush" about irrelevant matters, for it begs the whole subject. The question is not who is the best Christian gentleman, nor the greatest church worker, for I presume every clergyman claims a large share of both, and yet I would prefer to hear others speak of what we have done rather than to speak of it ourselves, for generally the estimate we put upon ourselves was taken from what others put upon us, the remainder might not be so great, after all. I can, but I will not, reply to the slurs that were offered in reference to myself, for they always reflect more upon those who give them than they do upon those for whom they are intended; besides, they are unbecoming a religious journal. The elder tells a part of the truth, but let us go, to women and children. Almost all of the colored people in the South are without the written word of God! The credulity or stupidity of the author of this amazing misstatement must be as high as heaven and deeper than hell. It must be co extensive with the universe,

It is a quarter of a century since the gospel of slavery, "servants, obey your masters or be scourged," was struck dumb and smitten with paralysis by the herculean arm of justice. Then began the true gospel, the glorious gospel of the blessed God, to have free course in its work of uplifting prostrate humanity. During this initial period of the new era of Christianity, churches have sent companies and regiments, brigades and corps of consecrated soldiers of Christ, male and female, negro and white, to teach the way of life. Every pastor and pious teacher who has labored in the South can testify that although in the depressing times of the one-way rural districts there are many families destitute of the written Word, yet, cheering fact, there are thousands of negro families who have copies of the Bible.

I summon the American Missionary Association and the African Methodist Episcopal Church, who were the first to leap into the breach at Norfolk, Va., and bear the blood-red banner of the army of Christ during the war, to testify through their missionaries as to whether their parishioners are destitute of the Bible. PROF. SAMPSON REPLIES TO ELDER DIGGS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CHRISTIAN RECORDER:

A FALSE ALARM.

BY REV. WM. H. MORRIS, A. M.

"There are in the Southern States six millions or more of colored people, almost all of whom are destitute of a Bible. And yet thousands and tens of thousands of the young colored people can read!"

The Boston Watchman, in its issue of October 27, 1887, gave the above precious bit of information to its readers. That there are 6 000,000 or more negroes in the South is true; that almost all of them are destitute of a Bible is not true. How the editor of that staid, orthodox and admirable journal allowed a correspondent to publish that palpable absurdity is a wonder to men and angels, to women and children. Almost all of the colored people in the South are without the written word of God! The credulity or stupidity of the author of this amazing misstatement must be as high as heaven and deeper than hell. It must be co extensive with the universe, pondence with myself by a member of the committee in favor of the first proposition, Bishop Campbell writes to the committee through its chairman (myself), more than once, directing the collection to its proper channel; then in company with another elder (brother Webb), I took the letter to Rev. Diggs and we read it together, but after some consideration then and there, he decided to hold the money till conference, and these facts, date, etc., are recorded on the margin of the letter in my possession, duly attested by the person present. I shall be sorry if Elder Diggs denies this, for the same is implied by the correspondence as well. I do not think he intended any wrong, other than pride of opinion in the matter. He made no pathetic appeal for sympathy then, as now. The Bishop said in his letter, "if not turned over at once," some one will be hurt by my public statement, just as Brother Diggs now confesses to be.

I thought the Bishop's claims were just, and advised accordingly. Then, to save myself from appearing ridiculous and officious, however humble I might claim to be afterwards, gave up all the correspondence. I have nothing against Brother Diggs, and it is always my to keep out of trouble with brethren; yet I see how he thinks I influenced the Bishop's letter, because the facts were based now and quoted from correspondence in my possession, which I handed over to save myself, for I did not desire to be held responsible as a member of the committee for his persistency; because I think when we find that we are wrong, the bravest and the most manly thing to do is to acknowledge it, not plead for sympathy and attempt to justify ourselves, for the most defiant is often the most suppliant when discovered in the weakness of force of reason, yet he is ashamed and unwilling to acknowledge that HE was wrong.

Respectfully, etc.,
J. P. SAMPSON.

FINANCES OF THE AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH.

NO. II.

BY REV. CYTHE C. FELTS.

Plans inspired of God may only serve their immediate purpose in getting money for religious enterprises, as the same specific plans seem to appear but once for the same general object in the

We have no lot for this congregation at present We have the use of the school-house. Land is reasonable and a good site can be had for one hundred dollars if purchase was made now, and an additional hundred dollars would give such confidence in our efforts that others would assist at once, and the necessary means could be secured to put this little congregation into a little home.

Mission No. 3 is just being organized. We have rented a house for five dollars a month. This is also a child of Bethel Church, and is due to the energy of Bro. C. M. C Willis, who, with Bro. Abram Golden, has organized the last named points, or I should say worked up the matter to the point of organization. Some time ago I said through the columns of the RECORDER that if we had six hundred dollars we could secure three more churches here in this business centre, giving us five churches. Rev. C. O H. Thomas, in the Southern Recorder, ridicules the idea, and makes a senseless talk in opposition thereto. I have here shown that we have two churches already organized, and the third ready for organization. Three Sbbath schools, and a lot 50x150 worth $150.00, and all has not yet cost us $75 00.

Possibly Bro. Thomas has been more fortunate than many of us in that he has had work that has been organized for him, and therefore he may have no experience in working with small means. There are those among us who have always worked to spread African Methodism, and know what it takes to organize the work, besides I thought Bro. Thomas knew that the term church does not apply alone to a building. The gas excitement here is great, and the indications are that a greatly increased population and multiplicity of business interests will obtain in our midst. Street R. R. lines are being extended; cable lines are projected, and we are in the midst of a boom in real estate. If we could command six hundred dollars for a term of years, at a low rate of interest, we could so situate and advance our mission work; that we could make the missions spoken of healthy and influential churches in a short time. Bro. G. H. White is the pastor in charge of the Indianapolis mission work. He is energetic and efficient, and will under God do a good work. The outlook is very favorable. We are proposing to push forward the work. Rev. A. M. Lewis, at Allen Chapel, is making gigantic strides forward, and is also giving substantial aid to the mission work in the eastern portion of the city.

Dr. D. P. Roberts, eagle-eyed, is on the alert as presiding elder, as is Rev. J. Furgeson, presiding elder of the First District, including Bethel Church, and thus there is formed a combination, with God leading in the van that shall extend the borders of the A. M. E. Church in Indianapolis. There is territory to be taken. Forward is the battle cry.

HO, FOR AFRICA.

DEAR EDITOR: I wish to announce through the columns of our valuable paper to the Bishops, general officers, preachers and members of the African Methodist Episcopal Church of which I am a member and minister, that I am a candidate for the African mission field.

For which work I feel that I am called of God and from my experience in the great work of mission I find a special adaptation. I have entertained a sincere desire for the above work for twenty years, but in consideration of an apparent deficiency in both literature and experience, I have until three years ago contented myself in my native land, endeavoring to acquire a sufficient amount of literary training and experimental knowledge of the mission work to fit myself for the task of teaching and preaching, so requisite to the work of God and immortal souls in a foreign land.

I have carefully considered the dangers and sufferings to which missionary life exposes one, especially among the heathen. I am willing to forsake all who are near and dear to me in my native land for the gospel's sake. Therefore I announce to the church and world my readiness and desire to go to Africa and engage to raise the bloodstained banner of Calvary's groaning Christ.

In 1885, while our beloved Bishop Rt. Rev. R H Cain, was holding the N. E Annual Conference in the city of New Bedford, Mass, I gave my name with others for the African work, but since then have heard nothing of the matter, and feeling moved by the spirit of God I avail myself of the opportunity of making known to the church at large throughout the United States of America my intentions and desires. I am willing to go as soon as the church may see it prudent to send me to our fatherland. Hoping that this may meet the approbation of the Bishops and church, and that sufficient means may be provided by which I can accominate the amount requisite for the journey and support while there, I announce myself as a candidate for African mission work under the auspices of the A. M. E Church, for the civilization and evangelization of our African brethren who live in heathen blindness.

WOMAN SUCCEEDS.

ONE OF THE SUCCESSFUL ONES TELLS HOW IT IS DONE

No proper estimate of the future economical progress of the country can be made, that does not take into consideration an element which may be termed "the woman in business."

She is knocking at all the doors of commercial enterprise, and there are very few into which she has not already forced an entrance. The results seem to indicate that, beyond a doubt, she has come to stay.

She cannot perhaps often reach the levers which move the great driving wheels of business, but she proves a most important factor in the minor but scarcely less important machinery of detail.

Phil Armour's private secretary is a young lady who was first employed as a stenographer and type-writer. She proved so capable and efficient that her sphere of usefulness has been gradually enlarged until she now has probably a closer acquaintance with Armour's extended business than any other person connected with it.

It need to be claimed that women had neither physical nor mental stamina to conduct a large business.

Mrs. Frank Leslie has made a success of as complicated a business enterprise as almost any in the country. The strong point in this case is that when she took the helm, the Frank Leslie Publishing Company had but a short time previously failed.

Madam Demorest conducts a very extensive business, which includes the publishing of a magazine. Mrs. Annie Jeuness Miller conducts a famous dress reform movement, and is also the editress of a very successful magazine called "Dress." Her daily mail is said to be larger than that of any other woman in the United States.

Mrs. Miller says, "Water's safe cure is the only medicine I ever take or recommend. The safe cure has the effect to give new energy and vitality to all my powers."

These women have demonstrated that the sex can succeed in business if they take proper care of their health. That is the main point, even with the sterner sex, and it is the subject to which, above all others, the women of to-day should give their attention. And here, as everywhere, it comes in play the old maxim: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Church News.

Rev. H. Talbert, Jamaica, N. Y., writes: Our new church at Weethny is completed, and was formally opened Christmas day. The work has been done at a cost of about $1 500, of which $1,100 has been receipted, and our efforts now are to the end that every bill be receipted before the dedication, which will take place in May.

Rev. J. M. Henderson, St. Paul, Minn., writes: St. James' A. M. E. Church is again to the front. The fair which began December 10 h, and closed December 26 h, took in $1.345 80, of which over $1,000.00 is clear profit. Have we any church with one hundred members that can beat this? Our next entertainment is the centennial celebration. Though somewhat early on account of so many other things being on the programme ahead of it, yet I believe St Paul's people will not be behind. Since August 10 h we have raised in clear cash over $4 000.00.

R. B. Brown, Fulton, Mo., writes: The A. M. E. Church, under the pastoral charge of Rev F. M. Dale has been for some weeks engaged in a series of meetings and has been wonderfully blessed with the outpouring of the Spirit to the great joy of believers, of ever sinners mourning under the great weight of sin, being converted and joining the church. For some years the church has been in a very bad condition, but thanks be to God for the past two years we have not so many winds of adversity to battle against, but Christians of other churches join and aid us with their prayers and singing. On Sunday, December 18h, at 2.30 o'clock P. M., Rev. T. G. Whitten, of the M. E Church South, preached us a noble sermon which will no doubt be long felt and never forgotten. His text was Titus II., 13 and 14. Our Sunday school is doing wonderfully. December 25, the school was opened with proper ceremony conducted by our pastor and twelve children were admitted to our school. The Xmas tree on Saturday night, the first this church ever gave, was nice.

THE SUMTER (S. C.) DISTRICT.

BY REV. A. WESTON.

MR. EDITOR: After three years' services on the Sumter District I am appointed to the Columbia District as presiding elder. I can only say to your many readers the Sumter District has stood well together between two fires, that is trouble in the districts, the Columbia and the Manning Districts. They have suffered heavy loss, but the Sumter District has lost nothing, but has gained in membership and good churches. I only wish her continued success, and as I am leaving I will give the last annual statistics for the Sumter District:

Received on probation, 398; into full membership 271; by certificate, 56; the number of deaths, 67; the number of full members on the district, 3,435; the number of probationers, 646; the increase for the year, 429; adults baptized, 135; children, 141; the number of Sunday schools, 27; number of pupils in Sunday schools, 1,625; number of books in libraries, 2,247; collected for Sunday school purposes, $232 17; collected for building purposes and repairs, $1,414 63; indebtedness of Trustees, $675 18; the presiding elder's receipts, $738 52; paid to visiting preachers, $128 79; the pastors received $3,047.78. We have one district school that was organized in 1885, and opened October 12th, 1885. We desired to start a long-felt want in the district by offering to all a school of a higher grade—a preparatory school for entering the college course. Some have gone to Claflin University, at Orangeburg, S. C., with recommendation and Rev. D. A. Allen of Mercy the first year with recommendation, and the professors say that these are the schools that will be food to colleges. This district school in Sumter is in its third term. We have a competent teacher and professor in the person of J. C. Whittaker. The school numbered up to the Christmas holidays 70 pupils; the prospect looks fair for one hundred.

This school is run nine months in the year, and is supported mostly by the scholars. The school has had a good superintendent in the person of the Rev. James C. Sampson, and now myself and Sampson leave, we trust that others may take hold of the school and carry it on to perfection.

FROM LONDON, ENGLAND.

A patron of "Compound Oxygen," writing to Drs. Starkey & Palen, from London, England, says:

"I lose no opportunity in making known the blessings of Compound Oxygen, but people are hard to be convinced. That people should be slow to accept the wonderful statements of what has been accomplished by this remarkable curative agent is not surprising, but a full examination into the evidence, which is very abundant, satisfies even the most incredulous." Any person who wishes a statement of what Compound Oxygen is—"Its Mode of Action and Results"—may have it free, postpaid, on sending address to Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

We are not in this world merely for the little things we can do, but also to have a work done in us, to be trained and disciplined for the higher service that awaits us in the other life. Parents seek to train their children, but in doing so they are themselves trained, teachers teach their classes, but the reflex work which is wrought upon their own lives is oftimes greater than that which they do for their scholars. We sometimes shade as the commonness and the littleness of the tasks that the days bring to us. We think we might do finer things. But possibly these are the very duties in the patient doing of which our lives shall grow into the rarest beauty and grace. All all, we should remember always that the things we do are not half so important as the way we do them and the effect upon ourselves of the doing of them.—The Westminster Teacher.

AN INHALER THAT WILL CURE CATARRH, ASTHMA, THROAT AND CHEST TROUBLES.

If you are a sufferer from any of the above diseases, and have been so long, you have become very skeptical, but if you will try the Pillow Inhaler, your skepticism as to the possibility of relief and a cure will become vividly apparent to you each day.

Introducing, as it does, an entirely new form of inhalation, in the most powerful cure that has ever been discovered.

The inhalation is done at night, whilst taking ordinary rest and refreshment in sleep. The inhaler is apparently an elegant hair-pillow, and contains no pipes or tubes, but it does have concealed reservoirs in which are poured the inhalent mixture (which accompanies the Inhaler), the volatile vapors of which permeate the patient's inflamed tubes and air-cells, and produce marvelous results. It is perfectly safe, and can be used by anyone.

Inhaling for a few minutes a day by the old-fashioned method of portable tube inhalers sometimes cured; imagine the increased power arising from a prolongation of the act to about eight hours in every twenty-four.

Mr. Charles Breed, Titusville, Pa., writes: In March, 1885, I was attacked with bronchitis which speedily developed into pneumonia and completely prostrated me. I got a little better but could not work. My friends were a armed about my condition. I went West, spent the summer in the dry climate of Nebraska, came home in September and commenced the use of the Pillow-Inhaler. I improved steadily from that time on, both in flesh and health. It induced sound and refreshing sleep and extracted the soreness from my lungs. My breathing and respiration became free and almost perfect. To day I am a comparatively well man, working hard every day. It is a pleasure to me to give this testimony to what I believe to be a truly meritorious remedy.

Mrs E. E. Gant, 705 Corinthian Avenue, Philadelphia, says: It is with great pleasure that I recommend the use of the Pillow-Inhaler in all pulmonary and catarrhal troubles, having used it constantly for some time. I am stronger, cough less, and rest well at night, and I really think it is what is claimed for it.

Mr. J. Corbidge, 2308 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, writes: I have had catarrh and bronchitis for years so bad that I had lost all sense of smell, and had given up all hope of ever getting any better. After using the Pillow-Inhaler a few weeks, my sense of smell returned, and the pain has left my chest. I would not be without it.

I would like to know more about the Pillow-Inhaler, send for a pamphlet and testimonials, which will be mailed you free of charge; or call and see it. Address: The Pillow-Inhaler Co., 1520 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Poor Directors of Barks county, Pa., have been figuring on the money value of sermons, and come to the conclusion that they are worth three dollars each—at least they intend paying that amount to clergymen who preach at the almshouse.

The most remarkable cures of scrofula on record have been accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine is unequalled for diseases of the blood. 100 doses one dollar.

A Reform Burial Association has been organized in Cleveland, Ohio, for the purpose of "stopping the extravagance now existing as to burial expenditures." Among other things the members agree to attend the funeral of fellow-members when invited, but will not ride in any conveyance hired by the family of the deceased, nor will carriages be hired except for the family of the deceased and the pall-bearers. They also agree to refrain from all ostentatious display of mourning apparel, decorations, etc.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO GENERAL CONFERENCE DELEGATES.—It annoys us that there is no standing committee on railroad arrangements, I have made application for reduced rates to the General Conference which meets in Indianapolis, Ind., May 7, 1888. The reduction, if granted, will cover every section of the country, and extend to every delegate, as well as to such other persons as may desire to attend. Delegates will please not endeavor to make local arrangements until further notice.

REVIVALS are the order of the day. Many of our churches have very interesting meetings.

OUR TARDINESS last week resulted mainly from delays caused in changing printers. We have not yet caught up with ourselves, but we trust we shall reach our patrons in proper time next week.

THE Union A. M. E. Church, Philadelphia holds a social this Thursday evening; no entrance fee nor table fee is charged. It is to be entirely in the interest of social religious development. This is a good step. This church has no festivals, fairs or anything of the kind.

THE A. M. E. CHURCH at Walnut Hille, is out of debt, as we intimated a few weeks ago. The folks are jubilant, as well they might be. Cincinnati Church is also out of debt. A long siege she has had, pulling Allen Temple out from under the heavy burden. They both have valuable properties and able pastors.

THE LETTER from Rev. W. H. Heard in this number, as well as the article of Mr. Fortune in our last, calls up this subject of our race in respect to intersympathy. A severe sentence in a letter received some days ago struck us as rash as well as severe. It was to the effect that the American colored people deserve no better treatment than they receive from these railroads, because they do not unite in affording ample relief to those who are suing for better treatment. It occurred to us to ask how much these same gentlemen, who are thus scolding the entire race, themselves excepted, have contributed to the relief of other sufferers who have preceded them; for we have had such sufferers. There has been a good deal of money contributed to some of them. Some of it amounted to nothing, it is true, but it was given. The colored race is not characteristically indifferent to its suffering members. If we find but a few such men among us who respond to these just appeals, the same condition exists among other people. We are charged also with being slow to organize in one common interest; this charge is probably based upon weak comparison. If certain agencies are put to work among us with a vigor and life equivalent to that which characterized the establishment of union leagues and other bands of union among us, we shall find ourselves very much like the Irishman and all other men.

WE ARE but too glad to publish the article from Brother Frederick, denying that Dr. Blyden has gone over to Mohammedanism. We not only profess Christianity, but believe in Christianity. We therefore wish Christianity to succeed. We do not believe in any other religion; hence do not wish it to succeed. We believe in the negro race-variety, hence we wish the negro race-variety to succeed. We believe also in all other race-varieties, therefore we wish all to succeed. It Dr. Blyden is with the Mohammedans, but not of them, that he may gain them to Christ, we say, amen; but if Dr. Blyden or any other Christian is with the Mohammedans, abandoning Christianity, because Christians have failed to conduct Christian affairs properly then we should feel that he was very inconsistent; for a right thing should not be dropped because its management is wrong, any more than a wrong thing should be adopted because it has been wisely and adroitly managed. It is a relief to know that Dr. Blyden, one of the ablest negroes, has not set himself against his own record and against the interests of all mankind for any cause whatever. It is not an unreasonable guess, that Islamism will never become the general religion of the human race. Its history would seem to make any man shudder at the idea of its becoming the religion of the darker races alone Its history will hardly warrant any one's giving it any more honorable place than he would give Christianity. By all general principles Christianity would seem to have the superior place in reason.

WE CANNOT agree with the editor of the A. M. E. Review in respect to the Roman Catholics. As a matter of fact, white Catholics cannot be said to be any more friendly to the American negro than white Protestants. Their religious declarations may be fairer, and, in some sense, their ecclesiasticism more assuring to the colored race, but do white Catholic individuals show themselves any more fraternal to black Catholic individuals than do white Protestant individuals toward black Protestant individuals? We believe they do not, and, therefore, we must warn our brethren against the sophistry of an ecclesiasticism that probably fosters more American negro-haters than all the Protestant Churches combined. An acknowledgement of negroes in their communion to disregard them individually is not commendable. Are they not adopting for all it is worth, the separate school and church system so common among protestants? Mr. Blyden may be perfectly correct in saying that Mohammedans, as individuals, maintain no race lines, but this cannot be said of Roman Catholics. Mr. Blyden seems, himself, an exception to the Mohammedan rule, if he be a Mohammedan, when he expresses his aversion to "bleaching out Africa."

What has the Roman Catholic Church done for the negro that gives it a place above the Protestant Churches? If it admitted slaves to its communion did Catholic slaves fare better at home than Protestant slaves? How many Roman Catholics does the cause of American negro freedom include? How many Roman Catholic statesmen are worthy of classification with Adams, Lovejoy, John Brown, Garrison, Phillips, Sumner, Lucretia Mott and Stevens?

Colored Protestant wings must not be given to this mistake, that white American Catholics are any more friendly to black Americans than are white Protestants. The Catholic Church as such seems to have paid far less attention to the American negro—of course we mean on the continent—in his woe and destitution than protestant churches. It is true that of the numerous branches of Protestant Churches there are some that seem almost to exclude colored men, but the Methodist Episcopal Church alone has done too much for this class to ever allow any comparison with work done by the Roman Catholic Church to disparage all protestant work. If Protestants' actions drive the negro from them, certainly it would seem that the Catholics' non action should repel this class.

"AN EXPLANATION EXPLAINS" AN EXPLANATION.

MR. T. T. Fortune, in the New York Age, of January 1st, declares that the editor of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, in an editorial, December 22nd, was untruthful, fearful of Mr. Fortune's becoming his successor, fearful of a laymen's becoming his successor, had lost his temper and had, in manifesting these passions and sentiments, occupied two columns referring to Mr. Fortune, etc., etc. In his modest appropriation of the entire two columns to his own precious self, not more than one-third of which can in any way be made to have the slightest relation to him, he reminds us of the "English Wagtail" in one of Montgomery's poems; appropriating the material universe to itself. Our editorial really had very little concern with Brother Fortune; it was directed especially to Messrs Durham, Shorter, Grimke and the Mercury correspondent. We said nothing about Mr. Fortune's changing his politics nor his paper's title directly, but did so implicdly because of their connection with the argument of our critics.

Mr. Fortune has smartly assumed, not only that the whole "long primer" two columns belong to him, for which assumption he has no reasonable excuse to offer, for he could have seen what the truth is by reading, but he also assumes that we had lost our temper; that we are fearful of his succeeding us in our present office, and that we fear a layman may become editor of the RECORDER. These are four of Brother Fortune's "mole-hills." We cannot see just where, even by his industrious rooting, he could have gotten his "whole sloth," save in his fruitful imagination. The two columns "mole-hill" is before our readers; hence needs no further refutation. The other untruthful statements cannot be verified. We were neither angry, irritated nor dyspeptic. We were not fearful of Mr. Fortune's succeeding us nor of a layman's doing so. We do not deny the good looks, of course.

It was not our meaning that the paper managed by Mr. Fortune had changed titles three times—that was a slip that afforded Mr. Fortune an excuse for saying we were untrue—we meant simply that the paper had borne three names in seven years. Mr. Fortune's setting forth the cause of the two changes that made this truth is entirely out of the account. We did not suppose the changes were made without cause. We should say about the same concerning his "belonging to a party."

We said nothing about Mr. Fortune's changing his politics. It was our impression that the Globe was acting as a Democratic or at least an Independent instrument when in 1882 it was supporting Mr. Cleveland, that it later became a positive Republican instrument in the campaign of 1884, that the Freeman became an instrument of Independent politics in 1885, which, according to our limited understanding, was a change from positive Republicanism; if not the majority of speakers, thinkers and readers are mistaken. Then later, the Freeman became an advocate of Prohibition.

Mr. Fortune will observe first, that this is our ground for the falsehoods; second, that we shall be obliged to shake hands with him if he can show as reasonable grounds for his falsehoods.

Now, we have just a word on the General Conference delegation subject. We have nothing to recall concerning our expression on this subject. Bishop Turner knows as well as Mr. Fortune that the Indian Conference could not legally do any such thing. The higher the source whence such advantages of law come, the more reprehensible they are. The General Conference acted hastily. It is true it secured a good delegate. "Then what has Editor Lee to do with it?" asks Mr. Fortune. Just this: It is a matter of history; hence it is open to everyone. Second, It is a matter of A. M. E. history; hence, may be referred to in this office. Third, it was a blunder of A. M. E. General Conference; hence, may be consistently and properly mentioned that said conference may avoid making similar blunders in the future.

Personal.

—Bishop Waymen is working on his Memoirs of Bishop Shorter.

—The article of Prof. Morris in this RECORDER is an able and just defense of the negro.

—Prof Dennis M. Roberts, of Shreveport, La., writes us that Wilberforce University has a grandson at his home

—Sister Margaret Wilson, evangelist in the New York Conference, has organized an A. M E. Church at Franklinville, N. Y., and has built a church there this year.

—Rev. J. W. Ross, of Swedesboro, N. J., has nearly completed the new church at that place. The Swedesboro people have long wanted a new church They will have paid $700 on the whole cost, $1,000, when the building is completed —Notwithstanding the unsettled state of the church in New Haven Conn., the Rev. T. H. Geda has received seven persons into our church and fourteen members into the Sabbath school of that place since conference. He also brought us a subscription to the CHRISTIAN RECORDER.

—By some means a page of the excellent discourse of Bishop Payne was missing, we believe, when it reached this office; hence an important section is wanting. The sermon is, part of the grand line of instruction that has probably come to our race-variety from Bishop Payne more forcibly and more continuously than from any other man. God bless his teachings.

—Dr. Arnett is circulating a group of portraits of our Bishops, heads of departments and members of the Financial Board, as an incentive to increasing Dollar Money; a good thing in itself, but Dr. Arnett is circulating a caricature of the editor of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER which he had been requested not to use for any purpose, on any occasion, before he put it in its present relation.

THE A. M. E. CHURCH REVIEW

The January number of the A. M. E Church Review is before us, and not only maintains its high character as the representative of negro scholarship, but in some respects excels. Its table of contents is unusually varied and attractive. The first article is a biographical sketch of Hon. Alexander Clark, LL.D., accompanied by a steel engraving of Mr. Clark, which is given as the frontis piece, and is, beyond question, the finest of the many fine portraits which have been given prominence in the Review. "Some Negro Poets," by Joseph T. Wilson, Esq., is an excellent contribution to the magazine and a well deserved compliment to the poetic genius of the race. Many specimens of poetry are given. A eulogy of the life and services of the Rt Rev. James A. Shorter, by Prof Robt A Stewart, LL.B., is the next article. Speaking of the Bishop, Prof. Stewart truly remarks: "The eulogium of his noblest parts no man can pronounce; his life record is its own and best panegyric; his just encomium is enshrined in the hearts of his fellow-race-men, the grateful recipients of the efforts he put forth." Following this is a delightful little poem by Mrs. Charlotte F. Grimke, entitled, "At Newport" Col. W. H. Thomas writes on "Some Observations on Southern Industrial Development." The summation of his argument is that "no large degree of industry has taken hold of the Southern whites, and probably never will," and that "the strife for possession and occupation lies between Northern immigrants and Southern negroes, with the odds at its final adjustment largely in favor of the latter class." The speech delivered by Rev. W. B Derrick, D.D., in Faneuil Hall, Bos on, in June last, entitled, "The Queen's Jubilee," is given. Those of our readers who are acquainted with the doctor's florid style of oratory can judge of its excellence. "Some of the Evils of Reconstruction" are discussed in a highly commendable manner by Chas. N. Hunter, of North Carolina; "The Bermudas," by Mrs. E E Brackner, gives us an insight into that tropical country; "The True Piece of Emotion in Religion" is treated by Rev. J G. Yeiser, B D. This is a strong paper, but its last sentence is superfluous. Rev. Augustus W. Watson B. D. gives us a much needed and poetically written lecture on "Our Tempers" "Greca Bedivia," by Prof. Henry M. Joseph, the most scholarly contribution of the number, the first part of which appeared in the October number, is concluded, and is well worthy of study by those who are interested in a knowledge of Greek "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Colored Woman," by Mrs. F. D. Hoover, shows the earnest work of that body and the perfect equality and recognition given to colored women. Rev. H. C. Astwood, in a paper entitled, "Shall the name of the African Methodist Episcopal Church be changed to that of the Alien Methodist Episcopal Church?" contends that such change should be made, and gives his reasons therefor. The article should be read by the thoughtful of the Church. Such change would not be favorable to the consolidation of Methodist bodies of colored men, nor of this body with other Methodists. Rev. C. T. Shaffer writes on "The Financial System of the A. M. E. Church," and freely discusses the Dollar Law Delegates to the next General Conference will no donbt read this paper with lively interest. Preceding the editorials comes a poem on "Duty," written by Dr. B. T. Tanner. The sentiment expressed, the true poetic feeling infused and the perfect rhythm all conspire to make this one of the finest of the many poems written by the doctor. The editorials of the number include "Immorality Among the Whites," "Crimes of Caste Against Church" and "This One Blood Fetish." With the next number the Review will complete its fourth volume, and it will also be the last number prior to the General Conference. Its four years' history is considered one of phenomenal success in religious publishing and literary circles. Starting four years ago without a subscription, it has up to the present reached the respectable number of twenty five hundred. It is an honor not only to the Church, but to the entire negro race as well, and more nearly represents "the best intelligence and highest ripest thought of the negro in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the race" than any other magazine now published or ever before attempted, and Dr. Tanner merits unstinted praise for the successful issue of the venture, for to him is largely due its present prosperity and growth. Subscription, $1 50 per year, in advance; single copy, 40 cents.

KLIJAH'S INTERVIEW.

On Horeb's rock the prophet stood,—
The Lord before him passed;
A hurricane in angry mood
Swept by him strong and fast;
The forest fell before its force,
The rocks were shivered in its course,
God was not in the blast;

'Twas but the whirlwind of his breath,
Announcing danger, wreck and death.

It ceased. The air grew mute,—a cloud
Of misty nothingness arose
When through the mountain, deep and loud,
An earthquake thundered on:
The frightened caste sprang in air,
The wild ran howling from his lair,—
God was not in the storm.—
'Twas but the rolling of his car,—
The trampling of His steeds afar.

'Twas still again,—and Nature stood
And calmed her ruffled frame;
When swift from heaven a fiery flood
To earth descending came;
Down to the depth the ocean fled,
The sick'ning sun looked wan and dead,
Yet God flited not the flame;
'Twas but the terror of His eye
That lightened through the troubled sky.

At last a voice all still and small,
Rose sweetly on the ear;
Yet rose so shrill and clear, that all
In heaven and earth might hear.
It spoke of praise, it spoke of love,
It spoke as angels speak above,
And God Himself was there!
For oh, it was a Father's voice
That bade the trembling heart rejoice!

MORMONISM.

A DAY IN SALT LAKE CITY

NO. II.

BY REV. B. L. BEAL.

MR. EDITOR:—After we left the office of the Deseret Publishing Company we took a walk northeast from "The Sacred Square" to the grave of Brigham Young, the second Mohammed of the Western Continent. He is buried in a mausoleum, the top covered with a block of stone weighing seven tons. This tomb is in an enclosure surrounded by an iron fence; directly outside of the tomb are buried four of the wives of the deceased, the senior wife taking precedence by being placed nearest to his grave. The plot of ground in which they are laid is kept perpetually green by a German, who is employed by the church. We also visited the bank and the co-operative store, in which all kinds of merchandize are sold, both solid and liquid. The purchaser, after furnishing implements for the farm, clothes and provisions for the family, can also buy any amount of ardent spirits. We were allowed entire freedom of the building, and to converse with any of the employees, many of whom were women with sad and grief stricken countenances that told of some great sorrow hidden from the outer world.

Passing out of the store, we strolled for some time over different parts of the city. The women and children lack the freshness, elasticity and activity of those of monogamy. The sanitary condition of this town is excellent. We never saw a drunkard nor beggar. Everything has the appearance of thrift and industry. Sobriety, cleanliness and quiet reign supreme and claim from the Christian observer more than a passing notice; they are deeds well worthy of emulation. The Mormon government is theocratic in form, its priests having charge of the temporal and spiritual concerns, and, forming themselves into an oligarchy, rule the laity, who are but child creatures in their hands, with an authority next to despotism. If we were asked to define Mormonism, we should answer by saying it is a conglomeration of Judaism, Buddhism and Christianity. Like Judaism, it believes in the tradition of the patriarchs, in prophecy, in an exodus by divine command, in the building of a tabernacle and temple and in receiving tithes. Like Buddhism it professes a belief in trinity and at the same time it explains that God was once a man, who has, however, so advanced in intelligence and power that he may now be called (comparatively speaking) perfect, infinite, etc., but he has still the form and figure of a man. Like Christianity it claims Jesus as the Saviour, has saints who claim to follow the purity of the gospel, but whose lives are in direct contradiction to its blessed precepts Salt Lake City appears to us as a slumbering volcano of fiery zealots, pent up in its mountain fastnesses awaiting the tocsin of some desperate leader like the Mahdi. The "Veiled Prophet of Khorassan" to a call to arms. For what is Mormonism but a twin sister of Mohammedanism, transplanted from the Orient to our great Republic? Like the Mohammedans, it has its organizer a prophet claiming divine inspiration and authority. Legends are woven around the life of Joseph Smith like those told of his great prototype, Mohammed. It is gaining proselytes. Its Book of Mormon is like olio as the Koran. Its followers obey the behests of their high functionaries, evading the laws of the land at every available opportunity although the 13th article teaches the duty of the saints and all others to "be subject to the powers that be," whether monarchial or republican.

of Mormonism is this: that the government of our great country, while it is vigilant in the enactment of laws to check crime, is still pursuing its tardy course as it did in ante-bellum days, when it awoke to face the greatest revolution of modern times. Our laws are all right; what we need is their execution in every department, especially in the Valley of Utah, for rest assured if the Executive continue to defer a swift punishment commensurate with this giant evil, Mormonism, it may find itself called to confront a disciplined army of fanatics that will cost many precious lives and untold treasure. It may be that these latter-day worshipers of American Islamism are suffered to propagate and sap the vitals of our moral institutions till they shall feel strong enough to force upon us an independent form of government contrary to republican principles. Then, and perhaps not before that time, will the American people rise in their wrath to punish the aggressors. But with Mormonism on one side and anarchism on the other, the prowess of the Afro-American will be once more called upon to help save the nation. Eternal Deity looks upon the odium and contumely heaped upon us, whose ancestry have been so loyal to this nation. It may be in the future possibilities that the blood of the great martyr, Crispus Attucks, of revolutionary days, and the heroes of Ethiopia's sons who fell during the great crises in defence of the Union that we shall be called upon the field of battle as the true and tried friends of the nation in rescuing her from the coils of this lecherous anaconda, Mormonism.

HAS DR BLYDEN GONE OVER TO MOMMET?

BY REV. J. R. FREDERICK.

HOWE ST., FREETOWN,
SIERRA LEONE, W. C., AFRICA,
December 7th, 1887.

DEAR EDITOR:—In the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, November 3, 1887, the following announcement is made: "Dr E W. Blyden, LL. D, one of the best negro scholars, has left Christianity and is now where else, and if it goes on and develops, it will bring the Mohammedans more into sympathy with us This is what I desire to see. The Christian negro and the Mohammedan negro have nothing to lose by fraternizing and co-operating for the great work of the regeneration of the great Continent The Mohammedans are doing a great work in rolling back the flood of ardent spirits, which but for them, owing to the greed of the white trades would desolate the continent I hold a different opinion now of these people than before I came in contact with them, and every thinking negro cannot but be deeply interested in them, the more he gets to know them. This is what Dr. Blyden, I perceive, is teaching us to do. He has not "joined himself to the Mohammedans, nor has he left the religion of Christ."

THAT SECTIONAL LINE.

Among the many drawbacks to the advancement of our Church in all departments is that detestable sectional line. It divides the North from the South and the East from the West. It is agitated by a few narrow-hearted, selfish brethren who have wickedly drawn it in their own interest to meet their own selfish ends, regardless of the needs of the Church and the race, and in nine cases out of ten their hopes are blasted—they fail and fall This sectional sentiment prevails North and South. In fact, our whole Church is permeated with it. It is a growing evil that must be checked. In the selection of representative men to superintend the affairs of our Church their location should not constitute their qualification for the office. If a minister is clothed with the necessary qualifications to make a Bishop, his conference and location should not be questioned, the section of the country or connection from which he hails should be a matter of small import, and the brethren who are agitating this question on the sectional line are all wrong. We want men for the Bishopric whose hearts are as broad as the connection. It matters not to us whether they live in New York or Texas. Men—connectional men—whose interest in the African Methodist Episcopal Church is not separated by a narrow, contracted division lines. Men who live beyond home influences and sectional prejudices. We need the best men who can do the best work. Bear this in mind, that which is good for one section of the Church is good for the whole, and we hope that ere the session of our congress, that all local interest will be withdrawn.

There is neither North nor South, East nor West within the limits of the A. M. E. Church, nor neither is there any cause for lines of division. Our Church is one, we move under one flag. Our preachers belong to the connection and their love should be as broad. Brethren, let there be no divisions among us In union there is strength.

RECOGNITION OF KINDNESS.

BY REV. W. H. HEARD.

MR. EDITOR:—This private letter expresses too much to allow it to be shut in from the world. How lame is the human tongue when the heart is filled with gratitude as mine is to-day. Will not the race say, amen? "The City of Brotherly Love" always shows her hand when the oppressed cry. Still, Purvis and Campbell are not the only powers behind the throne. God bless the "Old Abolition Society."

PHILADELPHIA, PA., JAN. 2, 1888.

Rev. Wm. H. Heard, Pastor Mt. Zion A. M E. Church, 99 Comlog Street, Charleston, S. C.:

My Dear Sir—I have not forgotten your appeal for aid in the grand struggle you are making for the rights of colored people on the railroads of the South. Last Friday evening "The Pennsylvania Society for Promoting the Abolition of Slavery," etc., generally known as the "Old Abolition Society," held their annual meeting, and I made it my especial business to bring your case, now pending before the interstate commerce commission, before the Board of Directors, and on my suggestion one hundred dollars was unanimously voted for your aid in this cause. Now, it may be some weeks or a month or two before you may receive it, but be assured you will get it before very long. Has your case been settled before the interstate commerce commission, if not, when will it be likely to come up? I would be glad if you would write me, and if you are pressed for money to go ahead with the case let me know it and I will use my influence to hurry up the one hundred dollars referred to. Happy New Year. I hope you will come out more than conquer in the battle you are fighting for equal rights Yours truly.

W. STILL."

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 4th 1888

Hon. William Still, 244 South 12th Street, Philadelphia, Pa:

Dear Friend—Your surprising yet welcome letter reached me to-day. My tongue cannot express the emotions of my heart. I am grateful to you and the "Old Abolition Society." There are no humanitarians in this country equal to those in the city of "Brotherly Love." I have met the expenses of my case before the inter state commerce commission at Washington, D C., save my attorney's fee. I borrowed money and made sacrifices that I might go through with it. The case contributed but $31, and more than one-half of that came from my own congregation. My case has been ably represented by the following attorneys: Hon J. W. Lewis, Augusta, Ga; Hon. J. M. Freemen, Charlest n, S. C; Hons. W. C. Martin and J W. Cromwell, Washington, D. C. Dr. W. J Gaines, of Atlanta, Ga., rendered much assistance. Hons. J W Lyons are now in office. My dear sir, I am under ten thousand obligations to you and for your interest in the case. We are now waiting the decision of the commission. We are praying and hoping My attorney's are waiting for their fees, but I expected to pay this from my small salary. The race has no greater benefactor than William Still.

Thy friend,
W H. HEARD.

THE GULF STREAM.

This remarkable stream deserves special mention. It is the most powerful and best known of all the marine currents. It extends from the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic Ocean. Its current is more rapid than the Mississippi or the Amazon, while its volume is a thousand times greater. Its water, from the Gulf of Mexico to the Carolina coast, is indigo blue, and is so distinctly marked that the joining line with the water of the ocean can be clearly seen with the naked eye. One half of a ship is sometimes seen floating in the Gulf Stream, while the other is in the water outside, in a strait betwixt two. The water is much saiter than the ocean through which it flows, which accounts for its deep blue color.

This wonderful stream conveys away the heat of the Gulf of Mexico and disperse it over the Atlantic. The highest temperature of the Gulf Stream is eighty six degrees, nine degrees above the ocean temperature in the same latitude. In passing through ten degrees of north latitude it loses only two degrees of heat and, after running 3,000 miles north ward, it still retains, even in winter, the genial warmth of summer. With this temperature it crosses the Atlantic at the 45th parallel of north latitude, and then overflows its banks and spreads out over a thousand leagues of surrounding water, softening and tempering the climate of Europe. Simple calculation will show that the amount of heat discharged over the Atlantic, from the water of this magnificent stream, in a winter day, would raise the temperature of Northern Europe and from the freezing point to summer heat. "Every west wind that blows wafts this stream on its way to Europe, and bears along with it a great body of heat to temper the cruhern winds of winter." Were it not for this vast marine river, the countries contiguous to the Mexican Gulf would ho the hottest, if not the most unhealthy, part of the globe.

This same stream, moreover, le the great balance wheel, a part of the intricate and delicate machinery by which air and water are adapted to each other, and by which the earth itself is fitted for the use of its inhabitants. According to sailors, the Gulf Stream is the great "weather breeder" of the North Atlantic, the prolific mother of storms and gales. The most furious winds sweep along with it, while the fogs of Newfoundland are doubtless due to the warm water flowing into the cold water of that region Investigation shows that the tributre storms that so often rage in that part of the Atlantic are caused by the differences between the temperature of the Gulf Stream and the surrounding air and water. The habitu al dampness of the British Islands, the dense London fogs, as well as the universal dampness along the coast of the United States, when the wind is east, are due also to the Gulf Stream. Notwithstanding all this, the presence of the Gulf Stream, with its summer heat, off our bleak coast, is a vast help to navigation. How many, many ships take refuge in its warm water during the terrible cold and storms of our winter!

The Pacific Gulf stream is hardly less important, although much less known. It does for the Pacific what our beltar anders ood stream does for the Atlantic. It is composed of several different currents. Among the be t known is the famous Humboldt Current of Peru, which is felt as far as the equator, rendering the rainless climate of Peru delightful.—Home College Series.

THE STAR CONCERT.

The Star Concert for the benefit of the Parish Building of the Church of the Crucifixion, Rev. H. L. Phillips, pastor, will be given at Musical Fund Hall on Thursday evening, February 9, 1888 Miss Flora Batson, the Queen of Song, will be the leading vocalist, assisted by Miss Dora J. Cole, Soprano; Mr. T. S. Chestnut, Tenor; Mr. Louis L. Brown, Basso, and Mr. W. I. Powell, the "king of fnu," with Mrs. Albert Wilson as accompanist. Miss Mary A. Crawford and Miss Mary B. Harper, the talented elocutionists, will also recite choice selections. Twenty dollars will be awarded to the person selling the largest number of tickets General admission, 25 cents; reserved seat ticket, 50 cents For sale at Ditson's Music Store, 1228 Chestnut Street

Those of our readers who have never heard Miss Batson, as well as those who desire to hear her again, should avail themselves of this opportunity, possibly the last for this season. Her beautiful, rich voice, as clear as a silver bell, charms and delights with its true tones of music. She has received the highest praise from representative journals, and fully deserves everything said of her The Philadelphia Tribune says she is "a concert in herself. It is worth going a thousand miles to hear her;" the New York Age speaks of her as "the unrivalled favorite of the masses;" the New York Sun declares her to be "a worthy successor of the Black Swan," while the New York World expresses the belief that she is "the greatest ballad singer the race has produced" Of the home talent it is only necessary to say that they are so well known and appreciated that the mere mention of their names is a sufficient guarantee of an enjoyable evening.

Wanamaker's January Program.

Your company is requested at the opening of some of the new goods for the season of 1888.

The great January display robes the store in white, and the sight is next to Niagara in winter covered with what the French call "water dust."

Inquire right and left for the prices.

We do not start out to undersell everybody, but we mean to give such advantages to our customers this year than ever before.

The people everywhere have found out long since that this store is never understood.

Always bring back the goods that do not seem cheap enough or are not as good as you thought.

This is the kind of carefulness we like.

If our new stock of goods are as cheap as many odd lots that we might offer, you will probably prefer them

BLACK SILKS

21 pieces Black Cashmere Gros-grains, 24 inches wide, at $1. We never knew them to be sold under $1.25.

DRESS GOODS.

No counter at which there are not extra attractions.

French Sateens. The new ones are here. Not the highest cost, 31 cents a yard. You need not know the makers; call them Wanamaker's, for we control the sale on them.

This is the hub of the Western hemisphere. You may get a ride from the first time for 10,000 yards in store to-day are only on -fourth of a single order. And then all the spokes will be there when we want them.

Watch the season and you will know how great they are.

The first peep at the styles—an artist's first view: Fifty three yards Gobelins and mahogany, conventional and baby-blue, cent and cream, rainbow divided and multiplied. And for figures, stripes with trailing vines, stripes with polka dots dancing all about, stripes holding up plaids; plaids with over plaids; palm patterns, and double o's invited like a ladies' ridge.

This rattle about styles may show some good. Not much un ess it bring you to see the sales.

LINENS.

We are doing matchless things in Linens. The nooks and corners of the linen world have been searched for the things told of here.

BLEACHED DAMASK TABLE LINEN.

Branded with the maker's name. Quality, weight and width uniform for a generation. 5,000 yards, 66 inches wide $1 per yard.

Another by the same maker. Equal to Barnsley in yarn, weight, and pattern. Before this we never could offer equal goods less than $1.50. Between 10 and 3000 yards, 72 inches wide, $1.30 a yard.

DRESDEN BLEACHED DAMASK TABLE LINEN.

The goods known so favorably to American purchasers in Germany. They make their name from Dresden as a market, and not the makers' house. The name is the character. The price the motive.

1 600 yards at $1.45 72 inches wide Much finer than $1.75 may. Next lot will go back to former price, $2.

NAPKINS TO MATCH.

26x26 inches, $3 a dozen. More are will again be $4.

GERMAN NAPKINS.

A large lot that as Napkins generally go, would be fair value at $1.5 a dozen. As they now go here, $1. We're Co-D Dor for a few, and None here, $1.

Another lot, larger, at $1.25

A lot of dollies at $4, just a two-third price.

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Troops of them. One item only to-day. Women's hemstitched, with ¼ inch and 1-inch border s, 15 cents, a three-fifth price.

Here stops our Linen talk for to-day. L-I-N-E-N spells linen in this store—it doesn't spell cotton.

The white idea of store dress develop daily. It's worth seeing.

PHILADELPHIA.

OUR CENTENNIAL RETURNS.

In the list of names and amounts given below, we aim to be exact. We wish every pastor to scan the report and see that it is correct, and that it corresponds with the amount mentioned in his receipt from us. We cannot give the names of officers and churches in every case, because not one-half of them were sent in, and while the whole amount raised is less than half what we reasonably hoped for, we tender our heartiest thanks to the pastors and churches who generously raised the money sent in.

Fraternally,

J. C. EMBRY.

CONSUMPTION CURE.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousand- of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, New York.

"A Beautiful Atlas."

ALDEN'S HOME ATLAS of the WORLD. In one large quarto vol; 11x14 inches in size, containing more handsomely engraved and colored maps, and of a better quality than ever before found in an Atlas selling at less than $10.00. Also an index of over 5000 cities, rivers, mountains, etc., throughout the world, showing exact location. Cloth binding, price, $2.00; post. 28c.

"A beautiful Atlas. It leaves nothing to be desired in the way of maps."—Christian Standard, Cincinnati, O.

"Five dollars would be cheap for it. At two dollars it is half a gift."—Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dayton, O.

"A most comprehensive and useful work, and at a price one-fifth of that usually charged."—The Mail, Chicago.

"Alden's Home Atlas of the World is equal, if not superior, to atlases published heretofore for $10."—Post, Pittsburgh.

"Is superior in all important respects to any Atlas heretofore published at a less price than $10.00."—The Guardian, Philadelphia.

"This handsome, convenient, and attractive Atlas contains all the latest additions to geographical knowledge."—Press, Albany, N. Y.

"The volume is handsome in appearance and so marvelously cheap that it will doubtless find an immense sale."—Messenger, Philadelphia, Pa.

"A marvel of art, of information, and of price. The wonder is how so much and of such a character can be sold at so low a price."—Church Press, New York City.

"Is just the kind of atlas for which there is a real need. A complete one, tastily and handily bound, and surprisingly moderate in price."—Press, Philadelphia, Pa.

"For the excellence of its preparation and handsome binding, it is one of the marvels of cheapness for which American readers are already much indebted to this publisher."—Christian Cynosure, Chicago.

"We have deferred a notice of Alden's Home Atlas of the World, but meantime have had much occasion to refer to it. We find that as a rule it serves us better than the older ones. It is one of the mammoth ten dollar works that Alden expects to make money by selling for two dollars."—Christian Leader, Boston, Mass.

"Besides giving a map for every country of any importance—and many of these maps are well executed and contain the latest geographical data—every considerable town is included in an alphabetical list, with the country where situated, and the latitude and longitude."—The Bulletin, San Francisco, Cal.

"Up to the present the best atlases have cost from $25 to $40, while $12 was the very lowest that a decent one could be obtained at. Now John B. Alden has published a work that for the remarkably low price of $2 is a fair substitute for these expensive atlases."—Morning Herald, Rochester, N. Y.

The Literary Revolution Catalogue (84 pages) sent free on application. ALDEN'S publications are NOT sold by book-setters—no discounts allowed except as advertised. Books sent for examination before payment, satisfactory reference being given.

THE CENTENNIAL OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

LAST CALL.

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do so at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing the same.

Brethren will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairman of General Committee.
B. W. ARNETT, Sec'y.

BETTER THAN EVER.

LESSON HELPS FOR 1888.

The Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church is prepared to furnish the best series of Lesson Helps that can be obtained. We have received testimonials from scores of our most prominent Sunday school workers endorsing and emphasizing the high quality of our periodicals. Our aim is to do the very best we can to meet the demands of our Sunday schools. A full list of our periodicals and their prices, will be found on another page of this paper. As we are the only authorized publishers of lesson helps for A. M. E. Sunday schools, we expect to receive that patronage which respect for law and denominational interests demand. Samples and price lists sent free on application. Address,

Rev. C. S. SMITH,
Nashville Tenn.

NOTICE.

All communications intended for the Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church that are addressed to Rev. C. S. Smith, Nashville, Tennessee, will be received. It is not necessary to give the name of the street nor the number of our business place. Rev C. S. Smith, Nashville, Tenn., is sufficient. Telegrams addressed the same way will reach us. We are fully settled in our new headquarters and prepared for business. C. S. SMITH, Secretary.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

"STAMMERING"

AND ALL DEFECTS OF SPEECH PERMANENTLY CURED

"I take pleasure in stating I am acquainted with the method employed by Mr E. S. Johnston for the relief of stammering, and in my judgment it is the correct one. I have knowledge of aggravated cases which were entirely cured by him." Harrison Allen, M.D., Prof ssor Physiology University of Pennsylvania.

For full particulars address E. S. JOHNSTON. Institute Eleventh and Spring Garden Sts., Philadelphia.

The Best Remedy

For Dyspepsia is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Other medicines may give temporary relief; but Ayer's Sarsaparilla makes a positive and permanent cure, as thousands can testify all over the country.

"My stomach, liver, and kidneys were in a disordered condition for years," writes R. Wild, of Hutto, Texas, "and I never found any medicine to relieve me, until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than six bottles of this remedy cured me."

Mrs. Joseph Anbin, of Holyoke, Mass., was for a long time a severe sufferer from Dyspepsia, trying, in vain, all the usual remedies. At last she began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and only three bottles restored her to perfect health.

"I have gone through terrible suffering from Dyspepsia and Indigestion," writes C. J. Bodenier, 143 Columbia st., Cambridgeport, Mass., "and can truly say Ayer's Sarsaparilla has cured me."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

Our London Suits, $9.00
Our Imported Trousers, $3.50
Our London Overcoats, $12.00

The choice is thus offered between good quality, Genuine Scotch goods and domestic imitations of the same With prices in favor of the genuine articles.

Why should you pay $5.00 for a pair of "Imitation Scotch goods" Pants when the real articles can be had for $3.50, and cut by Thompson's Patent System. Unequaled for comfort, style, fit.

Again comes the question:

How does E. O. Thompson sell these excellent goods at such prices?

There is no tailoring business in the United States (to the best of our knowledge), that sells such large quantities of English goods as our three houses.

There is no house in London that has such favorable purchasing powers and opportunities as our own London house

There are certain reasons we have for wishing to turn over these goods at a bare commission.

The result is—Almost before we knew it we found ourselves underselling the entire clothing trade of the United States.

Editor of the Financier.

DEAR SIR: In reply to your inquiry of this date, it gives us pleasure to say that the "Western Farm Mortgage Company," now organized as the WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST COMPANY, has done business with this bank since June, 1880.

As their Eastern Depository, we have been in a position to know something of their business. Their paper is made payable at this Bank, and we have paid their Coupons and Bonds as they mature, all of which have been invariably provided for by them in advance.

Their business is large, and has constantly increased, and we have been impressed with the method and accuracy that have characterized every detail that has come under our observation.

During the past two years their average balances on deposit has been over $50,000.

DEAR SIR: The undersigned is acting in the capacity of Trustee for the WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE COMPANY, of Lawrence, Kansas, for the purpose of certifying that the Debenture Bonds issued by the said Company are in accordance with the agreement made between them and us.

The Mortgage Company has deposited Mortgages in excess of the amount required by their contract, which they are fulfilling scrupulously, in fact doing more than is required by their contract for the protection of the Debenture bondholders.

The Mortgage Company has recently been reorganized as the WESTERN FARM MORTGAGE TRUST COMPANY, and we are gratified by informed that some of its stockholders are of the most wealthy and reputable citizens in the West. Respectfully yours,

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." Mrs. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

"I take pleasure in stating I am acquainted with the method employed by Mr. E. S. Johnston for the relief of stammering, and in my judgment it is the correct one. The Best Remedy

For Dyspepsia is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Other medicines may give temporary relief; but Ayer's Sarsaparilla makes a positive and permanent cure, as thousands can testify all over the country.

"My stomach, liver, and kidneys were in a disordered condition for years," writes R. Wild, of Hutto, Texas, "and I never found any medicine to relieve me, until I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Less than six bottles of this remedy cured me."

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of Holyoke, Mass., was for a long time a severe sufferer from Dyspepsia, trying, in vain, all the usual remedies. At last she began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and only three bottles restored her to perfect health.

"I have gone through terrible suffering from Dyspepsia and Indigestion," writes C. J. Bodemer, 145 Columbia st., Cambridgeport, Mass., "and can truly say Ayer's Sarsaparilla has cured me."

RUSH B. WHEELER

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S TEN MINUTE SERMONS.

BY REV. B. V. N. TENEYCK.

THE ALARM.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."—Prov. 20, 1.

For nearly 3,000 years these words have been rolling down the waves of time, sounding the alarm of danger to all mankind. Never was any character set forth more clearly and correct by than that of alcohol by the words of Solomon the wise. Alcohol has been known as an evil from the earliest ages, and its cruel marks have followed it up to the present day. It stands in our midst, and with cruel defiance controls with tyrannic power the destinies of nations, societies and families. It is the mother of evils, the curse of humanity. —Satan materialized. Find one person, see! A dozen human figures in full, vast array, wild, rambling, wringing, and with light and sweep beneath the glaring gas-light. A joyful hour, thus seeming. But, alas! how quickly these joyful hours fly away. Meet these persons in forty-eight hours afterwards. The scene is changed. Where are the merry hearts and bright countenances that we witnessed a few hours ago? Where is the exhilaration of the dance, the joys of the wine cup and the delight of the champagne revelry? In nine cases out of ten you will find disappointment, sadness, sickness and distress. You will also find many empty pockets, and still worse, empty hearts. Worse than this, you will find that does not contain Christ as empty indeed, and the whole world can never fill it.

They who live only for the joys of this world make a fatal mistake. The departing spirits, hurrying through the skies, never carries with it a single earthy joy. Water and oil possess no affinity for each other; neither has the Spirit of God and the spirit of alcohol ever been reconciled. The one can only prevail as the other is subdued. The approach of the one is life, the other, death. Hence, that person who shuns the temptations of the ball-room is wise.

SAD AND ALONE!

It is the feeling of a young man five hundred miles from home. Money wasted, friends all gone, he now begins to realize between the true and the untrue. Once he thought rum a blessing; laughed at the sober and the virtuous, but now he acknowledges it to be a curse and a cheat, and himself its helpless victim. As he looks up the heavens seem to frown upon him. Now, for the first time, his mother's prayers haunt him; he seems to feel the warm kiss of that sister whom he saw laid beneath the shades of the elm tree ten years ago. In bewilderment he at last cries out; "O Lord, what shall I do to be saved?" O, my young friends, do not wait to go through the bitter experience of this young man spoken of in our lesson, but take alarm now. Dash from you the fatal glass. This hour; yea, this moment, make your determined pledge for all life. Turn away from wine, brandy, strong beer and all that belong to the class of intoxicants, and forever and forever touch them not.

But I hear some one speaking; it is a young lady in fashion's brilliant attire for 'Oh!" she says, "it is very easy for you to advise, but not so easy for me to practice. I move in a good circle; but there is scarcely a social gathering where cake, wines, brandies and champagne are not passed around, and it would be considered a breech of etiquette to refuse. Then again the holidays are approaching, when we cannot make a call without having them presented to us, nor receive a call without being expected to offer them. And if we should refuse to accept them the friends who call upon us, we would be regarded as having violated the law of custom and committed a social offence." Truly we can sympathize with you in this position, and notwithstanding, the power of one in the right is greater than that of a thousand in the wrong I now speak from a standpoint of a twenty-five years' experience. When offered, the cooling delicious beverages are passed around, quietly let them pass. Let them pass entirely by you; don't touch them, but decline them with a polite bow. If insisted upon, decline and you will find that after having once declined the victory is yours.

Lose friends, you say? Friends lost in such a case will not be worth keeping. We know that it will be sometimes a trial at first, but when you have once undertaken it with a firm will and unyielding determination, and when your friends see that you have taken a fixed stand in that direction, they will cherish a much higher regard for you for so doing and will trust you with greater respect than ever before You will exert a greater influence in your society, and when your friends have you to their parties or visits, you will discover that they will appreciate your lemonade and other temperance drinks much more than those classed among the intoxicants; and further, instead of speaking of you with contempt, they will speak of you with pride and approbation for having the corrage to denounce the evil and stand up in defence of the right. Hence, my young friends, my heart's desire and prayer to God is, that he will help you to see the right and give you sufficient grace and courage to come over on the side of the right, where the song of love makes glad the heart and the sunshine of Christianity and purity gives warmth to domestic felicity and the pathway of peace leads upward to the gate of heaven. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

ONE OF THE INTELLECTUAL FORCES FOR THE ELEVATION OF THE RACE.

BY REV. B. H. ROBERTS.

One hundred years ago some of the outraged colored people, feeling themselves to be rational beings, having a soul that longed for religious freedom, claiming that God was no respecter of person; that he had made of one blood all nations to dwell on the face of the earth through the spirit of manhood, fostered by the doctrine preached by that sainted minister, Rev. Thomas Coke, the first Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, also the organizer of the Methodist Church in the West India Islands. He condemned slavery of every kind and prompted slaves to believe that they were men and had rights that ought to be respected. These few colored men resolved that if they could not be free in the church where they were, they would come out. This spirit entered the mind and heart of the Revs. Richard Allen, Daniel Coker and Absalom Jones and others The organization of the A. M. E. Church in this country raised the ambition, aspiration and manhood of the colored race throughout the country. Richard Allen was the first and one to compile the first A. M. E Church Hymn Book. The next book introduced by our ministers of the A. M. E Church was by Rev. N. C. W. Cannon, called "The Rock of Wisdom." Rev. D. A. Payne joined the A. M. E. connection and, joining the conference, the light soon burst forth through the pages of history. We can see it coming. In 1845 an educational convention was called to meet in Philadelphia. It is said that great good was done at this convention.

In 1842 there was a theological society organized in Bethel Church, Philadelphia, to assist the local preachers to understand the Bible. From this the ministers of the A. M. E Church began to preach and to teach education.

As one of the intellectual forces for the elevation of the race, I would say, we can point with great pride to the plan of examining our ministers annually the first four years of itinerancy. There is no church that has done for the negro race what the A. M. E. Church has done. Wherever it is planted it rises up the banner of education, and in the language of the Prophet Isaiah, she cries to her people, "Arise, shine, thy light has come." Her voice has been against sin and ignorance.

Again, she has her own Book Concern and in the year 1840 she moved the intellectual and brought forth a monthly magazine and then a weekly newspaper called the Christian Herald, now the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. She built the first college ever owned by colored people in these United States. There it ple in these United States. stands near Xenia, Ohio—Wilberforce University. She has her Allen University at Columbia, S C; St. James Academy, in New Orleans, La.; Morris Brown, in Atlanta, Ga.; Bethel Institute, at Little Rock, Ark. Here in Wa co, on the east side of the Brazos River, she has her Paul Quinn; at Jacksonville, Fla., her Divinity High School. Our ministers entered the battle field and fought till our people were emancipated, and as soon as the way was opened the Church was heard in the South with her ministers and teachers trying to lift them from the darkness of sin to the light of life—long ages of experience. What is she doing? She is sending forth her sons and daughters yearly from her institutions of learning like so many lightning bugs coting the country everywhere. Wherever she has gone and wherever she plants her banner her voice is heard in the language of Joseph, "I come to seek my brethren" She can point to her Payne, Arnett, Johnson, W. D.; Johnson, J. H Lee, Turner, Stewart, Wayman, Keeling, Embry, Mitchell, Shorter, Scarborough, Whitman, Porter, James, and host of others. What is she doing? I answer for her as one of her sons She made me what I am or ever will be. Though we are called African Methodist, we have not our doors closed against the other races. Oh, no, but we mean that the African race will always have a Church that no one can on account of his color pull him off of his knees as Absalom Jones, Richard Allen and Daniel Coker and others, for this is our house So hold we the walls for the half thereof, for the people have a mind to work May peace and prosperity be within her walls. Some have turned aside, but a host still clug to her. Four hundred and fifty thousand souls claim her as their mother and over a million colored men, women and children have adhered to the teaching of the A. M. E. Church Some of her churchee number in membership between three and four thousand members in one city. What think ye of this? May the God of the Church smile upon the A. M. E. Church and bless her to do good no reality in Christianity, behold this one who has suffered for four years and two months, how patient, how submissive, how gentle, how mild, you are forced to conclude that such an institution that fills one with joy in sorrow, that gives pleasure in pain, is not ideal but real, is not supposition, but knowledge, is not human, but divine. A loving sister, an affectionate wife, a Christian indeed, a true friend, a lady of letigence and a dutiful daughter, her parents could fully say of her,

"Many daughters have done virtuously, But thou excellest them all."

Her favorite books during her years of sickness were "Fifty Years and Beyond," and Dr. Matteson's wonderful work on "The Immortality of the Soul" No one knows how much consolation she got from a constant perusal of these works, but it was great. To her there were no horrors in death, no gloom in the grave; so completely had she assimilated the thoughts of these books that they formed her favorite themes of conversation; with them she would comfort others, inspire others with hope and make herself happy She never allowed her trouble to trouble another; she gave others the sunshine and carried her burdens to the feet of Jesus, receiving repeating songs of joy and gladness to bear away; she was like love down which lets her wings down at her sidee to conceal the arrow preying upon her vitale. She often stole away to Jesus to pray, to tell him her troubles, and her remarkable perseverance in all sweetness and happiness can now be explained; she had meat to eat that we knew not of She now knew that it was impossible to survive long; she was anxious, as she said, "to steal away to Jesus" before she passed away, for she often spoke of the time, not when she would die, but "pass away." She called her father and used these triumphant words of St. Paul: "I have fought a good fight," etc. She told be dock to continue to win souls for Christ and kissed him for the last To all the members of the family she gave assurance of her passing away to rest. Her countenance beaming with joy, she began to repeat those words, which have cheered the hearts of millone: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil" etc. Then were her last words, she breathed her last, the spirit now gained its freedom; it took its flight to the God that gave it; she did "steal away to Jesus" Such is the life of a Christian, such is their testimony, such is their death. The effect upon those left behind, when such an one dies, is holy awe and admiration; the inceutives to prese on are greater, heaven is nearer, Christ is dearer. Loving hands and hearts and loved were all busy in ebowing their appreciation for Annie, by relieving the family from the cares of the house, so great was their grief, by bringing the most artic floral designs and a surprising amount of natural flowers, considering the season of the year; the latter were all placed in her casket—a beautiful thought, emblematic of love, for "flowers are lovely, love is flower-like." The day of her funeral was like her sickness, stormy in the morning, but calm and tranquil when she was laid away. In the morning of her sickness she was tired, but at the evening time rest came. She is resting

"On the other side of Jordan,
In the sweet fields of Eden,
Where the tree of life is blooming."

TO MY FRIENDS.

The letters that come from scores of sorrowing friends are like sky-gleams, making luminous a day filled with dark portente. Stars that stud the midnight heavens, jasseminee that spangle the dark Valley of Affliction. I cannot answer these letters. Each opens a new wound in a pensive soul. So thanks for these wefts of light that come through the rifted clouds. These eloquent words come from every point of the compass of our great Church

All I see is the face of a wife who to the last was tender, patient, loving and pure. The music of her voice still sounds like an angel's lute—sweet, melliduent inspiring. Gone, but not lost; absent, but not forever. Thanks to the sympathizing thousands, whether in or ont of the Church. Thanks, thanks, thanke.

MRS. ANNETTA C. TAYLOR WATKINS.

The lives of the good men and women are the property of the Church, and as such they should be recorded; they are the living epistles known and read by all men. Amidst the festivities of the year many have been bereaved death has entered the fold of many a household and taken away many a loved one. This is his mission and the he will continue to do until it shall come to pass "death is swallowed up in victory." For the edification of the Church and an inducement to the sinner to become reconciled unto God; for the comfort of her friends and the consolation of her family we turn to pay a tribube of respect, to place a rose upon the grave of Mrs Annetta C. Taylor Watkins, herself a flower, fair as any that ever bloomed in nature's garden. The deceased, the beloved daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Watkins, will always be cherished in the hearts and memories of those of the various charges which her father has served, as one of whom it may truly he said:

"None know her but to love her,
None name her but to praise."

She was born in Baltimore, May 21, 1855, converted in Washington, 1868, married in Baltimore, December 18, 1877, became a widow in Norfolk, August 25, 1880, was taken sick October 15, 1883, died in Baltimore, December 12, 1887, and buried in the same place December 15, 1887, from Trinity A. M. E Church, of which she was a member, Dr. Seaton officiating, assisted by Revs. Hedges, Brown, Wayman and Draper. A consistent member of the Church, which she joined in the days of her youth, even in the severest afflictions she enjoyed the pleasure of religion; her experience was:

"Her ways are ways of pleasantness,
And all her paths are peace."

To all those who hold that religion is theory and speculation; to those who believe that it is a cunningly devised fable; to those that contend that there is no reality in Christianity, behold this one who has suffered for four years and two months, how patient, how submissive, how gentle, how mild, you are forced to conclude that such an institution that fills one with joy in sorrow, that gives pleasure in pain, is not ideal but real, is not supposition, but knowledge, is not human, but divine. THE FOREIGN MISSIONS OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

THEIR WANTS AND NEEDS. AND OUR DUTY IN RELATION THERETO.

[The following article comes to us without name. It seems to emanate from San Domingo.—ED]

The A. M. E Church has done a vast deal of mission work in its home or domestic field This work as seen and understood by the observant during the last twenty-five years, at once commands the Church and places her in the foremost rank as a great civilizing and christianizing agent. In this work we do not suffer in comparison with the other religious bodies of this country. So much, however, cannot be said of us when it comes to the influence of the Church abroad. It is true that at ce 1842 we have made repeated efforts to establish and maintain missions in foreign lands, but somebow or other we have almost se repeatedly failed. Not until within the last ten years have we succeeded in planting a mission that gave any promise of permanence. The cause of failure did not rest with the managers nor with the missionaries so much as with the church for whom they acted. The then managers and missionaries were no doubt as deeply interested as those of to-day, but the Church lacked in that form of missionary spirit which would lead it to provide for the maintenance of such missionary effort. The general sentiment was in favor of occupying every field at home, and letting the foreign take care of itself, or perchance be cared for by those who can we deemed better qualified to do this work. Acting upon this principle, our missionaries are soon compelled to abandon the field and return home. At last may it be said to our credit, a determined resolution was formed and the work of organization began in earnest, the result of which is that operations are now commenced in several fields full of promise and hope, and while there is evidence of an awakened conscience in every side, still we have but begun to think correctly and act correctly with reference to this all-important question. Only now are we beginning to appreciate the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us."

Our work, as it now is in Hayti, was organized by Rev. C. W. Mossell and his assistants. Through the influence and prayers and tears, with the assistance of that noble band of Christian women organized as the "Mite Missionary Society, are succeeding in moderately well sustaining. After so long a time, with mites gathered here and there, we erected our mission house upon a valuable lot which had been purchased by the congregation.

It stands there to-day, a thing of beauty and comfort, and a monument to the devotion of the godly men, women and children who have continued toward the erection. Its estimated value is $9 000. When we consider the wealth of our Church, with its mammoth congregations, etc., one would think that the call of $5,000 to pay the cost of the "Haytian church" a small affair, and that a few of our large "city churches" would give it at once; but not so, only a very few of such churches contribute to the support of foreign missions. By conferences and other reports it will be seen that, as a rule, the largest donations per capita came from the smaller and even poorer churches.

The last quarterly report of Bishop John Hurst places our membership total at 99—average congregation, 300; one-day school, 1; teachers, 3; number of pupils, 122.

Besides we have organized a nice little mission at Mirogoane under Brother Joseph Day. Brethren Archabiste and Carefour furnished by the church at Port-au-Prince." These are served by brothers Charles Dorce and Georges Cadoubre, who are doing excellent work. The people at these latter points are asking that we send missionaries to them. Now it will be remembered that no less than five missionary helpers and three teachers ought in all fairness to be supported in whole or in part in the Hayden work, so say nothing of the new fields to be developed as soon as assistance is secured. These the all-absorbing question, "How is this to be done?" There is but one answer, viz—Let the home church donate, in the liberality of their souls, a sufficient amount of money to supply the needs of the work. The amount figured down to the lowest is $2,500, a very small sum indeed, when we consider the character of the work, the number of persons employed and the results which will necessarily follow.

The Government as represented by President Salomon is decidedly friendly to our cause and to Protestantism generally. In his last message to Congress, among other things he said: "In a more limited sphere Protestantism co-operates in the moralizing of the people, and though lim tion which receive the most assiduous care. On the relationship the nation owes to this religion all its gratitude, and the Government will not be sparing in its encouragement."

San Domingo This beautiful country, with its teeming wealth of native resources, its fine looking and in many instances intelligent people, is given over to vice and sin, Catholicism and ruin. There is no hope so widely open, no field of mission enterprise more inviting than is this land to our Church.

The earnest and devotion of the little band, and the undying and unpossessing labors of Hon. H. C. C. As wood, and more recently the labors of Rev. A. H. Mo s and Brother Adam Rodgers and Francisan Clendie, call upon us from every reasonable consideration to uplift ourselves anew, and by every possible means to not only keep alive the fires already burning, but to make a heroic effort to bring the gospel in all its fullness and power to bear upon the moral, intellectual and social life of the Dominican people.

I here give a little history of our mission in the capitol of San Domingo City, as furnish d by Brother Deshan. "In the year 1820 President Bayrot Heyti, when the island was under one government, sent one Mr. Granville to the United States to invite emigration from among colored people of color with all his family. 1824 I was born in 1825. In 1845 my father died, then I came to my mother to San Domingo City. She sent me to church; one Mr. Stephens was the preacher. There were then a few who were Protestants, among whom were Isaac Miller, Rev. Mr Fall, Caleb Hillen, Mr. Hamilton, Mr. Burke Mr. Steward and Issac Fountain; with the little band all went well till 1857, when the church was closed on account of war, and remained so for two years. Then Mr. Hamilton and myself commenced to preach again. We continued till 1860, when the Spanish invaded the country, taking away our church and forbidding Protestantism. We remained without a church for four years, during which time the people scattered, some to Hayti, some to the woods, some to the war, and others died. In 1865 the Dominicans drove the Spaniards from the country. Then Mr. Grove, a descendant of America, appointed the Government dem nding religious tolerance for the people, which was granted.

In 1866 one Mr. Brooks, a Wesleyan Methodist, came and took up the work. In 1868 Mr. Hamilton took the work in 1870 all the members of the church died with the cholera except myself and Brooks. In 1875 the church fell down. I then held meetings in my own house till 1883, at which time in the providence of God one Rev. Mr. Gibbs and Rev. Ashwood came. He at once hasted me and after consultation, hired a house for two years, during which time he repaired and furnished the old church. Our membership increased; a good Sabbath and day school was were organized, and once more under his management and influence we were moving along nicely. The church property thus fitted up is now valued at $2,000. Membership, 38; average congregation, 150

Brother Meve, the present City Missionary, and Brother Adam Rodgers have organized a mission at Barahona, a well as a day school, which are giving promised evidences of success. Our congregation in San Domingo City has outgrown the little chapel, and it becomes necessary to build a house in every way suitable. We ask the remember that this is the capitol, the "Paris of the Antilles of the world" and that ours is the only Protestant church, all will agree that we should erect such a mission house as will not only be a credit to the city, but such as may well give to the organization itself prestige and influence. The people of wealth and position have promised Brothers Aswood and Meve ample assistance when we convince them that we intend to do something worthy of their support.

One of the most beautiful located and desirable lots in the city can be had for about one-half its appraised value for this purpose One thousand dollars will purchase the ground, and the people will do the large share toward the erecting of the building We shall not rely upon the few members of the mission, for officers of State, merchants and capitalists have alike agreed to do their part when we shall have done ours.

Africa Rev J R Fredericks' last report from Sierre Leone speaks for itself. Members total 217; average congregation 420; choirs, one; value, $2 000; day school, one; pupils 166. All of this has been secured to the church within one year.

Besides a small mission has been opened in the interior on the Searcies River. In Liberia we have three missions which at last account were not in an hopeful condition as we would desire, because of the lack of men and means.

In Africa the outlook is hopeful in this main, and all we need to do is simply to provide the means for a vigorous campaign. We have estimated that $5,000 at least should be put into this work at once, added to this $2 500 for Hayti $2.500 for San Domingo, making to all $10 000 for foreign missions, and now that the Centennial and other anniversary days are off we would urge that the churches begin to work up their Easter celebration. Let us make this last missionary rally of the present quadrennium the most notable of them all. Let it be heralded in every church, Sabbath school and society, that next Easter Day we raise $10.000 for Africa, Hayti and San Domingo. It can be done so easily if each and all would do a little.

It is an easy matter for some who have never contributed in any way to the support of this work to find fault and wisely assert what ought to be done, but those who do the giving and those who are toiling by day and by night, know what it costs to keep the little mission fires aglow. Then it can only be hinted, to the faithful there is inspiration and hope. To all who responded last Easter day to the call, and to as many more we speak present the claims of our struggling missions and pray you nome up nobly to the line this year.

OH! THAT HEADACHE.

"How I am tormented with this continual headache. It echoes all through my brain, noon, and night. It is the last feeling and thought before sleep and the first sensation a return of consciousness. It is the terror and torment of my life, and there seems no promise of an end to it while the lamp of life continues to burn. I feel at times as if I must go mad. I move about in my anguish or meet the pressure and helplessness in my agony, with the sole pity, 'oh, no! not sick, only has the headache.' But neither insanity nor death comes to my relief. Oh, my, must I pursue this pain of persistent torment to the end

OUR CENTENNIAL RETURNS

In the list of names and amounts given below, we aim to be exact. We wish every pastor to scan the report and see that it is correct, and that it corresponds with the amount mentioned in his receipt from us. We cannot give the names of officers and churches in every case, because not one-half of them were sent in, and while the whole amount raised is less than half who we reasonably hoped for, we tender our hearbest thanks to the pastors and churches who generously raised the money sent us.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or disfigurement; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be the most powerful and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are truly wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

NEARER HOME.

One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er:
I'm nearer my home to-day,
Than I ever have been before.

Nearer my Father's house,
Where the many mansions be;
Nearer the great white throne,
Nearer the crystal sea!

Nearer the bound of life
Where we lay our burdens down;
Nearer leaving the cross,
Nearer gaining the crown!

But that silent, unknown stream
Rolls dark before my sight,
Whose waves on the other side
Break on a shore of light.

O! if my mortal feet
Have almost gained the brink;
If it be I am nearer home
Even to-day than I think.

Father, perfect my trust;
Let my spirit feel, in death,
That her feet are firmly set
On the rock of a living faith.

HARMONY OF TASTES.

BY REV. J. HEIGHT BEAN.

There is hardly, perhaps, to be found a more pliable term—one better fitted to stand as representative of ideas so very diverse, and, at times, so very diametrically opposite, than the simple word, taste. It seems to be one of those chameleon-like expressions which take their shade of meaning alone from the objects with which they are immediately associated—a convenient resort, applicable to almost every imaginable disposition of the human mind. It is not our object to discuss the various and diverse definitences—this were as gratuitous as it would be fruitless—nor yet to devise some unknown means by which all diversities of taste may become one and the same thing. Such a scheme is foreign to the nature of mind itself, as well as subverting the very harmony we strove to gain—but to ascertain whether there is such a thing as different tastes existing harmoniously together, and if so, how that result may be secured. "De gustibus non disputandum" has already passed into a maxim as imperishable as the difference in the constitution of men itself, and why should we presume to question another's right to think and act for himself? Minds, as well as countenances, were made to differ, and what dist nguishment, not to say pleasure, could there exist without? Moral truth is the same as attained by reasoning and investigation, and both of these operations in their very nature involve the ideas of difference. When man can succeed in stereotyping mind, in moulding into one mass every thought and dislike, every propensity and passion; when, in fine, he can change human nature, then may he hope to reader all diversities of taste and dispositions the same. Cultivation may change, to some direct, but it can never eradicate and make anew. Nor should we attempt it. Its legitimate object is rather to harmonize than destroy, to lead forth into appropriate action what already exists rather than to recreate those propensities over which it seeks to exert an influence are deeply seated within the heart and can never be removed, except at the expense of the mind's just balance. They have been placed there for good and it is only in their unchastened and perverted state that they spring forth into every kind of whim and irregularity of action. Even grace, that most potent of all influences upon the human heart, does not here wholly subdue these workings of the inward man. They are there still, constantly leading, unrestrained, to wilder every better principle of duty and of taste. And can mere cultivation succeed in what grace has left undone? All that it can do and all that it is called upon to do is to follow up and aid onward to consummation that which grace has already both begun and set forth to be accomplished by its assistance, viz., to bring all into the beauty and harmony of co-operate action and from it gather "the peaceable fruits of righteousness." Instead of stamping all at once with a dreary, unendurable sameness, it should seek to blend them into a sweet accord ance with each other and with truth, for it is this alone that can send through society the living pulse of happiness—it is this which should ever constitute the highest aim of the philanthropist and the noblest effort of the Christian.

But in unfolding the nature and existence of harmony, let us for a moment consult the great volume of nature and see whether its mouitions accord with our desires. The Deity, in his own operations in the external world, often shadows forth the principles of mental action and development in order that man should read and apply the important lesson. He speaks a language both in his word and works adapted to the comprehension of mind, and that mind is indeed culpable which does not open itself to receive and appropriate the impressions which are thus given. But God has not only prescribed limits to this world and brought all beneath the control of universal order. He has, by a strange congruity of his own, united the most hostile agents in the most inseparable friendship. He has filled all nature with harmonious opposites. His handiworks in universal illustration of beautiful and varied blending Science, with all of its inquisitorial racks, has ever been unable to extort from it other than harmony, though the very combination of inveterate hostilities. The earth rolls on its annual and diurnal round, nicely balanced between two directly antagonistic forces, and from them our seasons and periodic changes come and go, leaving us their varied pleasure. Sunshine and rain, decomposition and reorganization all harmoniously tend to the bringing and perfection of variegated vegetation. Were it all sunshine ours would become a desert land, a wilderness of drought, fit for the habitation of none. Were all things passing to decay with no antagonist principle of life, how soon would this fair earth become a dreary charnel h use of death.

The agreeable beverage, when we remove from it its commingled opposite qualities, becomes at once insipid, an object of loathing rather than desire; its very effervescence is oftentimes that which renders it so bland and cooling. Even water, mere primal drink, without its mingled saline and other ingredients, is rejected as unpalatable and vile. The picture of the landscape which presents no blending of shades and of colors, no objects appropriately grouped, but has the idea of dreariness. It is a desert and we gladly turn from its contemplation and seek relief in a more varied scene.

What were music, now so sweet, so soothing to the soul, did it consist merely of one sound? A monotony as painful and disgusting as it would be inappropriate to its use. Forever thus must we have been debarred from that delightful variation of tones, that blending of different and accordant notes, which now greet ne at every concert and in every rural walk. All nature speaks in the a language unequivocal. There could exist no sympathy between soul with external nature, none of that agreeable sympathy of kindred minds, did not bleeding, not sameness, harmony, not monotony, constitute the very life of every good, whether natural, physical or moral. All things here must have been marred and their pleasure turned into torment and disgust. But here nature stops; it tells us in a voice of trumpets, reiterated by all its works, the plain and entire necessity of harmonious action; but whispers only in shadowy accents the means of its accomplishment. We recognize the danger of an all-pervading God, bring harmony into confusion; and that is the extent of human wisdom. The how he locks within his own omnipotence; nature knows no self-moving agency, calling into being the most consonant beauty and varied and all-harmonizing laws are the device of him alone who made them all. They are regulated by principles as immutable as their very existence. And mind never attains its true equilibrium until, like them, it comes beneath the control of principles as unchangeable and pure as its own eternity and as all-prevading as its very inmost thoughts.

The union of all diversities is not to be effected, then, by the unvivifying perversions of law which govern the lowest of human passions, self, with all of its associates of the fall; has no more impelling power to renovate diversities and perversities of tastes than nature, unaided by Deity, has to recreate confusion into order. Self, in supremacy, must inevitably root out every vestige of harmony and happiness, just as all things earthly with no renewing power must crumble to decay, and earth become a desert of waste. There is but one way to harmonize tastes; one only rule, that which has gone forth from the lips of Him who made man's highest earthly joy to consist alone in its conformity. Philosophers of old have sought, and sought long in vain, for a universal solvent and harmonizer of all sought wrong. Nature will never confess to lying interpreters nor yield to the tyranny of brutal force. They would compel into compliance and not adept by a milder code. Stoicism was but the death of better feelings. It sought to create tastes and not to blend existing ones in unison. Epicurianism fostered all in perversion and none but the worst in harmony. It was not chastened desire and tastes whose gratification produced their all in all of happiness, but unlimited license.

We speak now of modern fourrierism—what is it but a resurrection from the dead of modern heathenism? We know not better how to designate it then under a personation of both stoicism and epicurianism. It is violence done to nature in the restraint of lawful tastes and non-restraint of those perverted. It is not nature's harmony. There is need of more than human wisdom to devise the secret universal concord. It must come forth from the same almighty voice that spake both nature and mind into being and adepted them each to their appropriate use

It is given, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you do ye even so to them" In this one precept alone do we discern the true unfolding of the otherwise unsolvable problem in Christian ethics—entire harmony amid diversities of tastes. It is here that all are made subservient to the happiness of man; here each particular interest is brought to beer upon the production of good o all. Self has but one part and that an entirely subordinate one. It is losing one's taste in the gain of reciprocal delight, gaining it at the joy of others' gratified desire. The joy that flows directly upon the recipient of benevolence is also that which, like the returning waters of the Nile, leaves its vivifying influence wherever it flows. It is the purest joy that can fill the human breast, the very life blood of happiness on earth, the consummation of bliss in heaven. It is a joy which the pennrioncontemner of others' rights can never know. His soul is forever barred against its entrance.

Without some portion of this life-giving principle, respect and esteem were names of unknown realities; conceived but not realized to float upon the breath of worldly fame or in the weakness of talent. All save their feelings and they are sacred. Their tastes and inclinations are cherished by them with all the tenacity that ours are by us, and the yielding of theirs coste them as much as the yielding of ours does us. The ruthless foot that dares wantonly to trend upon another's feeling can never long go unfettered. It is more than what belongs to human nature temely to cringe before the grinding tyranny of overbearing will. When, then unrestreinedly asserted, will be disregarded and the impions asserter despised. The Deity has uttered against such an enormity. His vindictive curse and the voice of injured nature only reiterates its Creator's word

It is respect that wins respect. It is the magnet that draws its own and reflects at once the base alloy. It is not haughty overbearing nor the assumption of regal dignity, nor yet the exhibition of cringing effeminacy, that can fully subdue the human breast and render all its tastes attuned to its own and others' pleasure. Never until a manly gentleness, an open and tender regard toward the feelings of all, shall pervade every heart and be exhibited in every action, can harmony or tastes exist as universal. "The wolf shall never dwell with the lamb, and the leopard lie down with the kid; and the calf, and the young lion and the fatling together, until a little child shall lead them." Never shall ferocity become the joined companion of gentleness, until it feel and be sweetly subdued by innocence and love

Cape May, N. J.

THE OBSERVANCE OF SABBATH.

BY I. B. TILL, B.D.

To desecrate, in the common acceptation of the term, means to divert from a sacred purpose, to treat sacrilegious, or turn a command from the ordained purpose for which it was instituted. We are commanded to remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy—that is, not to turn aside from the Sabbath God gave Moses a law commanding the observance of the Sabbath as a holy institution. This positive command to "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," is founded on the immutability of Jahoveh, who changeth not. "Wherefore the children shall keep the Sabbath to observe the Sabbath throughout their generation for a perpetual covenant; it is a sign between me and the children forever."

The word Sabbath as need in Scripture signifies rest, i. e., to cease to do, principally referring to the seventh day of the week. The strict enjoining of its observance is not merely to be found in the general Mosaic codes, but in the decalogue itself.

1. The Sabbath dev is coeval with the creation. The first Scriptural notice we have of the Sabbath, though it is not mentioned, it is implied in the close of the record of the six days' creation, "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made," etc. "And God blessed the seventh day and made it holy." The great Creator, who faint eth not, neither is weary, is represented as condescending to our weakness, resting himself upon the cloud of his glory, surveying the whole system which he had just made—these heaven and this earth, with all the host thereof, and sanctifying the day in which he saw them all completed. As man seems to have been created on the close of the sixth day before sunset, no sooner does the bright illuminary withdraw his light than the shades of evening advance and all is set once consecrated to devotion and rest.

"God blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it." When God blessed the Sabbath day he made it a blessing to all meukind by affording them rest from all seculer employment and affording them time for devotion. There is greater stress laid upon the observance of the Sabbath than any other ceremonial institution. "My Sabbath ye shall keep" This command is given to arrest the mind from all secular employment and turn the thoughts towards the spiritual and unseen world—particularly for instruction in the special worship of God by prohibiting all servile labor of man over beast and to secure recreative rest to all upon whom the curse had fallen. As a day of rest and as set apart for intercourse with God, it was designed as a type of "that rest that remaineth to the people of God," Psa 95, 11. "Let us therefore fear lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it" Heb. 64 These words, having a reference to the Israelites, are as appropriate and as applicable to people of this day as to those to whom they were originally addressed. "For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them" Paul said the reason that the Hebrews did not enter into rest was through the hardness of their hearts, which is unbelief.

2 The Sabbath is perpetually obligatory. This we infer from the nature and the design of the institution. It is a generally recognized principle that those commands that were made to the Israelites as Hebrews, and founded on their peculiar circumstances, passed when the Mosaic economy was abolished; but those founded on the immutable nature of Jehovah or upon the relations of man are of permanent obligation. There are many commands that bind man as man, father as father, children as children, neighbors as neighbors. It is evident that the fourth commandment belongs to this category It is of inestimable importance that men everywhere should have time and the opportunity for religious instruction and worship. It is necessary for all men and all servile animals to rest and recuperate their strength. This is universal and binding on all men everywhe e. No man assumes that the command, "Thou shalt not kill," passed away and ceased to be obligatory when the old economy became extinct. No; but, like its Maker, it was to stand as a permanent law to rule the conscience of men everywhere, expressing an obligation arising out of the nature of God and our relations to our fellow-men This law binds, whether formally enacted or not. Even so with the law of the Sabbath; it is obligatory, binding on all men. There are, no doubt, positive elements in the fourth commandment as recorded in the decalogue. It is positive that the seventh, and not the sixth or the eighth, part of our time should be given to the service of God. It is positive that the seventh day and not any other day of the week was intended to be set apart as a moral necessity. It is a moral obligation that God and his great works should be remembered; it is a moral duty that every where should assemble for religious instruction and the united worship of God. All this was required as the reasonable service of all men before the time of Moses and would have been required if he had never existed.

It is observed in the penalty attached to the violation of the Sabbath. "Ye shall keep the Sabbath, for it is holy unto you. Every one that defileth it shall be put to death"—Exo. 31, 14. The violation of no ceremonial law is threatened with this penalty. The neglect of circumcision which did indeed involve the section of the Abrahamic and the Mosaic covenant was not visited with capital judgment. But the law of the Sabbath stands above the level of positive enactments, which gives it a character of special sanctity Moses commanded the Israelites to gather manna every morning, an omer full, but on the sixth day they were to gather twice as much as on the preceding days, because to morrow is the rest of the holy Sabbath unto the Lord" In the one case we shall gather it, but on the seventh, which is the Sabbath, there shall be no manna

Not only do we find the observance of the Sabbath in the Pentateuch, but in the historical books of the Old Testament It is spoken of as a day of religious observence. But frequent mention of it is made as set forth as a type of the Messianic dawn. The prophet Isaiah has a reference to the blessings that shall fall upon all that observe the Sabbath when he says, "If thou turnest away thy foot from doing thy pleasure upon my holy day, and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable and shall honor him, not doing thy own ways, nor speaking thine own words, then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord. I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth and shall feed thee with the heritage of Jacob."—Isa 58, 13, 14 It is evident that the prophet in these sublime expressions has a reference to the godly observance of the Sabbath to all who make the Sabbath a delight in serving God This promise equally applies to all men and women in every age, the consummation of as much as it did to those under the old covenant.

The observance of the Sabbath or seventh day is seen in the historical fact, from the creation to the flood, a period of sixteen centuries Noah in Genesis, 8, 10-12; is said twice to have rested or stayed yet seven days, etc. In this we fail not to see the observance of one day in six, i. e., the seventh, as a day of rest; from this we see the division of time into weeks as found in Genesis 29, 27, 28. This division of time into weeks became an established usage among the Hebrews We cannot account for this hebdomadal division of time by referring to the seven planets We have not the evidence of the worship of planets at that early period of the world, especially among the Shemitic races. Besides this would be inconsistent with the Mosaic account of the creation.

The only satisfaction is found in the institution of the Sabbath, which fact will not only prove that the Sabbath was an original institution from the beginning, in the continual observance of the seventh day, or Sabbath, to keep it holy, is sufficient proof of a day to be kept holy already in existence.

3. The essential element in this command is that the Sabbath day shall be a day of rest from all worldly avocation and amusement, chiefly devoted to the service of God. It has been said by some expositors of the law recorded by Moses, that the Sabbath day is to commemorate the deliverence of the Hebrews from Egyptian bondage. They take the words as recorded, "Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence thr ugh a mighty hand and by an outstretched arm. Therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."—Deut. 5, 15.

Moses, in his repetition of the law, did not forget the reason given by God himself from Sinai. "Six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day. Wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day and hallowed it" The authority of the Jewish legislator is founded not only upon God's authority as creator of the world, but also upon his redemption of the nation from Egyptian bondage. "I am the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, promising to prolong thy days which the Lord thy God giveth thee"

It may be asked, what have we to do with these commandments? We reply so far as they are moral and bind the relation of the creature to the Creator, so far are they binding on all intelligent creatures. Our Lord gives us the summary of these commandments as universally binding upon all men, viz., "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul," etc. The second is like unto it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 22. 37-39.

Jesus came not to destroy these commands or the teaching of the prophets concerning them, but he came to fulfill what Moses in the law and the prophets did write. He came to breathe new life into it; to give to it the wings of the morning, sending it to the uttermost parts of the earth, conquering and to conquer These laws for the observance of the Sabbath were incorporated into the new dispensation with all the Mosaic laws, founded on the relations between the creature and the Creator, was taken up and adopted into the Christian code. Therefore, the command to remember the Sabbath as an holy institution is still in force and binding on all men because given to all. Men are still found to worship God in spirit and in truth to-day as in the days of the giving of the law, but not at Jerusalem.

Marriage is still as sacred as ever; but all the special laws regulating its duties and penalties for violation are abrogated Homicide is as great a crime now as in the days of Moses, but the laws of the avenger of blood and the cities of refuge are no longer in force. The same is true with regard to the Sabbath We are as much bound to keep one day in seven holy unto the Lord as the Israelites or patriarchs were. It is important for all men to remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy If the deliverance of Israel should be commemorated how much more the redemption of the world by the death of the Son of God? If the creation of the material universe should be a memorandum, how much more the new creation, brought about by the resurrection of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ from the dead.

THE "RECORDER'S" MILLENIUM.

BY H. T. JOHNSON, A M, D. D.

That our Church organ is slowly yet assuredly attaining its long-to-be-hoped-for stature, is a fact too patent to its many readers to require special exposition from any quarter or from anybody The Church, race and reading public are being gradually greeted by the golden dawn of an era in our journalistic world, for the which we have been waiting and longing through wearisome years. Toward this idealistic state the RECORDER has been moving for some time, but its evolution may be accelerated an hundredfold by the timely expression of a word of encouragement, which is good, and the contribution of every feasible means of support, which is better. A thought in reference to the improved features of the present endorsement of the suggestion for its further development, and a word of commendation in behalf of the able editor and enterprising business manager, may not be considered out of time or place.

The present editorial and business management of our Publication Department there are no two more important representative posts in the connection. But that there are also no two more trying ones of self-sacrifice and exposure to misjudgment, ingratitude and needless vituperation is a fatther fact that should go without saying. Rather than afford ing a "soft spot" or furnishing a flow ery bed of ease" to those who may chance to get there, our Book Concern usually turns out to be a "vale of tears" or "official slaughter-pen," according to the experimental verdict of not a few of its incumbents. Those hitherto journeying thither, as a general thing, have been made to feel glad twice

All credit, then, to Manager Embry, whose heroic efforts have resulted in the enlarged and improved appearance of the paper. To have increased its size in the face of a delinquent constituency and beneath the burden of an oppressive debt, certainly bespeaks tact, pluck and prowess on the part of Dr. Embry.

At the close of the last quadrennium, Dr Lee, fresh from the arena of literary labors, vigorous and able, yet in a virgin state, and, Branklike, not knowing whither he went; nevertheless, in response to the summons of the Church, cheerfully and hopefully assumed the vast and varied responsibilities of our editorial post. Widely divergent are the lines of duties and experience between the professional educator and the moulder of public sentiment through which the trustee has to pass. But in the latter case the test seems to be both more critical and crucial. Still our editorial incumbent has stood it manfully and praiseworthily, going on to "pefection" yet more and more.

That the goal of journalistic excellence is still before him, and that he may attain it, he plaintively appeals to all qualified to help him. That the tone of the organ may be more elevated; that its character may be heightened and more dignified; that it may hereafter move upon a more cosmopolitan and intellectual plane; that its groove of circulation may he broadened and that its thought-atmosphere may be less dense, but more lofty and healthier, are ends most devoutly to be wished for, and which, as the hope of the editor this year, will be consummated on condition that his contributors co-operate in the proposal

Let writers of every section and calibre come up the help of the RECORDER'S chieftain. Should it not be considered presumptuous we would re-echo the hint that it is both preferable and more profitable not to write without doing so creditably. If contributors would furnish articles only local in interest or scope, they should be rare and sententious. If they are writers of feeble parts, let them improve first, than practice at home or have their articles faithfully proved before venturing them before the critical inspection of the public. It is less humiliating to be "at sea upon" by the editor who consigns your meritless article to the stove or waste basket than to have the public offended by its appearance and complimentarily write you down a dolt. Let us all write less about "conjiialrtic," "my quarterly meeting," "our people," "my presiding elder system," "more bishops," "grand rally day," et id genus omnes, and more about "the relation of morality and religion," "faith," "science," "the old and new faith" et cetera ad infinitum.

May God speed the day when the pulpits and press "lock arms" and march in concerted movement up the high-road of progress.

THE COLUMBIA (S. S.) CONFERENCE.

BY REV. G. W. PRIOLEAU, B. D.

MR. EDITOR:—The Columbia (S. C.) Conference is destined to become one of the leading conferences in this great connection. She leads now, so far as numbers are concerned. We were gratified to see the great progress our mother has made. True, some of the pioneers have stepped down, but God has men in reserve, who stepped to the front, took up where the fathers left off and are pushing the battle to the gate Among this reserved force we see our old classmates, I. S. Lee as presiding elder of one of the districts and preacher in charge in the conference; R. E. Wall, the silvery tongned orator, who stood as a giant against the combined forces of the enemy at Bethel Church, Columbia, S. C. Then there is Dr. Dargan, who never knew how to fail, and Brother Sampson, the Christian and gentleman, and many others. Among the pioneers are Revs. Wm. M. Thomas, Weston and Baker. These gentlemen have been tried and are willing to be tried again; they have been put into the crucible of persecution, and when taken out, found to be the same true, loyal and fighting soldiers. Among those who have stepped aside to let the army go on, are Elders Priolean, Pickett, Blake, White and Rankins. Their voices of cheer are heard urging the young men on to duty God grant that their eyes may behold the Church more beautifully arrayed before they shall have put on robes of immortality.

The conference has done herself credit in the careful election of her delegates to the general Conference. The defeat of one big "Isaac" to the General Conference goes to show that men must not show the domineering spirit of a master and that there is a sure remedy for the "big head." The conference is growing stronger, intellectually. The young men are ambitions and full of zeal. We trust that the younger class of ministers will learn to accept a brother irrespective of what part of the land he is from, so that he is a gentleman, a Christian and a successful pastor. There seems to be one thing that a part of the conference has forgotten, that is, the time is now when men must think and what they may clothe their thoughts in words, orally or written; and the day when any man or body of men assume the right to take away from a man his right to express his opinions on any subject of the Church or State, that day they assume rights which are not theirs We can bring the horse in subjection to our will, but we can not make men think as we think. The visiting brethren at its last session were Drs Tanner, Arnett, Embry; Revs. W. H. Heard, M. B. Salter and your humble servant. It was our pleasure to preach at the Presbyterian Church of Newberry, the seat of the Conference. We were kindly received by the brethren and made welcome The hospitality of the people of Newberry cannot be surpassed Before the clouds roll by we will have returned. The inspiration we received at this conference can never die.

Editor Southern Recorder:

In the issue of the Southern Recorder of January 21st, your notice to the West Tennessee Conference unwarrantedly mentions my name in unsavory connection. In justice to me, you will please publish the following comple e and emphatical denial of the allegation which it contains:

Mark Well! You say you had the conference roll called and everybody was urged to subscribe to the CHRISTIAN RECORDER on the third day of the session.

If this was done, then a person or persons were appointed to receive the money for the subscriptions.

This was done Friday, (third day of the conference session). I did not arrive in Memphis until Sunday morning.

MARK WELL. No one said a word to me concerning the CHRISTIAN RECORDER or its subscriptions except Bishop Turner, who told me that a committee had been appointed to attend to the interests of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER.

MARK WELL. I deny having solicited or received one-tenth of a mill as subscription for the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, or for the Publication Department for anything.

THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

BY REV. B. W. LAMPTON, REPORTER.

The eleventh series of the North Mississippi Conference met at Yazoo City, at nine o'clock, January 3, pursuant to adjournment. Bishop T. M. D. Ward, D. D., being a day late for its opening wired the venerable T. W. Stringer, M. D., to open and begin business. Accordingly he opened and began business Tuesday morning, with many anxious hearts and strange new faces gazing upon him from whom much good is to spring for the upbuilding of this Christian cause. On Wednesday Bishop Ward arrived, renewing his established love and friendship with those who love practice and appreciate the lofty cause he so eminently advocates; as usual he seemed his station and with his unbounded commanding influences dispatched the various parts of his business with gratification to all concerned Visitors were numerous from both far and near, exhibiting an unabated interest in the course of our well governed Church. The visitors consisted of distinguished divines from the Mississippi and Georgia Conference and a general good time was had. The financial report was quite an newer one than of former years, being considerably in excess of collections in former years in all departments of our Church. Our reception and care in Yazoo City by its God fearing people cannot be surpassed by any city town in the North Mississippi Conference, for under the auspices of Dr. James Porter, pastor in charge, the members and friends of Christianity left no comfort unrendered for our pleasure and enjoyment. On the fourth day of our session, the order of business was complete to the election of delegates to General Conference, which, to the satisfaction of the entire conference, result as follows: Election of Revs. B. W. Stringer, E. R. Carter, L. M. Mitchell, G. J. Johnson, A. Jackson and W. B. Parker, after which the distinguished Bishop Ward made a short and impressive address, compelling the brethren to set aside politics and lay hold of the glorious cause of Christianity, not for fame or financial gain, but for the upbuilding of the cause which bore on the wings of love over the river of Jordan, even in the realms of Paradise, the honorable and revered son der of our Church, Right Reverend Richard Allen, and the purest and dearest mortal on earth of T. M. D. Ward, the wife of his bosom, Bishop Cain and a host of other bright jewels, whose works of righteousness and many deeds of benevolence are acceptable to Deity, who loves piety, truth, benevolence and virtue. Then, after rest on the golden shore, beckoning us come.

Dawn revealed Sunday, the 6th day of the session, with its gloom and dampness, but thrones of anxious hearers tripped their way to the various churches to hear the expounding of the gospel of Jesus Christ by brethren from various portions of our connection appointed by Bishop T. M. D. Ward.

The talent exhibited by the various distinguished divines planted a germ of warmth and Christianlike tenderness in the hearts of the Yazoolts, one which is so indelibly impressed that their Christian manners will ever be remembered. On Monday the compiling of various reports, together with a night celebration of our centennial anniversary, rendered many glad hearts; several distinguished divines made good and impressive remarks, showing the vail use reasons why every colored man and woman should connect with the A. M. E. Church. But, alas, dawn reveals Tuesday, the eighth day of our session, and at four o'clock A. M., ordination of deacons and elders by the Bishop began, in his usual and impressive manner with many charges to the brethren to wield their sword and conquer sin on every side; at eight o'clock the Bishop read the many appointments, giving a few words on his last year in this quadrennial session, some of which in his hurry to make the 10 o'clock train) was not heard. Then on and on they go, observing nothing, feeling nothing, and we add knowing nothing. For their education is a theory based only on a system or series of books which, when taken from them, leave them to wander on in hopeless ignorance.

Thought has never been awakened, conscience, the monitor of the soul, has never been enthroned. That he is immortal there is but a faint conception; that virtue is to be practiced seems a mystery. Yet he is called a smart child or young man, as the case may be. Enough, oh, terrible is the calamity that has befallen the character of that man or woman who has been thus educated! The kind of education for the American youth is that which will teach the truths of nature and nature's God, that they may see through the dim vista of bygone centuries the principles that actuated Socrates and Plato and Aristotle, that they may draw them into their lives and make it sum and substance of their own existence; that the foundation on which their character is built may be such that no system of philosophy, no false logic of avent, no theory of words will enter to destroy, but to build upon a sure, a strong, a solid foundation.

The facts of experience and not "book knowledge" we ask, we implore, that such elements enter the education of our youth, that their relation be such to cause it that the world may have men who know the right, and dare to do it.

The Virginia Legislature has specially empowered Miss May Amelia Smith to have the seal of the State engraved on the tomb of her father, who was twice Governor of Virginia. It is the last of "Extra Billy" (who entered the Confederate service when he was over sixty years old) that he and General Mahone, while reconnoitering the enemy, were fired upon and were compelled to fly. General Mahone dropped his hat, and Governor Smith dismounted, picked it up, and, riding into camp, presented it to Mahone, amid the loudest cheering from his brigade.

THE STRIKE in the Reading (Pa.) mines continues and great suffering follows.

PHILADELPHIA has been visited with a large fire during the past week, entailing a loss of property and goods amounting to about one million dollars.

DR. C. S. SMITH publishes an important notice in this issue. Without evincing any disposition to enter into a discussion of the merits of the question involved we simply say that it is a strongly drawn document and very forcible and clear in its construction.

IT MAY BE inspiring to our General Conference lay-delegates to know that the Rev. William Taylor was a lay-delegate to the M. E. General Conference of 1884, which elected him Bishop. He is one of the greatest men in the Episcopal office. In a recent letter he speaks of attending their General Conference next spring, saying that it will be very difficult to leave his African work. The General Conference will probably make him a "full" Bishop if it can ascertain that he is not full already. From our standpoint he appears quite as full as the fullest. Just how they will proceed to make him fuller is the question.

THE TARIFF question seems to be uppermost in political circles at present. Both the great parties seem to have mutually agreed that it shall constitute the issue for 1888. Few common persons will be able to see how it should outrank some other subjects of importance. That it does is only another instance of the hold money has upon us. Great moral questions are sunk beneath the question of gain. There has been much effort spent in making prohibition the issue, but the real strong men, the men who move our political machinery, will not allow prohibition to become the issue. There have been attempts to compare this subject with slavery, but the differences are greater and more numerous than the similarities. Slavery forced itself to an issue much more rapidly than prohibition can do.

THE GREAT blizzard in the far West has severely punished the people. It has been the coldest wave known to civilized America. Think of sixty-two degrees below zero! Hundreds of human beings and thousands of lower animals succumbed to the wild winds, driving snow and low temperature. Those who live in a timbered country can but poorly appreciate the condition of those who in such adverse circumstances were not only without fuel, but without anything like the loose timbers and wooden fences that are so plentiful in timbered countries. Farm implements, house furniture and fences, where there were any, have been used as fuel by many. Thousands of bushels of corn were also used as fuel. But some travelers and many others were so exposed that they perished. Sad tales are told of school teachers perishing on their way home, with little pupils in their arms, dead also; old and sick persons dying at home, while those upon whom they depended were frozen.

THE CHURCH'S opportunity is now, always. To it there are no times nor seasons. Its movements are as constant as those of the planets and should be as regular and harmonious. The Divine energy upon which they depend is equal to that upon which those of the planets depend. The inharmonies of our nature prevent the free course of this energy. The refinement of our associations is slow. There is many a well converted man who carries with him into communion so much of pre-acquired material that he is for a long while, though a strong wheel, a fifth wheel. He attempts to bear on to his new life a large amount of the "old man," his former self, with all its lack of refinement. The necessity of moral refinement is equal to that of the moral change. To be born again is in order to live again. To be made anew is in order to living anew. What mighty works must be wrought in us and among us. What patient, what careful examinations and watchings. What earnest praying and acting.

THE STRETCHES and yearnings of our natures towards all that promises pleasure or guarantees greatness are not limited to any given side of the human race. Therefore, the meanness that enters into the compact that protects any trade, any source of pleasure or avenue to the attainment of the full measure of our creation, is clear.

The word "white" or the word "black," referring to the color of person in any instrument regulating human associations, is a disgrace to men and an insult to God. There is too much easiness on the part of our Christian times on this subject. The division of conveyances, depots, hotels, schools, offices, churches, literary associations or places of amusement by these words, white and black, is incompatible with the well-being of a republic and a support of immorality. The division by color prevents the proper subdivisions by moral quality. These facts apply with equal force to every phase of the social question. Under the present social management in this country, no black man can be equal to any white man; no white man can be inferior to any black man. Every person is sufficiently wise to see whither such measurement tends.

THE GOOD article clipped from the editorial columns of the Southern Recorder, provokes the statement that "circuits" are really not necessarily greater avenues for movement than stations. A name is a small consideration in such case. Often the station preacher does a hundred fold more moving than the circuit rider. We cannot see the great distinction between the two that the Southern Recorder finds. The British Wesleyan Methodist Church, greatest of all Methodisms in age, is greatest in little else. With only circuits one hundred and fifty years it has not nearly the influence of the M. E. Church of a century. It is not this distinction that underlies Methodist success, but the earnest of the spirit that sends a sanctified ministry out into the world in a constant line, whether their "circuit" be among three hundred people all meeting in one building or three hundred meeting in four churches, paying railroads as much as preachers.

This idea of the patriarchal and prophetical circuits is indeed interesting, but not of any logical force in its connection. We could say as much of the circuits of the placets, etc. There is probably as much argument from nature, from patriarchs and prophets, in favor of stations; but what of it all? Preachers must go—must move, go about doing good, God helping, whether in station or circuit.

A FREQUENT expression of a pitiable, old, drunken man, whose new knew years ago, was, "What's a man when he ain't nowhere?" There seems to be a possibility for ministers in our Church to reach that indescribable place. The methods of trying ministers on charges of wrong-doing and transferring ministers from conference to conference for various reasons are lacking a very necessary link or two. Ought a minister accused of serious wrong-doing—or, indeed, any wrong-doing worthy an examination—be transferred beyond the jurisdiction of the conference in which the basis for such charge is said to exist? Reason and justice would both say, no, for financial and prudential reasons, as well as for justice. It must be more expensive to examine a case after a man charged has transferred; if he is to be present. If he is not at the trial he is unlikely to be justly dealt with. But his transfer and his subsequent appointment before a hearing is unkind and unjust to any people to whom he may be appointed, the ministers with whom he is to associate and to those whom he has left, believing that he has degraded his calling. It is a violation of the spirit of the law and aead subversion of government; favoring crime in the ministry and affording a cloak for sin. Now, after all this, suppose this charged, transferred minister becomes also a condemned minister, i. e., the conference in whose bounds he is accused has tried him, though absent, and finding him guilty as charged, has expelled him. Being already employed in another conference can he be in any sense considered in good standing in this second conference? This would seem to be a question to which but one answer could be given; that such minister is not in good and regular standing and should not be so considered.

However great the injustice that may have been done to a minister by the conference in which he is charged, in expelling him in his absence, a greater injustice is done the cause of the ministry by holding him in good and regular standing immediately after expulsion.

What becomes of these cases ultimately? They should not be allowed to sink into forgetfulness. The methods by which such men are employed should be investigated by the proper power and the responsibility for such unreasonable and destructive actions fixed upon the proper shoulders.

If a minister, after due notice of the intention of committee or conference, declines or refuses to attend the examination and is expelled, he should be placed on the outside of the ministry; especially so since he has forfeited the right to appeal. Surely it is sufficiently easy for Bishops to have a common list of all such cases, indeed of all ministers in the connection, and to place into the hands of their presiding elders the list of all ministers resting under charges, clouds or condemnations, instructing them that certain men must not be employed in the pulpit under any circumstance. Such an episcopal and presiding elder's list would obviate much difficulty and relieve the Church of scandal.

WOMAN IN THE CHURCH OF GOD.

The recognition of woman as the other side, the equal side, if not the better side of man, has made but slow progress. Though at creation there is every indication of her equality and none of her inferiority; she seems to have lost ground in many respects in the life-race from the very first on down through centuries. She has been debased to the vilest servitude, exalted to the greatest altitude of human deification, transformed from the poorest toy to the highest angel. Even the great civilization of this nineteenth century is only beginning to recognize and employ woman in her full value.

The Jewish Church was established when man was the representative of himself and woman also, largely; the commandments were given to men, the government was given to men, the priesthood was given to men, the spirit of prophecy was given to men. There were exceptions in respect to several of these cases, but this was the rule. So we could say the scribes, the philosophers, the teachers, the doctors, the lawyers, the chiefs and the warriors of later times have been men.

It is in our more Christian times that woman is taking her proper place. Every phase of even semi-civilization has approached the proper regard for woman in some respects. In one case she has been properly regarded as the mother, in another as the gentle modifier of rough human nature, still another as a good martyr to religious faith. In our immediate times the tendency toward making woman, not simply equal to man, but man like is too great. There should be great distinction between these two facts. All that has been said in praise and honor of motherhood, wifehood, gentle companionship and poetic influence as peculiar to woman has not over-measured her actual contribution to the race. But it is an important question whether, in our efforts to grant her all the honors due, we may not be in danger of robbing woman of the very ability to maintain those qualities that conquer and compel our devotions.

Woman are not only filling pulpits (which may be well enough), but they are clerking, pleading law, managing railroads and managing other large secular and coarser work.

Is it in the interest of humanity or of Christianity that this state of affairs should continue and grow? This question may be considered a long while.

The tendency of our times is not towards true refinement, but a refinement that is very selfish and without much heart.

The training of the rising world requires the combined presence and direction of both man and woman. It will be a sad day for the world when equality before the law shall mean that woman may legally be placed in any position that State or Church has to give; when she will be taken from home to attend the hard affairs of State. The strength and the rights of women must be maintained as the strength and rights of men are maintained by developing womanliness. The inspirations of woman's spirit upon the world are worth all that is given to the world by man's peculiar strength. The Christian Church will harmonize the two sides of humanity and ultimately find the golden line on the respective sides of which shall play all the graces and loveliness of woman and all the stern, rugged manfulness of man.

THE DIVINE PRESENCE.

In a letter received last week from a brother engaged in a revival, this statement was made: "I never before felt the Divine presence so really," referring to a certain meeting. That awakened again the thoughts that must so frequently recur in the mind of all men, what is this awful presence? We compare it with impressions, with imaginations, with desires, with the exultations of joy and the depressions of fear; it is none of these. We compare it with eloquence, with beauty, with form, with motion, with magnitude, with time, with space; it is none of these. We compare it with magestism, with electricity, with gravitation, with cohesion and adhesion, but it is none of these. Indeed, we find it above these and in connection with them.

Our efforts at explaining omnipresence is far from satisfactory to ourselves, and to those who hear, our efforts to explain it away would be still more difficult, while any efforts to explain the presence of everything else—of anything else—without taking account of the Divine presence is the most difficult of all things. Sometimes persons say, "the Lord told me to do thus." You may doubt this statement, you may deny it, but it comes from a man whom you would never doubt if his message to you was of the ordinary kind. Nor can you be sure that he is false; that he is following a delusion, because you have heard nothing from God? May not the Maker of ear and mind reach the mind without employing the organ that he has constructed so delicately as a medium between man? Others say they saw the Lord. Do you deny it? May not he who formed the marvelous eye and mind in such tender, such exquisite relations and for such noble purpose, make intelligible impressions upon that mind without employing the instruments so necessary to man?

Many say they feel his presence. Some say that is all imagination, but, like hearing and sight, feeling, both that kind which comes from touch, and may be called external, and that which comes from mental states and actions, is a fact; the former to acquaint the mind with externalities and the latter with internalities. May not God use the latter without affecting our minds by ordinary methods?

Whether or not these interrogations can be answered in the affirmative, one thing is sure: that the Divine presence is a reality, from which we cannot escape. It is of great interest to all men that they study this subject as a reality. The old Scriptures ask if a man by searching can find out God, and answer, he will be found by those who seek after him. The New Testament says they that seek him shall find him. This Divine presence overshadows us at all times, regardless of our condition. To the sinner seeking rest it is a present help in the time of trouble; to the way-worn traveler it is a rock in a weary land; to the stranger in the world's great throng it is the fairest of ten thousand; to the sorrowful it is the sun of righteousness; to those depressed with life's burdens it is a day-spring; to those to whom life is otherwise a waste, howling wilderness, it is the rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley, and to the dying it is eternal life.

The promise of God to Moses, "My presence shall go with you," has been repeated to every mortal pilgrim, and with it a score of concomitant and adjusted promises. Traveler, don't wait for the enthusiasm of the congregation and earthly communion of saints, all of which must pass away, to assure you of the abiding presence, but from every standpoint accept a present Lord.

Every minute has some duty.

Personal.

—Rev. J T Hammond, of Carlisle, Pa., will hold his quarterly meeting February 5th.

—Rev J. T. Diggs, of Newark, N. J., has been visiting his aged mother in New Kent, Va.

—Prof. F S Delany, A. B, of Lincoln Institute, Jefferson City, spent his holidays in St. Louis.

—Bishop Campbell has presented Allen Chapel, Philadelphia, with a Sunday school library worth $50.

—Dr. T. G. Steward was in our city last week and preached the funeral sermon of Mrs. Lydia Wears.

—Rev. P. F. Matthews, of Atlantic City, was in Philadelphia last week. He is succeeding nicely at his work.

—Rev. J. H. Armstrong is stationed at Houston, Texas, and is very highly commended by papers of his city.

—Rev. Mr. Dorsey, pastor of the Wilberforce College Chapel, is having a wonderful revival. Thank God.

—The church building erected by Sister Margarett Will on is in Franklinville, New Jersey, not New York.

—Rev. J. T. Shaffer has been quite ill recently, according to a Western exchange, is his brother, Rev. G. H. Sheffer.

—Dr. W. B. Derrick, D.D., has recently visited his district as presiding elder. We received a letter from him last week away up in northern New York.

—The Bastrop (Tex) Bee speaks in complimentary terms of our pastor in that city, Rev. Mr. McKenna, also of Bishop Waymau, who held conference in that city.

—Bishop Ward has completed the conferences of his own district, the two assigned him from the first district last year, having still to hold the South Carolina Conference in February.

—The Rev. J. H. Morgan, of Salem, N. J., has had a great revival, over fifty conversions. His church is in a good condition. The Salem people have gotten along well with the payments on their new church.

—The death of Mrs. Eunice P. Shadd Lindsey, of Xenia, O., has taken from our Church a faithful member and from this world one of its noble women. Mrs. Lindsey was above the average human being in Christian obedience.

—Sister Elizabeth Ralls sets a Sunday breakfast in Liberty Hall, Philadelphia, every Sunday morning, where the suffering, and often otherwise breakfast-less, may have a good cup of coffee and substantial food. God bless Sister Ralls.

—Mr. H. O. Tanner is spending the winter in Jacksonville, Fla. Philadelphia misses the young artist, who is doing much to redeem the black hand so long degraded by master. Last week's Harper's Young People contains a full page picture bearing the name, H. O. Tanner. It is as white as others.

—The Rev W. H Bryant has manifested great interest in the Johnson case, having been chosen spiritual adviser by cry a year. Johnson has been in the Media, Pa., jail under sentence of death during that time. His life has been respited from time to time. His case is now before the State Board of Pardons the second time. If that Board does not hear the petitione favorably he dies next month.

—At the recent session of the Texas Annual Conference of the A. M. E Church, at Bastrop, Rev. A Grant, who, for the past four or five years has been the able and zealous pastor of the church in this city, was transferred to San Antonio, where he will go in a couple of weeks. During his residence in Austin Elder Grant has won the good opinion and respect of all classes, and in his new field of labor carries with him their best wishes for his happiness and prosperity. Rev. J H Armstrong, of Dallas, will succeed Elder Grant as pastor of the A. M. E Church in Austin.—Austin Daily Statesman.

THOUGHTS ON REVIVAL MEETINGS.

BY A CHRISTIAN SOLDIER.

The holidays are past with their season of merriment and festivities and every one has settled down for winter work. The churches especially are this time nearly commence some effort to turn mankind from the darkness of sin into the light of the Son of God.

It seems to me that the results of the work would be larger and more satisfactory if the leaders of our several churches did not attempt the work with undisciplined forces. In order to obtain the best results in any undertaking it is necessary that some plan of procedure be clearly formulated in the mind and the work done on that basis. A general, when he is about to enter upon an engagement, considers the best positions for his army, the probable number and strength of the enemy, their means of defense, whether he will gain by a pitched battle or not—in short, he goes over the ground and becomes acquainted with the field which is to be the scene of future defeat or victory. It is not so much the bravery and valor displayed upon the battle-field that is the test of good generalship, as it is the power and good skill to plan a campaign, which tests the genius of a general and tells whether he is worthy of the name or not. Napoleon, before his memorable career in Italy, studied late and early, and ere the first blow was struck he had possessed the key to victory. The men who have led in the great battles of the world's history were followed by no undisciplined troops; but, on the contrary, they were men who understood the tactics of war, and with confidence in their own powers and that of their general, they went forward to victory and fame.

If preparation and drill are necessary for men who would obtain earthly honor, how much more so is it for those who have enlisted under the flag of the Great King, and who are engaged in a moral conflict, whose war is waged for the purpose of turning souls from the kingdom of this world to that of our God and his Christ. If the soldiers of the Cross are conscious of a higher mission than that which actuated a Grant or a Sherman, shall they not make preparation commensurate with the dignity of their work?

There is too much aimless work done in our revival meetings. Random shots may sometimes hit the mark, but is it wise to allow the issue of the battle to depend upon these occasional sharp-shooters? In order that the word of God be effectual in pulling down the strongholds of satan, it is essential that each soldier should be drilled in the finer arte of war, that he should be clothed in the habiliments of a Christian warrior. Let him not go forth to fight the great Apollyon without his shield; but put on the whole armour of God.

The songs which are sung upon the battle-field were war songs; songs which fired the heart of every soldier and incited them to victory. Too often it has been our experience to note that when the call has been made, urging those who would seek Christ to come and bow at the anxious seat, some soldier of the Cross with more zeal than knowledge, sings, "Come, thou fount of every blessing," "Try us, O God," or, worse still, one of those nameless songs that have neither point nor purpose. Our prayers should be special appeals to God for sinners and for strength to do the work. We want victory over the hearts of men; we want to see them turned to God; and this should be the burden of our prayers, not the sick and the afflicted, the poor and needy, and the distressed everywhere. Let the men who stand at the head of these armies of Christian men and women lay out before them the plan of the campaign the line of march to be followed, the proper division of the army, for there are some soldiers that would serve their cause better if they were relegated to the rear, and vice versa. We think the Church would see greater results, there would be less desultory firing, some times hitting and sometimes missing the mark; but, with minds and hearts consecrated, and faith in God, every shot would be a missile from the very throne of heaven, exploding with power in the face of the enemy of souls.

HINTS TO PARENTS AND YOUNG FOLKS.

Parents and teachers and the church with its appliances are all engaged in training youth to do. It is the age of doing. But the essential prerequisite of doing is being. Character is the seed of acts. In our haste to have every young man do something are we not forgetting that they must have a right start? Knowledge, moral convictions, religious principle are needful before young men are fit to undertake anything but subordinate employment. A youth whose whole thought is of a ball game, or of a dance, or of a banquet, cannot do the serious work of life successfully, cannot either make plans or carry out the plans of others. And yet, what is called "pleasure," in one form or another, is the whole thought and purpose and occupation as far as possible of many young lives. No wonder the preacher of righteousness, temperance and a judgment to come cannot get hold of such minds, or interest them in things unseen and eternal. They will not be interested in things unseen and temporal except as these minister to physical enjoyment; how much less will they be effected by the claims of another and immortal life! But while these gilded youth are living their butterfly life about a flame which will surely singe their wings and perhaps burn them to death, many of the other class of whom I wrote are learning in Christian associations and in Christian company how to live wisely, nobly and well. Not all of the young men who are so gathered turn out good men and useful citizens, but a majority do. They are without home training, but they have done their best to supplement the deficiency; they cannot go to foreign countries and gain knowledge of their languages and modes of business, but they are trying to learn foreign tongues in language-classes, and by the faithful use of the libraries to which they have access. They are cultivating mind and heart as well as the physical nature. If sometimes their work is a little rude and clumsy, still it is honest and thorough work, and has disciplined the man who wrought it.

The pastor will not be disappointed in his labors among this class of young men. They will be grateful to him for his friendly interest; they will yield a rich fruitage for all the care and thought and toil which he may bestow upon them; and in future years he may thank God that when disappointed in the young men who ought, from their advantages of birth and education and opportunity, to have been its helpers and friends, he turned to the youths in the Christian association and to the lonely lads from the country in their cheerless bedrooms and gave them his best thought and most untainted help. For these are the men who will largely decide the future of our churches, of our religious societies, of the charitable and philanthropic movements of the next generation. They are not triflers, they have got through with play if they ever knew what it was; they were made for work, when they are sent out into the world, and they know it, and mean to give the best work of which they are capable to Him who made and redeemed them.

The Christian young men are not all among these; thank God there are some children of the rich and the noble and the mighty, that are called; "not many," the Scripture says, but there are some, and they are born leaders in every good cause, and their hands are as full of saving interests as their hearts are of benevolent and gracious plans; but the hosts of the elect who are marked workers for God, having been trained in a harder school and led by a different way into his kingdom, are those who will disappoint the pastor or make him feel that his strength is spent for nought.—Augustus, in Zion's Herald.

NOTICE OF PETITION AND CONTEST.

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the African M. E. Church, in session at St. Louis, Mo., May, 1880, did, by resolution unanimously passed, express its pleasure and willingness to effect organic union with the British M. E. Church, and did create a Commission to treat with the representatives of the British M. E. Church on the subject of organic union; and

WHEREAS, The commissioners on the part of the African M. E. Church did assemble themselves at the place and time of meeting of the General Conference of the British M. E. Church, viz: Toronto, Ont., September, 1880; and

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the British M. E. Church, in session at the place and time aforesaid, did create a Commission to treat with the commissioners of the African M. E. Church on the subject of organic union; and

WHEREAS, The joint commission, to wit: the commissioners of the African M. E. Church and the commissioners of the British M. E. Church, agreed to effect organic union; and did formulate, consent to, approve and adopt articles of agreement for organic union, and attested the same by affixing their several signatures, thereby mutually agreeing and solemnly pledging and binding themselves and the denominations which they represented, viz: the African M. E. and the British M. E. Churches, to faithfully, completely and without reservation as to any part thereof, conform to, carry out, uphold, maintain and defend each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement; and

WHEREAS, The African M. E. Church, bound by the acts of its commissioners, did faithfully conform to and carry out each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement; and

WHEREAS, Bishop R. R. Disney, claiming to be the accredited representative of the British M. E. Church to treat on the subject of organic union, appeared before the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, in session at Baltimore, Md., May, 1884, and audibly and officially proclaimed, during the proceedings of one of the regular sessions of said General Conference of the African M. E. Church, convened in Baltimore, Md., May, 1884, that the British M. E. Church had faithfully conformed to, and carried out, each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement as formulated, consented to, approved and adopted by the joint commission heretofore referred to; and

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the African M. E. Church, in session at the place and time last mentioned, confiding in the correctness of the representations made to it by Bishop R. R. Disney, the supposed authorized agent of the British M. E. Church, did order the Bishops of the African M. E. Church to issue a proclamation decreeing and affirming the completion of organic union with the British M. E. Church in all matters in which the African M. E. Church was required to act and assent to by the stipulations and conditions of the articles of agreement; and

WHEREAS, Under date of September 4, 1884, and at Chatham, in the Dominion of Canada, Bishop R. R. Disney issued a proclamation decreeing and affirming the completion of organic union with the African M. E. Church in all matters in which the British M. E. Church was required to act and assent to by the stipulations and conditions of the articles of agreement as formulated, consented to, approved and ratified by the Joint commission first mentioned in the third (3) paragraph of this preamble; and

WHEREAS, Proof exists that the British M. E. Church at no time previous to, or since the issuing of the proclamation by Bishop R. R. Disney at the time, place and for the purpose named and expressed in the preceding paragraph had, or has, faithfully conformed to and carried out each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement for organic union with the African M. E. Church, now, therefore, be it known that—

I, Charles Spencer Smith, a minister in good and regular standing in the African M. E. Church, do hereby serve notice on all whom it may concern that I shall (D. V.) petition the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in the city of Indianapolis, in the State of Indiana, United States of America, Monday, May 7, 1888, to review the several proceedings by which the African M. E. Church sought to effect organic union with the British M. E. Church, and if sufficient reasons can be shown therefor to declare that the African M. E. Church stands related to the British M. E. Church in the precise manner that it did prior to September 4, 1884, i. e., separate and independent; but that such declaration shall not operate as a bar against the admission of any bishop, preacher or lay member of the British M. E. Church who may voluntarily apply for membership in the African M. E. Church; provided that should the applicant be a bishop, he shall not rank as such in the African M. E. Church unless elected to said office by a General Conference of the African M. E. Church.

The grounds of the petition will principally be as follows, to wit:

First. That the British M. E. Church has failed to observe and fulfill the condition of the second article of the agreement, viz: to "accept of the name and discipline of the A. M. E. Church, in any and every particular now and forever."

Second. That it failed to observe and fulfill the condition in the third article of the agreement, which required that the articles of agreement as a whole should be submitted to each of the annual conferences of the British M. E. Church for their approval or rejection; proof existing that the question of the ratification or rejection of the articles of agreement was not submitted to the Demarara Annual Conference of the British M. E. Church at any time between 1880 and 1884; and one of the courts of Canada has decided that the failure to submit the articles of agreement to the said Demarara Annual Conference between the preceding dates for its approval or rejection vitiated and annulled the entire agreement, and the no part or all of it was in any manner binding on any of the societies of the British M. E. Church, and refused to grant the writ of mandamus which Bishop R. R. Disney applied for to compel the trustees of the B. M. E. Church at Chatham, Ontario, to turn over the property to the possession and for the use of the African M. E. Church.

The petitioner will inquire—Did the African M. E. Church intend to simply effect organic union with but a mere fractional part of the British M. E. Church or with the British M. E. Church as a whole? The petitioner will affirm that if it meant the former then has organic union been completed; but if it meant the latter, organic union has not been completed; and for the sole reason that the British M. E. Church has failed to fulfill and carry out each and every stipulation and condition in the articles of agreement, thus releasing and absolving the African M. E. Church from any and all responsibility for the failure to complete organic union with the British M. E. Church, and also releasing it from all obligation to further recognize Bishop R. R. Disney as one of its bishops.

Notice is also given that the right to seats in the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, of all persons who may claim to have been elected as delegates from any part of the territory occupied by the British M. E. Church, prior to September 4, 1884, to said General Conference will be contested. The Demarara Annual Conference of the British M. E. Church is hereby advised not to attempt, under any circumstances, to send delegates to the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, for any other purpose than to apply to said General Conference for admission into the general body of the African M. E. Church; inasmuch as the said Demarara Annual Conference was not made, for reasons known only to the representatives of the British M. E. Church, a party to the consideration, rejection or approval of the articles of agreement for organic union between the African M. E. and the British M. E. Churches.

Further notice is given that the right of Bishop R. R. Disney to equal coassociation with the bishops of the A. M. E. Church in presiding over and regulating the affairs of the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, will be contested, and the petitioner will endeavor to show that the said Bishop R. R. Disney has never been, and is not now, a de facto bishop of the African M. E. Church.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 20, 1888.

MANAGER'S NOTICE.

We are just receiving from the binder a fresh lot of Hymn Books in cloth, sheep, roan and gilt, and, as business is dull just at this season, and we have some stiff bills to meet in February and March, we have resolved to offer churches, choirs and presiding elders this new lot of six hundred copies at a great reduction from regular rates for the next sixty days. One dozen cloth bound for $7 20; one dozen sheep bound for $8 40; one dozen roan (bla k), for $9 60; six extra roan gilt for $7.00, and a corresponding reduction on morocco of any these. Now, please send on your orders at once. Only until the last are all gone, and then complain that we cease selling at the same rate. Remember, there are only 600 copies at this rate, and the first that come will be the first served.

Remember, also, that we sell the People's Hymn Book, a small, cheap, excellent work, collected by Mr. S. B. Schieffelin. It contains tunes of standard excellence and the opposite page. Only 20 and 25 cents per copy. But we must tell you that the best selling song book we have had for two years or more is the little gem called "Sought Out Songs," by Rev A. B Earle, of Boston. This book contains the famous "Lily of the Valley," another lively tunes and hymns that stir the multitudes into a glow. Send in your orders. Only 30 cents per copy; 5 cents extra by mail.

Finally, we call attention to this paper two weeks late "to press" the last two weeks, and we come a little late still, this week, but with all this we submit that we are handsomer and handier than ever we have been. We are clipped and pasted, we are lighter weight and finer paper than ever before. One drawback only is worthy of note. Having changed our printer, our new pressman has not, for want of skill or time, been able to give as clear page as we have been accustomed to show our readers hitherto. In appreciation of all we have tried to do for the convenience and pleasure of our patrons, will not our patrons help us a little by securing the paper at least one cash subscriber for '88?

We earnestly request every subscriber and friend of the RECORDER to show the paper to a friend and ask him or her to try it for six months or one year. By so doing you will help us, and at the same time promote the advancement of a good cause.

THE STAR CONCERT.

The Star Concert for the benefit of the Parish Building of the Church of the Crucifixion, Rev. H. L. Phillips, pastor, will be given at Musical Fund Hall on Thursday evening, February 9, 1888. Miss Flora Batson, the Queen of Song, will be the leading vocalist, assisted by Miss Dora J. Cole, Soprano; Mr. T. S. Cheetam, Tenor; Mr. Louis DeBrown, Basso, and Mr. W. I. Powell, the "king of fun," with Mrs. Albert Wilson as accompanist. Miss Mary A. Crawford and Miss Mary B. Harper, the talented elocutionists, will also recite choice selections. Twenty dollars will be awarded to the person selling the largest number of tickets. General admission, 25 cents; reserved seat ticket, 50 cents. For sale at Ditson's Music Store, 1228 Chestnut St.

The heroines of Fielding's Novels would have been surprised at the calmness three Boston women exhibited under trying circumstances the other evening. As they were riding rapidly through the streets there was suddenly a lurch, a veering upon one side and a scraping of the carriage over the stones. The axle had broken and the wheel rolled off rapidly. The occupants did not scream nor faint nor exhibit any of the emotions which the heroines of former days thought proper to exhibit. With the simple remark, "The wheel is off!" they stepped quickly out of the carriage, which had come to a standstill, hailed a hardic and were riding away before the gathering crowd had had time to notice that the carriage was occupied at the time of the accident.—Boston Journal.

What Scott's Emulsion Has Done!

Over 25 Pounds Gain in Ten Weeks. Experience of a Prominent Citizen.

THE CALIFORNIA SOCIETY FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 7th, 1886.

I took a severe cold upon my chest and lungs and did not give it proper attention; it developed into bronchitis, and in the fall of the same year I was threatened with consumption. Physicians ordered me to a more congenial climate, and I came to San Francisco. Soon after my arrival I commenced taking Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites regularly three times a day. In ten weeks my avoirdupois went from 155 to 180 pounds and over; the cough meantime ceased. C. R. BENNETT

"Maurice Thompson is an ordained prophet of Nature! Whenever he talks of either Birds, Weather, or Archery, the very leaves on the trees stop rustling to listen, and the clouds stand still in the blue to wonder! His latest, 'Sylvan Secrets,' will repay the reading."—Evening Journal, Chicago.

"Mr. Thompson is a pleasing writer, and a new book from him, dealing with outdoor subjects in his own charming way, such as those who have read his previous works will not easily forget, is sure to be welcomed by an eager and extensive circle of readers. His observations are fresh, keen, intelligent, and full of a bright and original individuality."—Times, Hartford.

"This is a most delightful volume, written in Mr. Thompson's inimitable style. A born lover of nature, he makes the reader see through his eyes, and imparts to him something of his own enthusiasm. He is an ardent and intelligent bird-lover, and the secrets here revealed will be readily appreciated by unscientific readers."—Methodist Recorder, Pittsburgh.

"Mr. Thompson is a true poet, though his book is written in prose. He is a keen observer of Nature, an enthusiastic and intelligent lover of birds, and an original and instructive, as well as graceful writer. His frequent moralizings are delightful."—Evening Times, Denver.

"When Maurice Thompson pens the secrets of the thousand lips which God has placed about us, we seem to have been blind until his magic opened our eyes. Sylvan Secrets such as here are told us we would rather read than the secrets of a thousand years of history, for into this little volume the author has written the very essence of the nature of which he speaks. Such a chapter as 'Swamp Sketches' deserves place by Lamb's and Irving's essays."—Christian Advocate, Pittsburgh.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD.

SYMPTOMS OF THE DISEASE.—Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a "nasal twang"; the breath is offensive; smell and taste impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians.

COMMON SENSE TREATMENT. If you would remove an evil, strike at its root. As the predisposing or real cause of catarrh is, in the majority of cases, some weakness, impurity, or otherwise faulty condition of the system, in attempting to cure the disease our chief aim must be directed to the removal of that cause. The more we see of this odious disease, and we treat successfully thousands of cases annually at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, the more do we realize the importance of combining with the use of a local, soothing and healing application, a thorough and persistent internal use of blood-cleansing and tonic medicines.

CHIEF RELIANCE. In curing catarrh and all the various diseases with which it is so frequently complicated, as throat, bronchial, and lung diseases, weak stomach, catarrhal deafness, weak or inflamed eyes, impure blood, scrofulous and syphilitic taints, the wonderful powers and virtues of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cannot be too strongly extolled. It has a specific effect upon the lining mucous membranes of the nasal and other air-passages, promoting the natural secretion of their follicles and glands, thereby softening the diseased and thickened membrane, and restoring it to its natural, thin, delicate, moist, healthy condition. As a blood-purifier, it is unsurpassed. As those diseases which complicate catarrh are diseases of the lining mucous membranes, or of the blood, it will readily be seen why this medicine is so well calculated to cure them.

LOCAL AGENT. As a local application for healing the diseased condition in the head, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is beyond all comparison the best preparation ever invented. It is mild and pleasant to use, producing no smarting or pain, and containing no strong, irritating, or caustic drug, or other poison. This Remedy is a powerful antiseptic, and speedily destroys all bad smell which accompanies so many cases of catarrh, thus affording great comfort to those who suffer from this disease.

PERMANENT CURES. The Golden Medical Discovery is the natural "helpmate" of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It not only cleanses, purifies, regulates, and builds up the system to a healthy standard, and conquers throat, bronchial, and lung complications, when any such exist, but, from its specific effects upon the lining membrane of the nasal passages, it aids materially in restoring the diseased, thickened, or ulcerated membrane to a healthy condition, and thus eradicates the disease. When a cure is effected in this manner it is permanent.

Both Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are sold by druggists the world over. Discovery $1.00, six bottles for $5.00. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy 50 cents; half-dozen bottles $2.50.

A complete Treatise on Catarrh, giving valuable hints as to clothing, diet, and other matters of importance, will be mailed, post-paid to any address, on receipt of a 2-cent postage stamp.

What Scott's Emulsion Has Done!

Over 25 Pounds Gain in Ten Weeks. Experience of a Prominent Citizen.

THE CALIFORNIA SOCIETY FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 7th, 1886.)

I took a severe cold upon my chest and lungs and did not give it proper attention; it developed into bronchitis, and in the fall of the same year I was threatened with consumption. Physicians considered me to a more congenial climate, and I came to San Francisco. Soon after my arrival I commenced taking Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites regularly three times a day. In ten weeks my avoirdupois went from 155 to 180 pounds and over; the cough meantime ceased. C. R. BENNETT

"Maurice Thompson is an ordained prophet of Nature! Whenever he talks of either Birds, Weather, or Archery, the very leaves on the trees stop rustling to listen, and the clematis stands still in the hedge to wonder! His latest 'Sylvan Secrets,' will repay the reading."—Evening Journal, Chicago.

"Mr. Thompson is a pleasing writer, and a new book from him, dealing with outdoor subjects in his own charming way, such as those who have read his previous works will not easily forget, is sure to be welcomed by an eager and extensive circle of readers. His observations are fresh, keen, intelligent, and full of a bright and original individuality."—Times, Hartford.

"This is a most delightful volume, written in Mr. Thompson's inimitable style. A born lover of nature, he makes the reader see through his eyes, and imparts to him something of his own enthusiasm. He is an ardent and intelligent bird-lover, and the secrets here revealed will be readily appreciated by unscientific readers."—Methodist Recorder, Pittsburgh.

"Mr. Thompson is a true poet, though his book is written in prose. He is a keen observer of Nature, an enthusiastic and intelligent lover of birds, and an original investigator, as well as graceful writer. His frequent moralizings are delightful."—Evening Times, Denver.

"When Maurice Thompson pens the secrets of the thousand lips which God has placed about us, we seem to have been blind until his magic opened our eyes. Sylvan Secrets such as here are told us we would rather read than the secrets of a thousand years of history. Into this little volume the author has written the very essence of the nature of which he speaks. Such a chapter as 'Swamp Sketches' deserves place by Lamb's and Irving's essays."—Christian Advocate, Pittsburgh.

Rev. W. Forter writes: The Arkansas Conference reports, though a dry year, were Dollar Money, $2 149.50; for missions, $319 75, and for all other interests in proportion.

Rev. J. B. Green, McClellanville, S C., writes: My quarterly conference closed December 16 h, with laying the corner-stone for a new church. Our worthy Presiding Elder, S. W. Ballamy, and Rev. C. F. North, of Mt. Pleasant, were with us. The Quarterly Conference reports showed our work to be growing. We have received nearly two hundred members on the circuit since last February; one hundred and three of whom professed saving faith. My congregation is awake. The young people are doing much for the advancement of the masses. Our Sunday school is prosperous.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO GENERAL CONFERENCE DELEGATES.—Inasmuch as there is no standing committee on railroad arrangements, I have made application for reduced rates to the General Conference which mee s in Indianapolis, Ind. May 7 1888. The reduction, if granted, will cover every section of the country, and extend to every delegate, as well as to such other persons as may desire to attend. Delegates will please not endeavor to make local arrangements until further notice

In the list of names and amounts given below, we aim to be exact. We wish every pastor to scan the report and see that it is correct, and that it corresponds with the amount mentioned in his receipt from us. We cannot give the names of officers and churches in every case, because not one-half of them were sent in, and while the whole amount raised is less than half what we reasonably hoped for, we tender our heartfelt thanks to the pastors and churches who generously raised the money sent us.

Fraternally,
J. C. EMBRY.

NOTICE BY THE MANAGER.

We again call the attention of the pastors and presiding elders to the form of Warranty Deed we have prepared and published for general use in the purchase of church property. This form is simple, and plain as plain can be, yet it is believed to cover every point in the law. It was drawn by an old experienced attorney, with our Discipline before him as a guide. Price, per copy, or for $1.00 Address, J. C. EMBRY, Box 906, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CENTENNIAL OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

LAST CALL.

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do it at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing the same.

Brethren will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairman of General Committee.
B. W. ARNETT, Sec'y.

BETTER THAN EVER.

LESSON HELPS FOR 1888.

The Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church is prepared to furnish the best series of Lesson Helps that can be obtained. We have received testimonials from scores of our most prominent Sunday school workers endorsing and emphasizing the high quality of our periodicals. Our aim is to do the very best we can to meet the demands of our Sunday schools. A full list of our periodicals and their prices, will be found on another page of this paper. As we are the only authorized publishers of lesson helps for A. M. E. Sunday schools, we expect to receive that patronage which respect for law and denominational interests demand Samples and price lists sent free on application Address,

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in hundreds of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his sufferers. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with name, naming this paper W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, New York.

NOTICE.

All communications intended for the Sunday School Union of the A. M. E Church that are addressed to Rev. C. S Smith, Nashville, Tennessee, will be received. It is not necessary to give the name of the street nor the number of our business place. Our P. O. is Nashville, Tenn., is sufficient. Telegrams addressed the same way will reach us. We are fully settled in our new headquarters and prepared for business. C. S. SMITH, Secretary.

Hair Neglected

Soon becomes dry, harsh, coarse, and full of dandruff; it loses vitality and turns prematurely gray, or falls out rapidly and threatens early baldness. A careful dressing daily with Ayer's Hair Vigor—the best preparation for the purpose—will preserve the hair in all its luxuriance and beauty to a good old age.

"My hair was faded and dry," writes Mabel C. Hardy, of Delaware, Ill., "but after using only half a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor it became black and glossy. I cannot express the gratitude I feel."

Frederick P. Coggeshall, Bookseller, 51 Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Some six or seven years ago my wife had a severe illness, in consequence of which she became almost entirely bald and was compelled to wear a wig. A few months since she began to apply Ayer's Hair Vigor to the scalp, and, after using three bottles, has a good growth of hair started all over her head. The hair is now from two to four inches long, and growing freely. The result is a most gratifying proof of the merit of your admirable preparation."

Our school will open Wednesday, September 19, 1887. The university is located three and a half miles from Xenia, on the Columbus Pike, and three-fourths of a mile from Pierce's Station. The locality is remarkably healthy and pleasant. The mineral springs are health-inspiring and not a few have received permanent benefit. The capacity for training the young is not surpassed by any like institution in the country. All who are within the reach of all. Come and give Wilberforce a trial and we shall seek in securing for you never regret it. For any further information address the President, S. T. Mitchell, or
J. P. MAXWELL, Sec.,
Wilberforce, Ohio.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

LESSON HELPS IN FOUR GRADES.

THE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY. A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson helps for teachers and other scholars. Its value is increased by the introduction of appropriate forms for opening and closing services, hymns and tunes, maps, dioclo. ary of proper names, etc.

THE SCHOLARS' QUARTERLY. Similar to the above, but with such necessary changes as adapt it to the wants of scholars in the main school. It is carefully graded. Price per dozen copies; to one address, per year, 7 cents each.

TWELFTH LESSON PAPER is a four page weekly, designed for younger scholars who have outgrown the infant class, but who retain their fondness for pictures and simple stories. 208 pages for a dime.

THE QUESTION PAPER is a beautiful lesson sheet, four pages handsomely illustrated and printed on fine paper; for primary or infant scholars. Each number contains a sketch of the lesson, a page or more of "baby-land" talk. All for 8 cents a year, where five or more copies are sent to one address

THE CHILD'S RECORDER, now beginning its eighth volume with a larger issue than ever before, offers superior attractions for the coming year. With additional editorial force, and a list of regular contributors skilled in the style of writing desired by the young no pains will be spared to put this publication abreast with the foremost of its class.

DO YOU THINK TO PRAY?

Ere you left your room this morning,
Did you think to pray?
In the name of Christ our Saviour
Did you plead his loving favor
As your shield to-day?

When you met with great temptations
Did you think to pray?
By His dying love and merit
Did you claim the Holy Spirit
As your guide and stay?

When your heart was filled with anger,
Did you think to pray?
Did you plead for grace, my brother,
That you might forgive another
Who had crossed your way?

When sore trials came upon you,
Did you think to pray?
When your soul was bowed with sorrow,
Balm of Gilead did you borrow
At the gates of day?

HAS METHODISM FULFILLED ITS DUTY TO THE EXTREME OF SOCIETY?

BY REV. W. B. DERRICK, D. D.

The question asked is one of vital importance, especially to those who believe in Christian progression. May we not inquire what is meant by the extreme of society? First let us define what is meant by extreme. May we not see the term extreme, applying a two-fold meaning, extreme high and extreme low? May we not further inquire what is meant by society? Webster defines it, persons collectively who live in any region, or at any period; any community of individuals who are united together by any common bond of nearness or intercourse; those who recognize each other as associates; friends and acquaintance, especially; the more cultivated portion of any community, in its social relations and influences; those who give and receive formal entertainments, as—

Has Methodism met the requirements of these individuals, composing what is termed society, in its two-fold sense? Methodism had its origin at Oxford, born in the heart and brain of one who was reared among the cultured and refined of his day and generation; one whose social and intellectual standing was recognized by some of the best members of society in the age in which he lived. Although censured and scorned by a large number of the members of the communion to which he then belonged, they had to admit, on the other hand, the honesty and purity of his motives, because he simply declared that the great need of the then Christian Church was holier living. This could only be brought about by a larger development of grace in the heart, backed by a holy zeal. This he did, naturally, what was considered revolutionary on his part, and its founder a revolutionist, a term which need not be considered offensive when worn in behalf of justice and truth. Revolutions are necessary, and when they are carried on in the interest of religious, moral, political, physical and scientific reformations

Luther stands out in history as the greatest religious and moral reformer the world has produced. This title he could not have achieved without revolting against the practices then carried on in the church to which he belonged. The benefits accruing from the revolution incited by this religious champion are gratefully acknowledged by every evangelical Christian. What we have said in relation to Luther we can with the same propriety say of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, who, in adopting his new method of worship, so constructed its rules and regulations as to welcome all classes of society. This at once would convince the unbiased mind that the new organization had for its aim the Christianizing and evangelizing of the world for Christ. For it was founded on the broad basis of Biblical truth: "Of one blood God made all nations to dwell upon the face of the earth." The missionaries of this new organization had to contend with the Established Church of England, which was backed by a corps of learned religious teachers, reinforced by the wealth of the United Kingdom; yet, in spite of this formidable opposition, these holy men of God, led by the saintly John and Charles Wesley, waged war against the corruption and deadness then existing in the church, proclaiming as they went, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Their teachings were simple and plain, so that even the most untutored mind could understand when they would exclaim; "Whosoever will let him come." The stronger the opposition grew the more rapidly the news spread throughout the United Kingdom of the religious revolution then carried on by the new sect known as the Methodists. Waited by the breeze of heaven, the story was told in the palaces of kings and the lowly huts of peasants. Hundreds and thousands flocked to hear the old, old story told in a simple and effective manner, "Ye must be born again." Strong men began to listen; the attention of the Empire was arrested; the meaning of so great an uprising could not be understood. The judge on the bench, the lawyer at the bar, the statesman in the hall of legislation, the banker at his desk, the merchant in his counting-room, the farmer at his plough, the blacksmith at his anvil, the carpenter with the implements of his profession, the spinster at the spinning-wheel, the weaver at his loom, the miner in the coal pit, the seaman on the deck of his ship, the soldier arrayed in the uniform of his country, the minister of the gospel of sister denominations, master and servant, maid and mistress, teachers and scholars, professors of science and literature, military and naval heroes—all stood still and listened to the solemn truths of the modern Pauls, influenced by the Holy Spirit, warning a sinful world and calling it to repentance. Great throngs—hundreds and thousands—were gathered, who, having been pricked to the heart, were converted by accepting Christ as their Saviour. From among these new recruits were gathered as well the armies of missionaries in spreading the news of pardoning grace. At this first gathering of converts were to be found representatives of all grades of society. Some of these were from the social law considered first families, others from the second and third grades until was reached what are considered the outcasts. Although differing as to social grades and earthly possessions, they were all favorably recognized by our Heavenly Father, as all of them were nothing more than sinners saved by his grace This is the secret success of Methodism. She sings as she goes:

"Come, ye sinners, poor and needy,
Weak and wounded, sick and sore;
Jesus ready stands to save you,
Come and welcome, rich and poor."

May we not with propriety state that all the new methods in which the world has made such unprecedented advancement have been introduced since the advent of Methodism? Methodism, by its simplicity and truth, stands in the front rank of the world's great reforming forces, carrying with it light, heat, force, power and grace, electrifying and enlightening inventors' and discoverers' minds and equipping them with the necessary inspiration and courage to seek out new fields for man's industry and to simplify, as well as amplify, his diversified labors.

Thus has Methodism fulfilled its duty, not simply from a religious, but even from a moral, scientific, literary and intellectual point of view. England's great activity to-day must be attributed to her working classes, her commercial and manufacturing interests. The manufacturing and business success in all departments of trade is furnished from the class of society which is largely influenced religiously by the Wesleyan Methodists of England. Then, to a great extent, England's prosperity during the past century can be attributed to the religious element which composes the body politic, of which none has exerted a more extensive and wholesome influence than the church of our modern Luther, Wesley.

Methodism is aggressive. Its children regard the universe as the Master's vineyard, in which they are free to labor. Wesley, Asbury, Coke, Barbara Heck, Philip Embry, Coke and others, sailing westward for weeks, were tossed upon the tempestuous bosom of the Atlantic, washed and lashed by the saline spray, yet continued their course, guided by the Star of Bethlehem, until the happy shores of Columbia were reached. Here they planted the standard of the Cross and unfurled its folds to the breeze. With clarion voices they again repeated the same old, old story of Jesus and his love With such fervor and simplicity was it told that it attracted all classes and conditions, from every rank and station of life, as it did in the mother country The Irishman dropped his spade and shovel; the Jew quitted his bartering and trading, the wild Indian laid aside his war-paint and tomahawk, the German adventurers ceased from their hunting exploits, the Spanish buccaneers paused in their war-like expeditions, the negro stopped hoeing his corn, rice and tobacco and caught the sound. Both master and slave hastened to hear the message brought by the inspired men of God. When, with unbridled tongues and courageous souls, they gave utterance to such infallible truths, illustrating that with God there are no distinctions of color, race, rank or station, and that all which was required for the creature to accept was the plan of salvation as laid down in the Word of God. "Ye must be born again," so inspiring were these words that they ran like an electric current from the granite hills of New England along the base of the Sierra Nevadas, from the frigid waters of the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the warm and placid stream of the Carribean Archipelago. Scores and scores flocked to hear the encouraging words which fell from the lips of these messengers of peace. Meeting houses, as they were then called, sprang up all over the land The oldest and sublimest architecture entered into the construction of these edifices, showing that all her spiritual children are recognized regardless of their position in this life

The spirit of aggressiveness is to be seen as clearly developed in her success in the rich and fertile islands of the West Indies, where members of her communicants are to be found belonging to all ranks and stations of life, from the most cultured to the unlettered peasantry. Brazil, Guiana, Para, Guyay, Uruguay, even Patagonia, are beneficiaries of the blessings and civilizing influences which Methodism imparts wherever it is planted. These South American States, almost in sensu, had been, through the spiritual blindness of their religious teachers, are being regenerated and almost converted to the pure and simple evangelical truths as taught by Wesleyan Methodists Dom Pedro, the recognized chieftain of the South American States, although of a different faith, has acknowledged the benefits and blessings his subjects have derived from Methodist organization.

Mexico, controlled and led by Roman Catholics, has been brought to the light by the aggressive and Christian influences of Methodism. This is not only to been seen in her places of worship, but throughout the entire realm, in both commercial, scientific, moral, intellectual and political circles. This change may further be attributed to the influence of America's greatest military hero, the late ex-President Ulysses S Grant, who, during his two Presidential terms, appointed as Inspector General a distinguished Methodist divine in the person of Dr. John P. Newman, whose duty it was to circumnavigate the globe and inspect the mission ries and cousins who were the representatives of the American government in foreign lands Thus another opportunity presented itself for the Methodism to perform its duty to the extreme of society as this distinguished representative was brought into contact with diplomats, potentates and heads of departments, with superiors and inferiors in office, with masters and servants, and did so impress them with his superior intellectual, social and spiritual worth as to cause them to inquire, "To what religious sect do you belong?" and in the modest and unassuming manner of the true minister of Christ, he would answer, "I am a Methodist"

The power and grandeur of Methodism consists in the simplicity of its creed and personal hearing of its representatives, thus rendering them agreeable and acceptable to all grades of society. The islands of the sea—Fiji and Sandwich Islands—which, fifty years ago, were wrapped in heathen darkness, the inhabitants of which were cannibals, were entered by Methodism and in a population of 120 000 in the Fiji Islands alone, 102 000 of this number belong to the regular attendants at the Wesleyan Church Similar results are to be seen in the adjacent islands. Her day schools are to be counted by the hundreds, thus permeating the society of the globe therefore fruits meet for repentance," and the gathering crowds heed his message, and bow before his appeal while he baptizes them in Jordan. He is the preacher of the times, successful—yea, famous!

The admiring crowds and wondering Jews, awe struck by his genius, gather around him; they ask "Who art thou?" and he confessed and denied not. And he confessed, "I am not the Christ." "What then? Art thou Elijah?" And he answered, "No." They said therefore unto him, "Who art thou? What sayest thou of thyself?" He said, "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness. After me cometh a man who is become before me: for he was before me." He then cometh, but he is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose."

Listen to these words from John, when borne on the crested wave of popular enthusiasm, to the multitude ready to put any wreath of honor on his brow, and remember that scenes as strange and mysterious, as full of promise and expectation, attended his birth as attended the birth of Christ, and remember that prophecy had given him the title of Elias; listen to him say, I am only a voice; pay me no honors; honor and follow him that cometh after me; listen to this and tell me if any character in the whole range of profane history be equal to such a self-renunciation.

Napoleon, the hero of the French, observed his soldiers pointing out Venus, shining in the full daylight, as the star of destiny. He bowed to the shield, and ever after was regarded as the child of destiny. Imagine him in the situation of John!

One day, while John was administering the sacred rites to thronging multitudes, the unknown Jesus came into his audience and asked to be baptized. John baptizes him, introduces him to his congregation, hears testimony to his superior character, induces him to his ministerial work. Not long after, his disciples, jealous for their master's fame, came to John, and said, "Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou hast borne witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him." Pause! grasp the situation! This man that he ordained, this rivel that he had made, was now proselyting his congregation. Can human nature stand that? John answered and said, "A man can receive nothing, except it have been given him from heaven. I am not the Christ, I am sent before him. He that cometh from above is above all; he that is of the earth is of the earth, and of the earth he speaketh; he that cometh from heaven is above all

HE MUST INCREASE, BUT I MUST DECREASE.

These are the sublimest words ever uttered by human lips. I challenge the world to find a character in all the profane history capable of uttering them. "He must increase, but I must decrease." Compare with this Cæsar's statement, as he rode with his generals through a small village. Turning to his officers, he said in words characteristic of the man, "I would rather be first in this village, than second at Rome"

John's fame had reached the ears of the mighty Herod, the governor. He is invited to his palace halls. Herod listens to him with the utmost respect, with pleasure. He acquires great influence over this ruler. But Herod is married to Herodias, his brother Philip's wife. Shall John notice this? Shall he be silent? Will speaking do any good? Had he not better retain the influence of this ruler's great name? Shall he lose his hold upon him, and jeopardize his own life? So humanity reasons, not so John. He stands before this ruled ruler with this calm, bold, faithful utterance. "It is not lawful for thee to have another men's wife."

This is the stuff of which John was made. What if he was cast into the dungeon cell of Machærus? What if he was beheaded at the order of the tyrant?

He had conquered. Succession was his. And the victorious soul swept from the dungeons cell of Machærus through the gates of the New Jerusalem, into the city of the Most High, bowed before the great white throne, and heard the welcome, "Well done" of the Eternal

Turn to profane history. A similar episode occurs in the life of the great Cardinal Wolsey. Henry VIII of England desired a divorce from his wife Catharine, and applied to Pope Clement VII therefor. Cardinal Wolsey, his favorite counselor, was obliged to help in the cause of his imperious master. He went as legate to Rome, and plead the king's cause, but failed to obtain the divorce The incensed king deprived Wolsey of all his dignities. He was charged with treason, his strength melted away on his fall from the heights of power and he died a broken spirited man. Shakespeare puts these words into the mouth of the dying Cardinal: "O Cromwell, Crom well! Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not in my age have left me naked to mine enemies" This is the best profane history can give us. Great, brilliant, magnificent, miserable Cardinal Wolsey!

But let us sum up the character of John. How better can we do this than in the words and with the text-mony of his master "What went ye out into the wilderness to behold, a reed shaken with the wind? But what went ye out for to see, a man clothed in soft raiment? But wherefore went ye out, to see a prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet. Verily I say unto you, among them that are born of women, there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist"

Resting the assertion upon this one example of John, I repeat, Moral heroism is the best of heroism. To the Church, then, we look for examples of exalted courage, of heroic action. We need not heap up examples of martyrs to principle for Christ's sake. We only give that noble summary of St. Paul in his address to the Hebrews: "And what shall I more say? For the time will fail me to tell of Gideon, Barak, Sampson, Jepthah; of David and Samuel and the prophets, who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the power of fire, escaped the edge of the sword; from weakness were made strong, waxed mighty in war turned to flight armies of aliens. Women received their dead by a resurrection; and others were tortured, not accepting their deliverance, that they receive a better resurrection; and others had trial of mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment; they were stoned, they were strewn asunder, they were tempted, they were slain with the sword; they went about in sheepskins and in goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented (of whom the world was not worthy), wandering in deserts and mountains, and caves, and in the holes of the earth."

No greater nor more inspiring deed was ever done in Scotland than when, in 1843, for conscience' sake, in protest against the dangerous and unlawful interference of the State, in the face of great suffering for themselves and families, 475 ministers went out from the established kirk, and signed away their livings to the extent of $500,000.

Dr. Cummings prophesied "that he doubted if one went out, but was sure that not one hundred would." The Royal Commissioner, the Duke of Bute, thought twenty-five might go. When the time came, four hundred and seventy-six signed the deed of demission The news was carried to Lord Jeffrey that "more than a hundred of them are out." Springing to his feet, he cried, "I am proud of my country. There is not another country upon earth where such a deed could have been done!"

Never in his life had he thought of such a thing. His stomach grew weak at the sight; he began to feel decidedly seasick. "Rise, Peter; kill and eat" At length he stammered out, "Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten anything that is common and unclean" Then that voice thrice repeated, "What God hath cleansed, that make not thou common." Then Peter opened his mouth and said: "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is acceptable to him."

I think Peter was just then converted; he had just become Christ-like, at any rate. This was Peter's object lesson on caste prejudice Now, these "white Christians" of St. George M. E Church, Philadelphia, Pa., United States of America, had not been converted in the same way that Paul had been, because God does not "use cannon to kill chippie-birds with—too great a waste of powder"

Richard Allen was not a white Christian; he was only a Christian; but he was a hero, with a heart wide enough to take in all mankind into its fellowship He headed a secession movement, which was indeed a forlorn hope. But it was founded on manhood; it was in search of freedom. Its sons and not its were sexed mighty in war turned to flight armies of aliens. Women received their dead by a resurrection; and others were tortured, not accepting their deliverance, that they receive a better resurrection; and others had trial of mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment; they were stoned, they were strewn asunder, they were tempted, they were slain with the sword; they went about in sheepskins and in goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented (of whom the world was not worthy), wandering in deserts and mountains, and caves, and in the holes of the earth."

The religious is the main element in heroism, and the religious is paramount in the negro character. There was not examples of heroism of which we may be proud?

One hundred years ago our Richard Allen was a member of St. George M. E Church in Philadelphia, a licensed preacher thereof; striving by his influence other Christians, bearing more or less pigment in the malpighian layer of the skin, to that church; the officers of that church, however, did not wish a Pentecost of that sort of souls. They therefore passed a resolution that "the colored members should sit one in a pew and that next to the wall." But, like the Israelites of old, oppression only increased their numbers. Soon that church had a black wisdom, and the colored members around its four sides. The second edict of Pharoh was, that "the colored members should sit in the gallery" Still they increased. Desperate measures became necessary. So the "saints of the Lord" pulled the colored brethren from their knees at prayer, from before the altar of the Most High, and ordered them to the rear. All this happened one hundred years ago, you understand. Don't say if you think that it happened last Sunday at one of our city churches. No! This happened a long time ago, a long ways off from here. These were not heathen worshipers of Baal and Ashtaroth, who pulled them from their knees No, they were "white Christians," and the men they pulled from their knees were only "Christians."

There was once a very proud man named Peter; he was very proud of his pure blood and of his tarnished escutcheon. He could trace his family-tree back through King David to Father Abraham himself, and even further; but he thought that far enough. One day this upright man, holt upright, went on the house-top to thank his God that he was not like other men that he knew of And what do you think he saw? "The heavens opened and a certain vessel descending, as it were a great sheet let down by four corners upon the earth; wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts and creeping things of the earth and fowls of the heaven." The nasty things, thought Peter, I'll go right down from here! He drew his robe about him that he might not touch the pollution, when, horror of horrors! a voice came to him. "Rise, Peter; kill and eat." Phew!

SELF-RELIANCE.

I say this in full knowledge of the great work of other colored churches, I am high enough above sectarianism and clear enough from prejudice to see good in others and faults in myself, and I assert, and these others agree with me, that, in its powerful organization for driving home its influence, the A. M. E Church stands as the greatest product of negro brain, heart and hand I repeat, the A. M. E. Church has taught the negro self-reliance. Her schools have taught him self-respect They have said to him, the colored brain can not only learn, it can also teach. The negro can not only go through a university, he can make a university The colored man is not only capable of being born into the world of thought, but he can himself give birth to thought children. The negro has graduated with honor from Howard, from Lincoln, from Oberlin, from Yale, from West Point, from Harvard. But none of these are willing to employ the brains they have trained when enveloped in a black skin. To him all these give the same baleful lesson in political economy, "You may be a consumer, a producer you cannot be."

Wilberforce, leading a chorus of A. M. E Institutions, alone exclaims, Enter my halls. Come as a gardener, as a janitor, as a stable-boy. Be your skin white as the Polar snow, yellow as the gold of Ophir, red as the setting sun, brown as the coffee of South America, black as the jet of Africa, enter Yon shall fare as you deserve. The height you reach is measured only by your deserts. Every door is open to the meritorious. Nothing here is out of your reach Here merit counts.

Its publications offer a channel for negro literature, and at the same time make him known to the outside world The Recorder and the Review recognize no difference in the writings of black and white. Both use black ink In short, the A. M. E Church has taught that the talent to use talent is the best talent

This is that work of Allen which still marches on. Is it finished? Has the A M E fought the good fight? Has she kept the faith? Is she now ready to be offered up? Is it now time to fold the glorious banner, "African," and merge themselves into the M E? Many well meaning people feel called upon to apologize for anything colored I am not one of them. When the A M E Church, working hand in hand with white churches, has Christianized the colored man, she must then Christianize the white man up to a standard where he can recognize a Christian heart beating beneath a black skin. She must then bring all nations to the earth into this Church of Christ, this universal religion, this communion of humanity Then, under the banner, Richard Allen's banner enlarged, of "Brotherhood of Man and Fatherhood of God," she may join the army triumphant and rest from her labors.

THE DENS.

BY A. E. WOODBY.

Within the last few months many have been the clamors against the dens of vice which infest our country. They are swiftly leading the young out into the highway of vice, and from thence they are hurled into the pit of degradation to perish. But what is the cause of it? Why is it that men seek places of ill-fame rather than good? Is it because vice and degradation are born in them? Is it because they are reared in the atmosphere of such, and could not thrive without them? If so, why do not all languish and die when out of those influences? On the contrary, many live and thrive, and so the world goes on with many living for the good, and many for the bad. An old writer has well said that a man's education should be begun twenty years before his birth; and so it should. If neglected, however, until after birth, does it necessitate his becoming an educational wreck? There are those whose lives have been spent in vice and degradation but who have borne to the world children who blush in shame and disdain at the very mention of their parents' name Again, there are those who are the acknowledged lights of morality and Godliness with children who are the diabolics of the world. Judging from these facts it would seem, perhaps, that there is no education but that which is found with the making of the man. There are men and women, I believe, who have been hurled into the pit of degradation and who yet abhor it far more than the world abhors it for them, but they are enthralled so completely by it that they cannot break the chain that binds them and make their safe escape; so seemingly they remain and endeavor to remedy the misery that accompanies the sin and wretchedness, by plunging deeper and deeper into it. The child born of such parents has engendered in him the bitterest hate of for the vice and degradation that gave him birth and surrounds him. When old enough to realize his situation he leaves it in disgust. Then the world wonders why it is that out of the abhorred pit should come forth an example of morality possessed with G-dly attributes. Why should the world wonder? The child's education was simply begun for the good before his birth. The burning desire of the parent or parents was born in the child, and energetically he has put it into action Another set of parents, perhaps, are surrounded by good morals and seemingly possess many Godly virtues. Such persons are sometimes longing for an indulgence in some vice, but, knowing their standing in the world, and what they would be placed if they gratified their desire, they quietly spend their lives within craving for the indulgence, while without they practice the morality and Godliness of a saint. Children of these are frequently found to be the leaders of all that is low and vile. The world wonders again. The education of this child for what he had was begun before its birth. The desire of the parent or parents was boldly fulfilled by the child. Again, some people are neither positive nor negative; they live on with no special feeling as to whether they like or dislike certain things, whether they are for or against them. Children whose parents are of this class are liable to be either good or bad. What they are depends upon their environments. This class of people may be termed the undecided before birth. Homes nearly kept, made comfortable and happy by loving hands, are oftentimes the means of keeping such from straying out upon the highway of vice, while others, which are made unhappy by selfish hearts and hands, serve to fill the highway.

But men and women who are truly engendered with those qualities which make men and women, men and women indeed, no matter what their surroundings may be, no matter what their temptations are, they cannot be lured into the pit of degradation.

I do not mean to say that all persons born in the midst of vice and degradation are good, and that all born of parents whose precepts are moral are bad, for that is not true; but I do say that all born of either parentage under the circumstances spoken of, must, of necessity, according to the laws of nature, be as I said. If we would have the dens completely demolished we must begin in the right way to abolish them ourselves. Do we not see miseries enough through each succeeding day to cause us to take the places and influences which make them? And can we live for our fellow-man without seeing no decrease? Then is it not one duty to ascertain the causes and seek for them a remedy? We do not see enough of the good and its influences to passionately love and revere it?

Such good desires may not be implanted in us, but in our daily struggle within to cultivate a love for them. If we live sacrificing and unselfish lives for the sake of those who are to take our places in the future, need we worry about the future influences of the dens? I think not.

"Build to-day, then, strong and sure,
With a firm and ample base;
And ascending and secure,
Shall to-morrow find its place.
Thus alone can we attain
To those turrets where the eye
See the world as one vast plain,
And one boundless reach of sky."

REV. BUCKER'S STATEMENT AS TO WHO GOT THE MONEY.

CENTERVILLE, TENN., Jan. 20, '88.

DR J. C. EMBRY, D.D.:

DEAR SIR:—On the third day of the last session of the West Tennessee Annual Conference, I asked Bishop H. M. Turner, D.D., LL.D., to whom should I pay my subscription for the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, whereupon he, (Bishop Turner) appointed me to look after the interests of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. I visited every member of the conference, requesting him to renew his subscription to the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, explaining that by so doing he would save postage, but not a single cent, with the exception of myself, paid a cent. I sent you my subscription and am receiving my paper regularly. I notice in the Southern Recorder of January 20th that the Bishop refers to this appointment, also in ordaining a number of young white men to the ministry of that Church. He tells how he laid his black hands upon those Caucasian heads and ordained them to go preach the gospel to every nation and every tongue. Then he demands, with telling force, What colored man of that own Church ever received such recognition? Would I have been thus honored had I joined that body? Would the A. M. E Church mean to the world, were it M. E., what it means to-day? No. We showed them that we could lead as well as follow, and they respect us for it. Yes, the Bishop is right. The very word African M. E Church has a challenge. Its assertiveness is not only a "half battle," it is victory forestalled. The A. M. E Church has taught the negro his best lesson of

SELF-RELIANCE.

I say this in full knowledge of the great work of other colored churches, I am high enough above sectarianism and clear enough from prejudice to see good in others and faults in myself, and I assert, and these others agree with me, that, in its powerful organization for driving home its influence, the A. M. E Church stands as the greatest product of negro brain, heart and hand I repeat, the A. M. E. Church has taught the negro self-reliance. Her schools have taught him self-respect They have said to him, the colored brain can not only learn, it can also teach. The negro can not only go through a university, he can make a university The colored man is not only capable of being born into the world of thought, paid for $2 000 a year each, or $30 000 a year for fifteen Bishops, or the enormous sum of $120,000 for four years. With the present elder system, to the perpetual existence of which I am not opposed, with a cost of near $50 000 beside their railroad fare, saying nothing about the general officers, would be beyond the limits of extravagance.

There are some who want the old Bishops set aside. I do not know what for, unless it is to give themselves a chance. A man who would set aside Bishop Payne without his unsolicited consent, is cruel and void of a Christian heart. What I say for Bishop Payne, I would say for Bishops Ward, Brown, Campbell and Wayman. These men are worthy of the highest honor, and I say let them die Bishops of the A. M. E. Church.

What does the A. M. E. Church, which in a hundred years old, want with young aspirants who are only seeking prominence and honor in the sight of men? Of course we want three more Bishops Ours is a Christian Church; therefore give us more Christian Bishops.

Ours is a well matured and cultured Church; then give us well matured and cultured men for Bishops.

RECEPTION TENDERED REV. A. F. JACKSON.

BY REV. N. W. HARLLEE.

At Dallas, Texas, on December 29 th, the congregation, the Sabbath school, the former pastor, Rev. J. H. Armstrong, the Sunday school city schools, several ministers of different denominations and many citizens united to make the reception of A F Jackson as pastor of the A. M. E Church the grandest of the kind that ever happened in the city. A committee met the new pastor at the depot and escorted him to the church, where the choir greeted him with an ordinary of melody. Rev. Dr. H. S. Howell, President of the National Christian College, then led the blessing of God upon the new pastor and the congregation. The address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Thomas Armor. He said:

"In behalf of Bethel A. M. E Church and the citizens of Dallas, I have been chosen to deliver this address of welcome. I perform it with pleasure, mixed with sorrow. On the one hand I am pleased to hail you welcome, Elder Jackson, as hearty welcome as the warm blessings and kindnesses of the Church, and to our city at large, while we feel highly congratulated in securing the services of so able a pastor as we know you to be. On the other hand, to say that we could part with our former pastor without much sorrow, would prove us a people without gratitude.

"Reverend Sir, in bidding you welcome, I ask your honor and to extend to you the same fidelity and co-operation that we have shown to our ministers in the past, trusting, sir, that you may be successful in leading us on in the good work as we have been led by our faithful minister in the past. The Church pray the blessing of God upon you and your labors, that peace may be within our walls and prosperity within our gates. You know the matter cannot grind with the water that is past."

Upon closing the address of welcome, Elder A. F. Jackson rose and said: "I feel highly congratulated at the reception that your pastor has given me. I also congratulate the entire congregation and Sunday school, and the good people who have taken a part in this grand reception. I also congratulate you upon being so fortunate in securing the services in the part of so zealous a worker as Rev. J. H. Armstrong, who has done so good and grand a work here. I congratulate you upon your intelligent congregation, and upon having erected such a neat and commodious building. The house shows the kind of people. The most of us are strangers, but as time moves on we will become acquainted. I have no promises to make except that I will perform my duty the best I can."

At the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Thomas Armor came forward again not to deliver another address of welcome, but to deliver a $25 overcoat in behalf of the Sunday school and Church to Rev. J. H. Armstrong, who accepted it by telling the story of the boy and the sugar-barrel.

GLENCOE, LAKE FOREST AND RACINE CIRCUIT.

BY REV. E. H. HARPER.

DEAR EDITOR:—You will doubtless be pleased to hear that the work on this circuit has, during the past few months, been on the march to success, notwithstanding the very discouraging cloud that confronted us on our arrival in August last. To overcome this, and put the work in as healthy a condition as possible, we resolved to hold a week of special meetings at each place.

We began our work at Lake Forest. Here the power of God was convincingly manifested in its never-failing effect. The church was revived to active work, some of the channels of peace and heavenly prosperity that had been closed for a long time were now cleaned out, and the flood-gates of the streams that make glad the city of God were thrown open, and the old debris of malice and selfishness was carried out into the sea (we trust) ever to be forgotten.

There is a small membership of about twelve persons. The prospect of increasing this membership is greatly deterred, owing to the limited number of families in the place. However, these are filled with the spirit of earnestness and dint of determination to do what they can for God and his Church. A proof of this was manifested in the cheerful and successful effort in raising fifty dollars to assist my family in getting to this country. Then they are only a few in number, yet their hearts are full and large, ever ready and willing to do their best. There can be no doubt but Lake Forest will shake herself free from whatever may have clogged the wheels to prevent her advancement, and in the new race for which she is girding up her mind, will soon become unprecedented in her church work.

I now turn my at ention to Glencoe our last but not least place of visitation Here are found a few of our people, about eight families in all, struggling hard with the little church they were trying to erect.

The financial embarrassments that was resting upon them produced considerable discouragement, for the want of means, and the early setting in of the winter, has somewhat checked the operations. However, we are trying to surmount this hill of difficulty, and hope the time is not far distant when we shall hear the shout of victory thereunto. As a young church of only six or eight members, it requires the united prayers and sympathy of all lovers of the cause of Christ.

We now leave our readers for the present, and supplicate your prayers for our success.

DEATH OF MRS. C. H. SHEEN.

GEORGETOWN, DEMARARA, December 13th, 1887.

DEAR DR. LEE:—It did not enter my mind when writing my last letter to you, in which I informed you of my wife's convalescence, that to-day I should have to communicate the mournful tidings of her lamented death. Her health had been so far restored by the change to this colony that we contemplated leaving for America in March next year; but the Almighty disposed willed otherwise, and on the 30 h ultimo she took fever; the doctor was called, but he said there was no danger, and, acting according to his advice, I left her in care of kind friends and went to our mission station at Den Amstel village to preach centennial sermons on Sunday, December 4 h; but alas! on Monday morning a telegram summoned me to her death-bed. Her constitution, already weakened by the ravages of a sudden disease, could endure no longer, and she succumbed to the violence of the fever, which proved to be bilious of a most malignant type. She died tranquilly in the faith of the gospel, with her latest breath invoking heaven's blessing in behalf of her husband and children.

The character of my dear, departed wife was eminently that of a Christian; quiet, patient, self-sacrificing and unobtrusive; developing itself in a consistent walk and conversation; and in all my late trials she was always the same faithful, long-suffering, loving partner. Her end was eminently peaceful. She sleeps in Jesus. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. George Sykes, Vice-president of the Wesleyan Conference, at Trinity Wesleyan Chapel in this city, and from thence to the place of interment. The Revs. Paul Ellis, Wesleyan, and T. James Toddings, London Missionary, attended and followed her remains to their last resting place. Letters of condolence have been received from the Rev. John Moore, Mcravian, F. Ellis and H. V. P. Brookhurst, Wesleyan. My delay in the West Indies, as I informed you in my last, was caused by her illness; now, that her race is run, I have nothing to detain me and hope to be in New York early in February, God willing. I claim an interest in the prayers of the Church.

Now for a word anent the centenary of African Methodism in Guiana.

Our services in celebration of this great event were all well attended, and, I believe, gave satisfaction to all concerned. On Wednesday evening, November 23d, we held a grand concert and social gathering in the Hall, Camp and Robb, of which I presided. On Sunday evening, the 27th, I preached a centenary sermon in the same hall—text, Isaiah, 60, 15; on Monday evening, the 28th, a smoky on the life and influence of Richard Allen. The first-mentioned duty assigned me the task of delivering this eulogy and I was fortunate in securing the presence of the Mayor of Georgetown, G. A. Forshaw, Esq., to take the chair on the occasion. On Tuesday, December 4 h, I preached again at Den Amstel Village, and the death of my wife occurred on Monday, the 5 h. It was a severe trial, but the Lord has been good to me and I am sustained. I am praying for grace to bear the stroke, and kiss the rod, and bow in submission to His will who "will not break the bruised reed," who wounds us for His mercy's sake, but wounds to heal.

Remember me kindly in your prayers, and believe me,

Yours faithfully,
CHAS. H. SHEEN.

DEATH OF MRS. DR. LINDSAY.

A VERY ESTIMABLE COLORED LADY PASSES AWAY.

Mrs. Eunice P. Shadd Lindsay, wife of Dr. Frank T. Lindsay, of East Main street, died, at their home, Wednesday, January 4 a few minutes before noon. Deceased had been ill for several weeks, but not a few days before her death her many friends, and most of all her devoted husband, hoped for and expected her recovery, But it was not to be so. The faithful attention and ministration of the medical science and skill of her husband, together with that of other physicians, temporarily restrained, but could not effectually stay the silent but majestic march of the angel of death. To her, however, this messenger bore no terrors, but with a resignation born of a consciousness of a glorious immortality awaiting her she said she was perfectly willing and ready to go, that she had no fear of death Beckoning her husband to her, she admonished him to live that they, with their little boy who had gone on before, might be reunited and form a family in heaven, and with a parting kiss she quietly fell asleep—

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wakes to weep."

The deceased was a native of West Chester, Pa., but when quite a child her father moved to Buxton, Canada, where she was raised. Here her father, Mr. Shadd, was a large land owner, a wealthy and influential citizen, and chosen to several important offices. All his children received a liberal education. A son, Hon. J. D. Shadd, is a politician of note, having been Speaker of the House of Representatives of the State of Mississippi.

Another son, Abraham, now deceased, had taste in the judgment of some. But we have seen pastors with less than a dozen books of any kind, and those they had they did not half study, remain at a station four consecutive years. What good they did may be surmised. The truth is they did none, so far as preaching went They may have done great good as builders, as visitors among the people, or in some special manner. More through some grace or virtue than merit: but as an enlightening, elevating and instructive pastor, we deny they did any. Most men preach all they know in three months, much less in four years.

If the coming General Conference desires to give an impulse to the Church for good, let them go back to the old landmarks, and let every Bishop remaining a minister to one church longer than two years, unless he is absolutely building, and then require the voice or position of three-fourths of the members. This station-pastor aristocracy is becoming a gigantic evil; evils in more ways than one. It is cursing the circuits and missions, giving hundreds of ministers the big head, and is ruinous to hundreds who are Christianity disposed, and it should be good for this false idea that circuit preaching is degrading, and to prevent their degredation they must keep clear of a circuit. Whereas, circuit preaching is first-class in all respects.—Southern Recorder.

MAKING FOOTBERY WITH GREAT RAPIDITY.

A novel and remarkable exhibition was given at the Westminster Music when Harry Fiszman, the clever pottery worker, undertook the feat of making an entire tea-set of forty-four pieces in the short space of 7¼ minutes. When it was announced that such an attempt would be made, many were unacquainted with the record of the young man from Wedgwood's great pottery establishment, England, offered wagers that it could not be accomplished. Much interest was manifested by the large number present when Manager Bingham gave the word and Fiszman began his task, while several watches ticked off the minutes. The pliable clay was manipulated with deft and skillful fingers and twelve cups and saucers adorned the board in short order. Then twelve plates were piled upon each other, and then four large plates, a teapot, sugar bowl and two other vessels were brought forth, all perfectly shaped and almost perfectly formed. When the last piece was finished the hands on the majority of the watches indicated the lapse of eight minutes from the time of starting, and the remarkably quick workman rested, beating by a half minute. But he can make the set in seven and one-half minutes under more favorable circumstances. The whole work, including moulding, is accomplished by the aid of a "jigger," the only tools used are a thin brass wire for cutting the clay and a small revolving wheel.—Providence Journal.

Church News.

Rev. J. C. Brock, West Chester, Pa., writes: The holidays was a season of interest to the members and friends of Bethel A. M. E. Church. They had a series of entertainments instead of clair, as has usually been the custom. On Tuesday evening the 3 hbath school gave an exhibition. The scholars acquitted themselves finely under the direction of Mr. R. L. Patterson. On Wednesday evening we had a "Tom Thumb Wedding." These little folks never fail to draw a large crowd. On Thursday evening, Mrs. Farley with her wax figures was well patronized On Friday evening, the twenty-fourth anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation was observed. Thirty-eight young ladies dressed in white, wearing red and white sashes, each one properly labeled with the State she represented, presented a beautiful appearance. One young lady wore a dress bespangled with stars; in her right hand she held the American shield; in her left the liberty pole. She was crowned as the "Goddess of Liberty." The principal feature of the evening was the magnificent oration delivered by T. McCants Stewart, Esq., of New York. The theatre of the assemblage was raised to its highest pitch as the eloquent words fell from the lips of this gifted orator. He will not soon be forgotten in West Chester, and a cordial welcome awaits him here if he should ever revisit us. Much credit must be given to the energetic committee who had these series of entertainments in charge for the success that attended the effort. West Chester charge is at present in an excellent condition. The Sabbath school, led on by its efficient superintendent and his able corps of teachers, with the musical department managed by Mr. Chas. Baines, is doing grandly. Our pastor has a host of friends and co-workers. Sister Harriet Baker is assisting us in the effort. We trust many souls may be brought to Christ.

THE CLIPPING from the Southern Recorder, mentioned editorially last week, was, after all, passed over till this issue.

THOSE trades unions that deber from their pleasures and profits every boy and man whose identity with the negro race can be established, are depriving a whole class of the blessings bestowed by Heaven without reference to color, and appropriating them to themselves exclusively.

MRS. TAYLOR, a wealthy white lady in Orange, N. J., where the Rev. J. P. Sampson, M.A., is pastor, has bequeathed to our church in that city one thousand dollars, five hundred dollars for the cause of missions in said church. The Rev. Sampson has succeeded in entirely disbarging the indebtedness on the Orange Church and nearly trebled its membership. With bis good people, he intends to enlarge the church building soon.

THE VERY thoughtful article published on the cause of missions in our columns recently, with the statement that the author was unknown to us, was from the pen of our Corresponding Secretary of the Parent Home and Foreign Missionary Society. It is out of our line to publish anonymous papers, but we felt sure that that was not anonymous for any weak or bad purpose. It was a good article. The Secretary failed to send a note with it, or we feiled to read his note. It was the Secretary's bugle blast, calling the army of the A. M. E. Church into line, preparatory to opening his Easter campaign.

REVIVALS are in progress at nearly every point from which we hear. Bethel Church, Philadelphia, has had one hundred conversions. Wilberforce University has one hundred students in attendance, and a wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit is being enjoyed there; only four students do not profess Christianity. This is success. If the institution is acknowledged by God, as President Mitchell, Profs. Shorter and Jackson, and Secretary Maxwell say in private letters, what can man do but acknowledge it? "If God be for us, who is he that can be against us?" The very highest commendation for any institution of learning is its being used by God to transform the carnal mind to "the same mind that was in Christ Jesus."

THERE is more skill displayed by the present "representative of Peter" than by his predecessor, in the exercise of diplomacy. By his mild profession of liberality and other commendable qualities, he has won considerable devotion from Germany, England and the United States. This must not be understood as an indication that popery and protestantism are growing together, however, for popery never tures that way, but that the latter is "pooketieg" all the tendencies towards this reinvestiture of ancient powers. The Vatican cheerfully receives all the homage that can be given by the Court of England and the American White House, but cerefully gives back nothieg but benedictions for service thus rendered to God(!)

There appears to be a foolish superstition stealing over great nations relative to Romen Catholicism that would have done orodit to the dark ages. Why should the obief of the United States pay any moro attention to Pope Leo's consummation of fifty years' service in the priesthood than to a similar fact in the case of Bishop White, Bishop Foster, Bishop Jones, Bishop Campbell or Bishop Payne?

IT IS remarkable how uneasy our friends become at any general movement on the part of the negroes to leave this country or move from one part to another in great numbers. North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabame and Louisiana all object to our people leaving their territory for Kansas or Arkansas. Now that a Western company wishes to transfor thousands to South Amorica, the papers advise the colored people not to go, even such papers as the Charleston News and Courier. There is no donbt that the whole scheme is well underlain with a monstrous rascality, and that it is absolutely without the eligbest interest in the welfare of the negro; but in the restlessness created in the American negro's mind by the many outrages inflioted upon him by the majority of white citizens in all the ways possible, he is prepared to seize any threed throwu out promising relief, or simply obange. The advice of the News and Courier is, in the main, good. It is unwise to follow every inducement presented by men more interested in making money than in improving our ooudition. No enoocessful emigration can be made under the contract system. If negroes desire strongly to emigrate, they will do it, but should not do so till they do so strongly. Wherever we locate, henceforward, we may expect to push our own way through the meshes of life. There is no spot of earth that will yield us a living and protection unless we show forth enough of life to merit existence.

THE EXECUTIVE BOARD OF Publioation of the A. M. E. Church held sessions in Philadelphia last week. Bishop Ward is President of this Board and was present, as were Drs. J. H. A. Johnson and W. B. Derrick, who has not missed a call in the past three and a half years. The Board held an informel meeting in the Episcopal Room, 631 Pine street, Wednesday, 25th ult., and adjonrned to meet the next morning at the residence of Bishop Campbell, 1923 N. Eleventh street.

Here, January 26th, assembled the three named members of the Board, together with Bishop Campbell, Drs. Embry, Tanner and Lee.

The Centeunial Committee held a session in the morning. After the oeotequial matters were settled, Bishop Campbell, oeutcunial treasurer, receiving receipt for $1,700 as the entire returne from the call, which made a very pleasing impression on all present. Bishop Campbell oondnoted the committee as his guests down to a well-furnished table to increase their pleasure. In Bishop Campbell's house one is in a refined, Christian negro-Quaker Methodist's home.

After dioner the Executive Committee resumed its sessions and made appropriations of Centeneial funds, disobarging some old, rusty debts, that had grown none the weaker for their rust, of many years' standing. The Church has shown itself friendly, to say the least. With no compulsory law it has made of ite own free will this offering of nearly $2,000. There is more to oome yet.

IS "DOLLAR MONEY" THE BEST TITLE?

"EASY TO BE ENTREATED"—There is much comment upon and frequent repetition of several of the series in the train of excellencies that issue from the "wisdom that comes down from above." "Easy to be entreated," oe undorstood in our popular way, is as important as the best of them. To have a mind is simply to be spiritual, to use that mind rightly is to be spiritually correct; for the mind used correctly is the body used correctly. Strength of character, as ordinarily used, does not necessitate correctness of mind; for wrong character may have great strength. There is a point here worthy of much consideration; a strong oheracter may need reformation. It must hear the opinions of others. It may have need to be entreated. A strong character, easy to be entreated, is a noble character. Its strength is hold and exercised with respect to other minds and established in good judgment. Men are unkindly styled weak sometimes when they are strongest, and strong when they are weakest. The strong man gales strength by yielding to the pressure of reason and righteousness; the weak man loses by sticking to an opinion or a line of procedure simply because it has been ohosen. "Be sure you are right;" be easily entreated. Does this not say, be weak? By no means. When you are sure you are right, by all the oxternal testimony, by all your internal judgment, by the direction of the Bible and admonition of the Spirit, be hard-headed, stuhborn; but always remember to inquire for light, for wisdom, and when proven incorrect, how to the right. The oost is not a consideration in yielding to right. It is sometimes exceedingly expensive, but the reward is the stimulating object, the "far more and exceeding weight of glory."

IT WAS the pleasure of the editor to spend last Sunday evening with Rov. D. S. Bently at the Wylie Avenue Church, Pittsburgh. They reached their one hundredth conversion last Friday night, a coincidence with Bethel Church, Philadelphia, whioh also reached its one hundredth conversion on the same evening. The interest at Wylie Street Church was simply wonderful last Sunday. The great building was crowded at both the afternoon and evening services. Every part of the audience seemed equally engaged in the work. The whole house was mellow with the sacred presence. There have been in all 113 conversions and over one hundred have joined the church. There were upwards of thirty mourners, of all ages, from 7 years to fifty years. God is making great use of Brother Bently in Pittsburgh. From our standpoint, Brother Bently is naturally endowed for the work of an evangelist. We should be pleased if the Lord would set him at work as an evangelist in his own time.

The Rev. W. S. Lowry, in Allegheny, with whom we spent Sunday morning, has an interesting revival also; fifi en conversions up to Sunday. Brother Lowry and his people heva transformed Brown Chapel into a beautiful, convenient church. The spirit is very warm there. The Sunday school was well attended. In the afternoon the Rev. J. W. Riley, of the Manchester Mission, had the use of Rov. Lowry's church for a rally in behalf of his work. The Rev. Milligan, of the Zion A. M. E. Church, assisted him. There seems to be a general good feeling amoeg the Pittsburgh preachers. The Rov. Brooks, of the Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. John Holiday, of the A. M. E. Zion Church, appear highly interested in the revival at the A. M. E. Church. Glory to God.

The "Dollar Money" comes in for a large consideration by our contributors. The real fact is, there is no dollar law in force. When the main principle of law is undermined by an incorporate subolause and all actions and all requirements are based upon this snb-olause, the main element is annulled. If the law of Pennsylvania should stipulate that all real estate should be taxed at the rate of one mill per dollar, that would be an administrable law, but if it should subjoin the clause, "or a part thoreof," or "a reasonable portion thereof," the whole force of what had seemed the law would be destroyed and each citizen could pay what he pleased. There is really no law on taxation but this, every citizen may pay what he ploases. We have just this self-destructive element in our "Dollaw law." It requires four years to settle what is a "reasonable portion thereof." This is not settled uniformly. It has been said that the Bishops have agreed upon what shall be considered a reasonable portion, but it is easy to show that what is reasonable at one time or place is not so at other times and plsoes. Would it not be an improvement upon our present law to change the name of "Dollar Money" to "Connectional Funds?" Under this title we might raise twenty-five cents or fifty cents per momber. The title might appear to be a matter of small moment, but the heaviest sledge used by our competitive Christian brethren against us is the fact that we require each member to pay one dollar yearly for "this and that." The fact is, we do not require it, though we seem to do so. Is it not to our advantage to not seem to do that which brings us no good, but does us much harm? We have never yet reached the one-fourth of one dollar per member. Is it of any service to the connection to bleud local moneys with connectional moneys and thus appear to use forty per cent. more money in connectional work then we really do? This forty per cent. dedneted and it will be seen that we have never raised the one-eighth of one dollar per annum under the "Dollar law" for connectional interests. Conferences could easily manage the collection and disbursement of all moneys necessary to their local work. This would weaken the power of our Christian competitive churches' blows; for it could then be seen that but little more than one-twelfth of one dollar was raised under the "Dollar law" for connectional purposes. It is hardly bringing us nearly so much as it costs us to support this high sounding title. Our weakness is marked on the very face of the present law, when we step down to indefinitences and bold no man accountable for uniform stipulated return per member. For all the purposes among which the "Dollar Money" is distributed, while we maintain so many especial days for collecting moneys for particular departments, we cannot use one dollar per member. Certainly we shall be wise to "ent down" our title, cut off some especial collections or prevent our own progress by our inconsistency. The strong points of argument to support our present title are, first, that if we aim at a dollar we may hit a half dollar; that if we aimed at a half dollar we should hit only fifty per cent. of our object. This has the same weakness as the destructive, "When I say 7 o'olock I mean 8 o'olock; for our people require an hour to play on." We must remember that if we are not surrounded by enemies we are surrounded by Christian bodies that are making aggressive movements upon us; they will take advantage of any such fallacy; second, that the influence of the high sound is all allowed to leak out through the little hole—"or a reasonable part thereof." Where is the minister among us who has not heard from those without, "Why you all have to pay one dollar a year for such and such purposes" and from those within, "No, we don't; we only pay a reasonable part of it." Our laws should constitute a basis for consistent action on all things and enable us to make as easy a defonce of polity as possible.

WRITE.

BY REV. R. C. RANSOM, B. D.

The American people have a conscience. They have ears, and if a man really have something to say they will bear him. He that speaks what is really in him, will find men to listen, though under never such impediments." Dr. C. S. Smith, in a recent article in the RECORDER, asks a very pertinent question, "Are our leaders dead or dumb?" under which heading he prosecute a very vivid picture of the existing state of affairs. Mr. T. Thomas Fortune, following him, offers us a panacea for some of the ills complained of I hold that for the vindication, elevation and defence of the race we need writers. I know that the treatment of colored citizens of the republic, especially in the South, is a standing contradiction of the high privileges and justice of which we boast. I know that the dignity of our manhood is daily insulted. Each day we are confronted in the public press by the basest misrepresentation. White men ever have and ever will hold us up before the world in the light in which they see us. We grow very indignant, but our indignation is bottled up and kept among ourselves.

Some men, eminent among us for learning, men of ability, enter from time to time their protests against the unjust, often cruel and malicious, treatment we are forced to bear, but their protests are, for the most part, uttered in some obscure church, or in an assembly composed mostly of our own people, and rarely, if ever, right a single wrong. They, through the public press, should ring the story of our wrongs in the nation's ears until men would stop and listen from whence the voice proceeds. True, we are doing much thinking, but the world is enlightened very little by it, because our thoughts are not properly spread before the world. Colored men are writing a few books and pamphlets, but as a rule they either do not possess subject matter of sufficient interest, or are not presented in a way to arrest public attention.

A large number of newspapers are edited and published in this country by colored men. Many of them are good, but according to the make up of the average newspaper, it is impossible for them to develop a journalism of a high order. According to what seems to be their aim they are fulfilling their mission—to give the religious and social news, etc., among the colored people in various localities; but in order to become organs of power they must do more than this. They should represent the best brain of the race, arguing intelligently, pleading eloquently the cause of the race. Ideas must be met by ideas, thoughts by thoughts; logic, right reason is our weapon of defence. The books of white men crowd our library shelves; the white man's newspaper comes daily to our homes. We read their thoughts, we keep posted on all of their movements, but not so with them. They do not take or read our papers, and seldom, if ever, clip from them, so it is evident that they are a poor media of communication between us and the general public.

The Northern press is not fighting for us as in the ante-bellum days and immediately after. The South never did nor does it now sympathize with our material advancement, political rights, moral and intellectual elevation. Our champions will not come from without; they must come from within. When the white press does notice us it is mostly in an unfavorable light—to tell the country that a "black brute" has been lynched. The accounts of Southern outrages are copied by the Northern press, with rarely an editorial comment. I have said write. We must fight our own battles, we must plead where our pleadings will be heard. We should make ourselves heard in such papers as the Cincinnati Commercial, the Philadelphia Press, the New York World and the New York Tribune. There our voice will reach the nation's ears. If Hon Frederick Douglass has done more than any other colored man to cause the world to respect the intelligence, worth and manhood of the race, it is because he secured a hearing for himself and his people and attracted the attention of the world, compell ng it to listen to his reasonable and eloquent plea. The Knights of Labor make their grievances heard through every leading journal in the Republic. Are not our grievances greater than theirs? If we speak where there are ears to hear we will be heard.

In the Century Magazine a writer was recently giving a description of the home life of the negroes, which was about as true as one would be if I were to take a wretched family in one of the worst tenement houses in Philadelphia and say this represents the home life of white people. Such writing as this causes us to be held in disrespect. We must write. We need novelists, who shall make their heroes and heroines represent the best phases of character and life among the colored people. There is in the field of romance abundant material for instructive and thrilling narative. Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has done more to create a hatred for slavery and to show some of the noble characteristics of the race than a thousand speeches could do. We need a stage literature. "The Merchant of Venice" could never have been written by a Jew; Shylock is taken to be a fair representative of the Jewish people. What race has been more persecuted than the Jews? Certainly not the American negroes. Leaving out the money kings—the Rothschilds and the statesmen Gambetta and Disraeli—I believe I am safe in saying that the Jews owe their elevation and tolerance more largely to the writings of Spinoza, Moses Mendelssohn and Heinrich Heine than to any other source. On the American stage we are caricatured and burlesqued. These characters are taken to be true to life. The stage is a great educator; we should write for the stage. Materials are abundant and I believe that there are those among us who, if they would cultivate it, have sufficient talent for the task. Our young men and women are practically shut out from the great factories and founderies of the country. They have little or no opportunity to learn the trades as telegraphy, engineering and that of a machinist. This constitutes a most formidable barrier to our progress. This should be brought before the nation and kept before it in such a way as to attract attention and awaken a sentiment in our favor. We must thunder at these doors of industry until they are opened. We have men who are in every way qualified to lead in these matters. There is Dr. B. T. Tanner, than whom I know of no more able advocate in questions pertaining to the race; and there are Dr. Arnett, Prof Scarborough, Dr. Smith and many others of equal ability. Let these men speak. But we cannot cast our shot inside the enemy's line to prove effective. There is the great North American Review and the Century Magazine with open doors. Let our ablest men and women present our cause there, where it will touch the centres of intelligence and power. Let our writers cease firing all around the mark; let them take sure aim and fire at the mark. What does England do when she wants to suppress a sentiment in favor of Home Rule for Ireland? She pursues a policy of coercion, muzzles the press and proclaims the Irish National League. We have no such impediments. Our ablest men are little known or their worth appreciated. For all that is best among us, with the average white man, Douglass is the Alpha and Omega of the race. We must cease quarreling with "ole massy" while we are down at the big gate and he at the house. He is too far away; he cannot hear. Our ablest writers should make the great journals of the country ring with the story of the wrongs which we have so long in silence borne. Let the voice of eight million freemen rise and swell and peal like a trumpet of seven thunders until this deaf nation shall be made to hear. This kind of agitation will agitate. I speak not of impossibilities. The pen is mightier than the sword.

"THREE MINUTES' TALK."

BY REV. JOHN M. ABBY.

No. VI.

REVIEW OF THE FINANCIAL SYSTEM OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH

The Rev. C. C. Shaffer, it will be observed, touches upon his manifested clear conclusions with peculiar emphasis when he declares in his second proposition that the financial system under advisement is impracticable and confusing. From whatever point of view I regard it, the attempt to prove that the now existing financial system or systems is infeasible and beyond human control seems to fail distinctly. Our present methods of money getting for general purposes stand pre eminently above the old systems. The Church, which has now become edncated up to the demande of the various departments, wants no change. The annual reports of each of the General Offices show that they have their departments under inli control and are running them with ease without dashing against each other in their respective channels, and upon this principle can be seen an annual increase of finance, which the limited figures had space and time. And I remark further upon this point, that whenever and wherever the general interest of the Church is properly laid before the laity by general officers and pastors in charge there can be no conflict, and local interest will move on just the same.

To follow Bro. Shaffer's plan would throw ne back into the old regime, confuse the Church, paralyze the collections and make the money method impracticable sure enough. The readers of the RECORDER will remember that my dear Brother Shaffer helped to establish the system under review which he claims to be impracticable, and now attempts to subvert it. I speak not of a fair chance to develop its strength—bad legislela tou. Had he moved to modify, the writer of these notes would have given a hearty second, for the system is in need of some modifications, but no changes. My prayer is that the coming General Conference will let the General Departments remain separate and distinct as they are. "Learn to labor and to wait."

Brother Shaffer concludes with the remark that the system is too complex, to which I will make no reply, for the simple reason that it is almost a recapitulation of the two preceding propositions advanced by him. However, I close this summary of my "Three Minutes' Talk" with the remark that a consolidated system of finances would clog every wheel in our great engine.

WHY NOT OUR BISHOPS ROTATE?

BY REV. ANNO A. WILLIAMS.

Why not the Bishops of the A. M. E. Church rotate? is a connection that has often flowed in my mind. Rotation, I believe, is a better system for Methodism than the diocesan. A Bishop is elected for the whole connection, and, therefore, should not be assigned to a diocesan district. The diocesan district is that of restriction. Our Protestant Episcopal Church friends have the diocesan system, where their Bishops remain for life. This districting is not the surest and progressive enough for Methodism. A Bishop should not be bound in geographical lines and imaginary boundaries. Our Bishops are hindered and restricted in their jurisdiction. It is true "he shall, whenever the officers of any church call him and necessity requires him, visit any Episcopal district and act alone, in the absence of its Bishop, or conjointly with him in all cases in which the interest of the connection demands his service," yet there seems to me there is a delicacy in performing such service in the absence of the appointed diocesan Bishop. Courtesy alone allows a Bishop to visit a district and perform certain services in the absence of the regular assigned Bishop, yet the law demands that the Bishop of the diocesan district "shall travel at large through his district and visit every circuit and station and oversee the spiritual and temporal business of the societies in his district." A Bishop assigned to a diocese is as much restricted as a presiding elder assigned to a presiding elder district, or a minister to a charge. A minister has no right to interfere in another minister's charge; a presiding elder has no right to interfere in another presiding elder's district, and a Bishop has no right to interfere in another Bishop's diocesan district unless requested to do so. Our Bishops continually travel through each other's districts, yet they have no power to correct any wrong they may know of until called by the Church or requested by the diocesan Bishop.

The Diocesan District is not a general superintendency, but a restrictive superintendency. Our Bishops are not elected for diocesse but for the whole connection. When our General Conference formed or divided the connection into episcopel districts, they broke one of the organic laws of the Church which says, "It shall not alter any rule of government to the effect of doing away with the episcopacy or general superintendency." —Discipline, p. 88, section 5, article 2. When a Bishop is restricted to certain fields of labor in the connection for four years he has, in the broad sense of the word, lost the general superintendency. During the quadrennium we have lost three of our Bishops who fell at their posts. Those mighty men with God have gone at the Master's call to receive their reward. Their episcopal districts have been broken de jure if not de facto. In rotation such broken districts could not occur.

NOTICE OF PETITION AND CONTEST.

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the African M. E Church, in session at St. Louis, Mo., May, 1880, did, by resolution unanimously passed, express its pleasure and willingness to effect organic union with the African M. E. Church, and did create a Commission to treat with the representatives of the British M. E. Church on the subject of organic union; and

WHEREAS, The Commissioners on the part of the African M. E, Church did assemble themselves at the place and time of meeting of the General Conference of the British M. E. Church, viz: Toronto, Ont., September, 1880; and

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the British M. E. Church, in session at the place and time aforesaid, did create a Commission to treat with the commissioners of the African M. E Church on the subject of organic union; and

WHEREAS, The joint commission, to wit: the commissioners of the African M. E Church and the commissioners of the British M. E. Church, agreed to effect organic union; and did formulate, consent to, approve and adopt articles of agreement for organic union, and attested the same by affixing their several signatures, thereby mutually agreeing and solemnly pledging and binding themselves and the denominations which they represented, viz: the African M. E. and the British M. E. Churches, to faithfully, completely and without reservation as to any part thereof, conform to, carry out, uphold, maintain and defend each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement; and

WHEREAS, The African M. E. Church, bound by the acts of its commissioners, did faithfully conform to and carry out each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement; and

WHEREAS, Bishop R. R Disney, claiming to be the accredited representative of the British M. E. Church to treat on the subject of organic union, appeared before the General Conference of the African M E. Church, in session at Baltimore, Md., May, 1884, and audibly and officially proclaimed, during the proceedings of one of the regular sessions of said General Conference of the African M. E. Church, convened in Baltimore, Md., May, 1884, that the British M. E. Church had faithfully conformed to, and carried out, each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement as formulated, consented to, approved and adopted by the joint commission heretofore referred to; and

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the African M. E. Church, in session at the place and time last mentioned, confiding in the correctness of the representations made to it by Bishop R. R. Disney, the supposed authorized agent of the British M. E. Church, did order the Bishops of the African M. E. Church to issue a proclamation decreeing and affirming the completion of organic union with the British M. E. Church in all matters in which the African M. E. Church was required to act and assent to by the stipulations and conditions of the articles of agreement; and

WHEREAS, Under date of September 4, 1884, and at Chatham, in the Dominion of Canada, Bishop R. R. Disney issued a proclamation decreeing and affirming the completion of organic union with the African M. E. Church in all matters in which the British M. E. Church was required to act and assent to by the stipulations and conditions of the articles of agreement as formulated, consented to, approved and ratified by the joint commission first mentioned in the third (3) paragraph of this preamble; and

WHEREAS, Proof exists that the British M. E. Church at no time previous to, or since the issuing of the proclamation by Bishop R. R. Disney at the time, place and for the purpose named and expressed in the preceding paragraph had, or has, faithfully conformed to and carried out each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement for organic union with the African M. E. Church, and therefore, be it known that—

I, Charles Spencer Smith, a minister in good and regular standing in the African M. E. Church, do hereby serve notice on all whom it may concern that I shall (D V) petition the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in the city of Indianapolis, in the State of Indiana, United States of America, Monday, May 7, 1888, to review the several proceedings by which the African M. E. Church sought to effect organic union with the British M. E. Church, and if sufficient reasons can be shown therefor to declare that the African M E Church stands related to the British M. E. Church in the precise manner that it did prior to September 4, 1884, i. e., separate and independent; but that such declaration shall not operate as a bar against the admission of any bishop, preacher or lay member of the British M. E. Church who may voluntarily apply for membership in the African M. E Church; provided that he should the applicant be a bishop, he shall not rank as such in the African M. E. Church unless elected to said office by a General Conference of the African M. E. Church.

The grounds of the petition will principally be as follows, to wit:

First. That the British M. E Church has failed to observe and fulfill the condition of the second article of the agreement, viz: to "accept of the name and Discipline of the A. M. E. Church, in any and every particular now and forever."

Second. That it failed to observe and fulfill the condition in the third article of the agreement, which required that the articles of agreement as a whole should be submitted to each of the annual cooferences of the British M. E Church for their approval or rejection; proof existing that the question of the ratification or rejection of the articles of agreement was not submitted to the Demarara Annual Conference of the British M E Church at any time between 1880 and 1884; and one of the courts of Canada has decided that the failure to submit the articles of agreement to the said Demarara Annual Cooference between the preceding dates for its approval or rejection vitiated and annulled the entire agreement, and that no part or all of it was in any manner binding on any of the societies of the British M. E. Church, and refused to grant the writ of mandamus which Bishop R. R. Disney applied for to compel the trustees of the B. M. E. Church at Chatham, Ontario, to turn over the property to the possession and for the use of the African M. E. Church.

The petitioner will inquire—Did the African M. E. Church intend to simply effect organic union with but a mere fractional part of the British M. E. Church with the British M. E. Church as a whole? The petitioner will affirm that if it meant the former then has organic union been completed; but if it meant the latter, organic union has not been completed; and for the sole reason that the British M. E. Church has failed to fulfill and carry out each and every stipulation and condition in the articles of agreement, thus releasing and absolving the African M. E. Church from any and all responsibility for the failure to complete organic union with the British M. E Church, and also releasing it from all obligation to further recognize Bishop R. R. Disney as one of its bishops.

Notice is also given that the right to seate in the General Conference of the African M E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, of all persons who may claim to have been elected as delegates from any part of the territory occupied by the British M. E. Church, prior to September 4, 1884, to said General Conference will be contested. The Demarara Annual Conference of the British M. E. Church is hereby advised not to attempt, under any circumstances, to send delegates to the General Conference of the African M E Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, for any other purpose than to apply to said General Conference for admission into the general body of the African M. E. Church; inasmuch as the said Demarara Annual Conference was not made, for reasons known only to the representatives of the British M. E. Church, a party to the consideration, rejection or approval of the articles of agreement for organic union between the African M. E. and the British M. E Churches.

Further notice is el en that the right of Bishop R. R. Disney to equal coassociation with the bishops of the A. M E. Church in presiding over and regulating the affairs of the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, will be contested, and the petitioner will endeavor to show that the said Bishop R. R Disney has never been, and is not now, a de facto bishop of the African M E. Church.

DR. C. S. SMITH'S PROTEST.

CEDAR GROVE COTTAGE,
91 LINDEN AVENUE,
FLUSHING L. I., N. Y., Jan. 28, 1888.

NOTICE.

The admissability of the question which is thrown upon the surface in this most extraordinary document in my mind is surrounded by clouds of grave doubt as to the legality, as well as the practicability, of its presentation in the manner our Nester intends to bring about his snbtile revolutionary scheme at the coming General Conference. I am cognizant that it is the prerogative of every man to petition, may he be in Church or State—a fact no one will undertake to deny. But while this is true, is there not some danger of this prerogative going beyond bounds?

I now, through the medium of the Church, the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, notify Dr. Smith, the plaintiff that I am prepered at the proper time and place to convince him of the very grave error in which he has purposely allowed himself to be drawn, likewise establishing the following impregnable points:

1st. That the Union is an incontestable fact, as such there is no ground for contest.

2d That each is the case, there is no longer any organization known as the B. M. E. Church.

3d. That the organization which was once known by that title—B. M. E. Church—now forms part of the great integral whole, the African M. E. Church.

4th. That although financially it may not be as strong as other districts within the bounds of the Church, yet it is nevertheless true, morally, religiously, socially and intellectually the equal of any.

5th. That the persons within the bounds of said district are not meddlcants, as some would have it appear; and that the motives which actuated the articles of agreement as a whole should be submitted to each of the annual cooferences of the British M. E Church for their approval or rejection; proof existing that the question of the ratification or rejection of the articles of agreement was not submitted to the Demarara Annual Conference of the British M E Church at any time between 1880 and 1884; and one of the courts of Canada has decided that the failure to submit the articles of agreement to the said Demarara Annual Cooference between the preceding dates for its approval or rejection vitiated and annulled the entire agreement, and that no part or all of it was in any manner binding on any of the societies of the British M. MANAGER'S NOTICE.

We are just receiving from the binder a fresh lot of Hymn Books in cloth, sheep, roan and gilt, and, as business is dull just at this season, and we have some still bills to meet in February and March, we have resolved to offer churches, choirs and presiding elders this new lot of six hundred copies at a great reduction from regular rates for the next thirty days. One dozen cloth bound for $7.20; one dozen sheep bound for $8 40; one dozen roan (black), for $9 60; six extra roan gilt for $7.00, and a corresponding reduction on morocco of any class. Now, please send on your orders at once. Do not wait until they are all gone, and then complain that we cease selling at the same rate. Remember, there are only 600 copies at this rate, and the first that come will be the first served.

Remember, also, that we sell the People's Hymn Book, a small, cheap, excellent work, collected by Mr. S. B. Scheiffelin. It contains tunes of standard excellence on the opposite page. Only 20 and 25 cents per copy. But we must tell you that the best selling song book we have had for two years or more is the little gem called "Sought Out Songs," by Rev. A. D. Earle, of Boston. This book contains the famous "Lily of the Valley," and other lively tunes and hymns that stir the multitudes into a glow. Send in your orders. Only 30 cents per copy; 5 cents extra by mail.

Finally, we call attention to this paper. We have been late "to press" the past two weeks, and we come a little late still, this week, but with all this we submit that we are handsomer and handier than ever we have been. We are clipped and pasted, we are lighter weight and finer paper than ever before. One drawback only is worthy of note. Having changed our printer, our new pressman has not, for want of skill or time, been able to give us a clear page as we have been accustomed to show our readers hitherto. In appreciation of all we have tried to do for the convenience and pleasure of our patrons, will not our patrons help us a little by securing for the paper at least one cash subscriber for '88?

We earnestly request every subscriber and friend of the RECORDER to show the paper to a friend and ask him or her to try it for six months or one year. By so doing you will help us, and at the same time promote the advancement of a good cause.

☞Fortune smiles on those who put their shoulders to the wheel.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and every humor, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating remedy. Even Running Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Virulent blood-poisons are, by its use, robbed of their terrors. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, "White Swellings," Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

BILIOUS ATTACK.

DAVID G. LOWE, Esq., of St. Agathe, Manitoba, Canada, says: "Being troubled with a terrible bilious attack, fluttering of the heart, poor rest at night, etc., I commenced the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and derived the very highest benefit therefrom."

LIVER DISEASE.

Mrs. I. V. WEBBER, of Yorkshire, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "For five years previous to taking 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' I was a great sufferer; had a severe pain in my right side constantly; was unable to do my own work. I am now well and strong."

SALT-RHEUM AND RHEUMATISM.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Gentlemen—For several years I have felt it to be my duty to give to you the facts in relation to the complete cure of the most aggravated case of salt-rheum, by the use of your Golden Medical Discovery. A near relative of mine had been a great sufferer from salt-rheum for upwards of forty years. The disease was most distressing in her hands, causing the skin to crack open on the inside of the fingers at the joints and between the fingers. She was obliged to protect the raw places by means of chestve plasters, and has had no bandages, and during the winter months had to have her hands dressed daily. The trouble was quite severe at times and her general health was badly affected, paving the way for other diseases to creep in. Catarrh and rheumatism caused a great deal of suffering in addition to the salt-rheum. She had used faithfully, and with the most commendable perseverance, all the remedies prescribed by her physicians, but without obtaining relief. She afterwards began treating herself by drinking teas made from blood-purifying roots and herbs. She continued this for several years but derived no benefit. Finally, about ten years ago, I chanced to read one of Dr. Pierce's small pamphlets setting forth the merits of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and other medicines. The name struck my fancy, and seeing that it was essentially a blood-purifier, I immediately recommended it to the old lady who had been so long a sufferer from salt-rheum. She commenced taking it at once, and took one bottle, but seemed to be better. However, I reached that it would take time for my medicine to effect a change for the better, and encouraged her to continue. She then purchased a half-a-dozen bottles, and before these had all been used she began to notice an improvement. After taking about a dozen bottles she was entirely cured. Her hands were perfectly well and as smooth and healthy as a child's. Her general health was also greatly improved; the rheumatism entirely left her, and the catarrh was almost cured, so that it ceased to be much annoyance. She has enjoyed excellent health from that day to this, and has had no return of either salt-rheum or rheumatism. The 'Discovery' seems to have entirely eradicated the salt-rheum from her system. She is now over eighty years of age, and this is what they call "a limp" or "flap" back, covering the entire edge of leaves. Very fine, $5.50.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have a case of consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30, 1888.

NEW GOODS COMING IN EVERY DAY. They are clearing their way onto ocean ers, and shelves in a part of the store, and the more they push and crowd, the more the prices of the older things suffer.

We must make room for the new comers; we can best make it by getting rid of whatever is inferior. The quickest way is to make prices that will sweep done.

Very quick prices on the new things, also. Whatever the price of a yard of cloth or a pair of shoes or a piece of furniture, or of any other thing men or women wear, or use, little or bitter here, quantity for quality Our p ices are more likely to be below the market than any other way.

YOU MUST LOOK OFTEN TO KEEP TRACK OF THE things we are doing. We are doing to make your visits to the store more and more pleasant. The reading rooms, the resting rooms, the places where parcels may be left free of charge, the telephone and the graph and letter mail ing facilities are for you. We are glad to have you come to the store whether you care to buy anything or not.

Look, look at prices like, at your leisure. You are always welcome.

"BARGAINS" AT EVERY SOUETTE. AT MACOMber you will run across half price or third-price or quarter-price goods, but the best things are all over the store at warm weather values

For the sight ful people who think more of getting good substantial, wor hful articles at a fraction of the common price than of being at the very tip t p of every wave-crest of Fashion find a rich re ard by looking about the s re these days when goods are selling at little more than half price or the season, down go the prices.

Thrifty buyers watch for such chances. This is their hour.

Prayer strengthens the spirit for its conflict with the temptations of the world, helps in keeping the eyes of the soul open to the spiritual ventures that we are in danger of forgetting in the midst of the toil and turmoil of this life, and sharpens the spiritual and moral instincts that often get rusty for want of use.—Indian Messenger.

IS THIS AN AGE OF MIRACLES?

The physician who has a large correspondence with his patients constantly hears the still, sad wail of humanity crying for help. Patients appeal to him for aid for whom he knows cure to be hopeless. Alas! why have they waited until man's best aid can be of little avail? The wisest physicians do not lay claim to work miracles. Great as are the virtues of Compound Oxygen, it must be called in before the undertaker. In cases of consumption, neuralgia, rheumatism, asthma, and bronchitis, Compound Oxygen, as made by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., has achieved wonderful cures. Send for pamphlet, describing the Home Treatment. The book will be sent free, by return mail.

Edison says only one-fourth of a ton of coal is used. The rest goes up the chimney. Edison is wrong. The rest is left at the coal yard.

"It is worth its weight in gold," is a common expression. But, while the value of gold is easily settled, the worth of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as a blood purifier, never depreciates. It will eradicate scrofula from the system when everything else fails.

The Great Success

Of Ayer's Sarsaparilla is due to the fact that it meets the wants of the people, being economical to use and always reliable and effective. Its ingredients are the best, and their combination the result of profound study and skill. Thus, for all diseases originating in impure blood, Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands unrivaled.

"As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system," says Eugene L. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth ave., New York. "I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla."

Mrs. Ellen A. Clough, Matron of the M. E. Seminary, Tilton, N. H., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful blood-purifier, it is superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla."

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla gives better satisfaction than any other blood medicine I handle."—Geo. W. Whitman, Druggist, Albany, Indiana.

of sympathy for the negro with a kick, simply voice the sentiments of a large portion of the white people of this country in relation to the morality and the Christianity of the colored people. Such expressions we often hear in this section from pulpit and platform, from many who come to appeal for aid for their cause. They adopt this method hoping to excite the philanthropy of their Northern brethren and sisters by contrasting their immaculate piety with that of the negro, for whom they express their sympathy by representing him indiscriminately as a fetish hotentot or an immoral hypocrite. From such statements the opinions of many of the Christian characters of the colored people are formed.

Having been requested to read a paper before the Preachers' Meeting of the M. E. Church, Providence, January 16th, the unqualified statements of Bishop Dudley and others relative to the colored people suggested an answer to the subject: "What is African Methodism Doing to Help Elevate the Negro; or Does Christianity under the Leadership of the Negro Degrade or Elevate the Negro?" In stating the grounds for the introduction of this subject, it was said, "But some will say, perhaps, that that subject is trite." This subject is not trite, because it touches the negro problem at many vital points. The negro problem is not a question of the past, but a presence; it is a given it in popular discussions of the times and in the leading journals and periodicals of the day. Labor and capital, tariff, the silver surplus and coinage, the rum power and prohibition, the coming presidential campaign and the proper government of our large cities are all great questions before the American people, but it is seriously questionable whether either of these problems touch national interests at so many vital points as the negro problem.

Before emancipation the perplexing question was: "What shall we do with the negro?" The question now is: "What will the negro do with himself?" And why is this question so prominent? Because, politically, American citizenship is in it; because the wisdom or the folly of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States is in it; because the capabilities and the destiny of a race are in it; because the conscience of the nation is feeling the impress of God. Under the Christian light of to-day public conscience is awakened, sensitive and inquisitive. God is arousing the popular heart as to its duty to these long crushed, but now struggling and rising people. The solution of this question relating to elevation of the negro would be comparatively easy if left to work itself out by ordinary methods of human progress and development along the lines of just and equal privileges; but caste prejudices and color distinctions enter the arena with their disturbing differences and attempt, by outrageous methods, to throw themselves across the way of the negro's advancement. They pervade supreme judicial sanctums, ignore the expressed will of popular majorities, set aside constitutional amendments to subordinate human rights to State rights. The negro's color and his weakness appear to be pretexts for every wrong and outrage upon his manhood. In many places color is made to gauge every brain by the same calibre and to grade all characters to the same level. If a manly spirit is found to take issue at infringements upon his rights, false and fiendish charges are preferred, and shotgun or lynch rope are made to supplant the courts of justice. If he demands a fair day's wages for a fair day's work he is falsely charged with an attempt at insurrection, so that the militia may be called out and colored people indiscriminately shot under forms of law. In defiance of constitution and laws that protect the rights of all, the elective franchise, the chief safeguard of citizen liberty, is openly wrested from him in many parts of the South and he compelled to be represented in State and National councils by those whose hands are stained in fraud. In the coming presidential campaign and the proper government of our large cities are all great questions before the American people, but it is seriously questionable whether either of these problems touch national interests at so many vital points as the negro problem.

But this crushing power of caste pursues the negro into more sacred precincts than politics. The color line is made to rear separate schools and churches, cut annual conferences, divide religious assemblies and sever episcopal dioceses. It enters the temple of God with its distinctions and writes above its door, "Whosoever will may come except the negro." It has the gates to cemeteries, the last resting place of the dead, with the inscription, "In life I hated you; in death I will not be with you." It taints the gospel of Christ with its foul philosophy of a partial God the respecter of persons, affording another most astonishing fact of the age that, in the face of all this the negro in his ignorance under these crushing outrages by so-called Christians has not turned in disgust from Christianity to irreparable barbarism The explanation is only to be found in the fact that the negro's deep spiritual penetration enabled him to discern beneath all this the true nature of the Divine character, grasp a firm grip on God's promises which have sustained him. Thus while the free Indian, refusing to bow before the Cross, is going down, the enslaved negro, accepting Christianity, is rising and flourishing.

In the face of these facts where, with more propriety, should attention be repeatedly called to a subject so vital in its humane, Christian and political bearing than at a meeting of ministers, the directors of the interests of moral and religious thought of the country?

It is evident that sin and ignorance, with their consequent weaknesses, are the causes of many of the above mentioned evils. As African Methodists we believe that the remedies for the colored man's misfortunes are to be found in a cultured brain, a skillful hand and a Christian heart. We believe that if the black man would arise above his misfortunes the solution must help himself. There must be a force within responsive to aids without. African Methodism touches the religious, moral and educational phases of the negro problem, and in proportion the colored people are doing to help themselves. As a Christian organization we are helping to solve this question through the doctrines, forms and usages of Episcopal Methodism. We have been dealing with this question, in efforts at self-help, since 1787.

After an outline history of the rise and progress of the A. M. E. Church, with a resume of what she is doing in the General Departments to diffuse general intelligence among the masses, in the Sunday school, missionary, educational departments and in the cause of prohibition and general moral reform as well as train them in systematic benevolence through the financial methods. The work other colored Christian organizations was cited so as to see in the light of facts if Bishop Dudley's unqualified statements were true.

The argument was closed by saying: "Not only do these facts refute the unqualified statements of Bishop Dudley as to the morality and the religion of the negro, but it takes in connection with the negro's industry since emancipation, as shown by the increased production of cotton, corn, sugar, rice and tobacco, his business tact and economy in the acquirement of taxable property with comfortable homes, his improvement in morals and religion seen in the annual amounts given to sustain them, and that there is not an Anarchist among them except Parson's wife (it is said); his love for learning seen in the rapid increase of intelligence, with the 950,000 colored children in schools, they will serve also to show that the negro problem need not long perplex the nation, that if given an open field and a fair chance the school book, the Bible and the ballot will do for him what they have done for other people. All this African Methodism is striving to bring about.

MANAGER'S NOTICE.

We are just receiving from the binder a fresh lot of Hymn Books in cloth, sheep, roan and gilt, and, as business is dull just at this season, and we have some stiff bills to meet in February and March, we have resolved to offer churches, choirs and presiding elders this new lot of six hundred copies at a great reduction from regular rates for the next sixty days. One dozen cloth bound for $7.20; one dozen sheep bound for $8.40; one dozen roan (black), for $9.60; six extra roan gilt for $7.00, and a corresponding reduction on morocco of any class. Now, please send on your orders at once. Do not wait until they are all gone, and yet complain that we cease selling at the same rate. Remember, there are only 600 copies at this rate, and the first that come will be the first served.

Remember, also, that we sell the People's Hymn Book, a small, cheap, excellent work, collected by Mr. S. B. Scheiffelin. It contains tunes of standard excellence on the opposite page. Only 20 and 25 cents per copy. But we must tell you that the best selling song book we have had for two years or more is the little gem called "Sought Out Songs," by Rev. A. B. Earle, of Boston. The book contains the famous "Lily of the Valley," and other lively tunes and hymns that stir the multitudes into a glow. Send in your orders. Only 30 cents per copy; 5 cents extra by mail.

Finally, we call attention to this paper. We have been late "to press" the past two weeks, and we come a little late still, this week, but with all this we submit that we are handsomer and handier than ever we have been. We are clipped and pasted, we are lighter weight and finer paper than ever before. One drawback only is worthy of note. Having changed our printer, our new pressman has not, for want of skill or time, been able to give us a clear page as we have been accustomed to show our readers hitherto. In appreciation of all we have tried to do for the convenience and pleasure of our patrons, will not our patrons help us a little by securing for the paper at least one cash subscriber for '88?

We earnestly request every subscriber and friend of the RECORDER to show the paper to a friend and ask him or her to try it for six months or one year. By so doing you will help us, and at the same time promote the advancement of a good cause.

OUR CHURCH AT WORK.

BY AN EARNEST WORKER FOR CHRIST.

DEAR EDITOR:—We, the members of the White Street A. M. E. Church, of Pittsburgh, Pa., are well pleased in stating that our worthy pastor, Rev. D. S. Bentley, is doing a most wonderful work in and throughout Pittsburgh. Through the Almighty Power from Heaven, he is spreading the Gospel far and near; and we all bless the Lord for the wonderful effect his sermons and his daily walks and conversations have had upon the people of our city. We have received the intelligence from the old veteran of the cross that the spirit of God in our church has not been attended with such a power from Heaven for 21 years. Everybody is awake. Christians that have been resting on flowery beds of ease have been awakened at last, and all the people of God are coming together and seem to be enjoying the precious fruit from the tree of life.

The work is increasing day by day, hour by hour, and scores of the children of God's people are certainly working faithfully for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of Christ, and are praying to see the devil's kingdom and his army weakened and torn down by the power of the Holy Father. We all appreciate our most worthy pastor very highly, and bless God's eternal name for putting it into the heart of our beloved Bishop Campbell to send us such an evangelist, such an exemplary Christian as Rev. D. S. Bentley. We cannot speak too well of him, and want everybody to know who our pastor is and what he is doing through the divine power of God. We have one of our meetings close there will not be one sinner left to advocate the cause of sin. O! Christians everywhere, help us to pray that God may continue to pour out his blessings upon our pastor and us, his sheep, who are on the Lord's side.

We have had, beginning with New Year's morn, up to the present, 52 conversions, and if we are not mistaken, have at this time 25 or 30 anxious souls at the altar seeking Christ Jesus, the Son of the living God. Praise God unto whom these blessings flow. The spirit that exists in our church at the present time is so powerful that sinners tremble in the congregation of the righteous, and are being slain with the power of conviction from Heaven all over Pittsburgh; not only among the Methodists but from all denominations they are coming. We desire to see the world saved. Anybody and everybody is welcome to our church. Many prayers are being answered in our meetings for the salvation of souls. Brothers and sisters, we all feel like pressing on and upward to that beautiful City of God.

Our meetings are so crowded at times it is almost impossible to secure a comfortable seat. We found our lecture room was too small. At this time we are holding meetings at night in the main audience room, and we are laboring very earnestly for Christ. In our meetings we have the best of order, and in all we are enjoying the blessings from Heaven as the Father showers them down upon us. God is certainly blessing the work in our pastor's hands. O! Christians, if you read this, be up and doing. Speak to some poor trembling sinner. Offer them your Saviour now. Entreat them to come along with you and enjoy the precious blessings, for a day in His service is better than a thousand earthly treasures. Tell the sinner to come to-day, while Jesus whispers to them, come. Do help some one to Christ. O! if I could, I would gather the world together and run with them to Jesus. O! Christians, this is a wonderful work to be engaged in. Just think of all we will enjoy when we reach our Father's dwelling.

We, as a people, have been able through faith in Jesus, our Saviour, to say, "Get behind me, Satan!" and we want to keep him there forever. O! what a precious ingathering of souls here at this time. Never was there such a time in the history of our lives as young soldiers.

Satan's army trembles. His number is growing less every day, and they are enlisting in the army of the Lord. O! that I could send the news all over the earth; the good news from Pittsburgh. God's army certainly is in earnest about the salvation of souls. Even the children are laboring for Christ. They are being used as instruments in God's hands in bringing their parents to the church. One interesting fact we desire to mention is that a little girl came to our meetings regularly, became deeply convicted, went forward to the altar, sought the Lord and found him precious to her soul. Her conversion was the means of stirring up her mother's heart, and made such an impression upon that mother's mind that she could not rest until she sought the Saviour, and the result was she found in him a precious Saviour. She came to the church and went around shaking hands. With one hand she led the child that had been an instrument in the Father's hands in bringing her to enjoy the love of Jesus; with the other hand she used in shaking hands with the people of God. Now at this time the father of the child is seeking our wonderful Redeemer. O! such a time, such a time! We will never forget it as long as life lasts.

O come to this valley of blessings so sweet,
Where Jesus will bless you and make you complete;
And believe and receive and confess Him,
That all His salvation may know.

May God add His blessings on us all.

BENEFICENCE OF THE GOSPEL.

BY REV. J. A BROADNAX.

The Gospel has been one of the great conservative forces which has contributed to mould and fashion the governments of the earth, making men better and more patriotic citizens. Many have knelt at its sacred shrine and there learned its cardinal lessons of temperance and virtue and gone forth into the various walks of life to disseminate, teach and practice them.

The principles of the Gospel tend to develop pure and noble men—men free from bigotry; men who have broad and liberal views; men who see in their fellowmen children of a common Father; men who have hearts of sympathy for the erring, and who are ever ready to extend a helping hand to the fallen.

The Gospel is to build up in every man a pure and moral edifice, whose foundations crumble not, and which grows into that pure spiritual temple which stands as a beacon light to point the path that leads to immortality. It teaches that a well ordered life is the best inheritance; more valued than great riches without nobility of soul.

"STRICTUE."

BY REV. T. R. GEDA.

"THE RULES OF YOUR CHURCH ARE TOO STRICT."

BROTHER EDITOR:—We have heard the above words uttered so often in the East (from whence cometh light) that we thought we would write a few lines upon them as a result of our many observations. Persons very often say to us, "We would join your church," meaning the Methodist Church, "but your rules are too strict." We ask in what way, for an explanation, and the answers are often these: "Your church is too strict on the young people." "You will not permit dancing, which is no harm." "You do not permit theatre going." "You keep them from the opera house; nor will your church permit those innocent games of which the young are so fond." Say some, "Permit these and many other amusements and your church will have more young people in it." Others say, in variably this, that no consistent Christian will want such amusements as here mentioned. There is a conversion from and not into them. In some parts of the East (I am sorry to say) there are those who are looking for a church society with as little strictness as possible; a do as you have a mind to, and no one to call you to account.

We now relate a few facts: Talking with a gentleman of 60, last summer about his soul's welfare, he said, "If I were converted I would not join your church." "Why?" I asked. His reply was, "You Methodists are too strict." In December the person was taken very sick. He sent for the writer to have prayer with him. In a week after he was converted, and requested that his name be kept on the class book of our church; was baptized, given the communion, and was dismissed from the too strict Methodist Church.

A young lady was asked to take a part in the Sunday school concert in a Methodist Church. She refused because she heard that that church does not permit dancing. She said, "I love dancing, and therefore cannot help a church that would take away my pleasure." She is now very ill, and promises, if she recovers, to live a different life. She also sent for a minister from this too strict church to pray for her.

A father in the East thought it no harm for his only son to play an innocent game; so the father taught his son to play cards. The son loved it, and turned to be a gambler; was shot, and when dying sent for a minister of the too strict church, and said, "My father taught me how to play; tell the young men to stop gambling, for it was my ruin."

A middle aged lady slipped and fell one evening while coming out of the theatre, and is crippled for life. She, too, sent for a minister of this too strict church, and said to him, "I left your church because I thought the rules were too strict. Had I stayed and obeyed them, my condition would be different to-day. Tell the people or members to keep the church rules strictly. It is the best for them after all."

LETTER FROM DEMERARA, B. G.

BY REV. S. MARTIN.

MR. EDITOR:—The day school of the African Methodist Episcopal Church held its first anniversary at Anna Catharina, West Coast, Demerara, British Guiana, on Monday and Tuesday, 2nd and 3rd inst. The examination was conducted on Monday by the pastor, conjointly with the teacher, and in the evening the recitations and dialogues took place. On both occasions the children gave ample satisfaction, which reflects not a little credit on Mr. J. B. Brice, who is painstaking, persevering and energetic. On Tuesday, at noon, the children re-assembled in the examination hall, after which there was a procession from the above mentioned village to Blankenburg, with banners, preceded by a band of music. We gratefully acknowledge the receipt of prizes from his worship, G. A. Forshaw, Esq., Mayor of the city of Georgetown, and W. Stuart Cameron, Esq., attorney at law, which were awarded to those who also obtained the maximum number of marks on the day of examination in Reading, Dictation, Scripture, History, Arithmetic, English Grammar and Mental Arithmetic. Prizes were also awarded to some of the children for regular attendance and good conduct. The prizes, which were to have been distributed by Mr. Cameron, were, in consequence of his absence, distributed by the pastor, after the procession on Tuesday. These cheers having been given for his excellency, the Lieutenant Governor, Charles Brice, C. M. G.; G. A. Forshaw and W. S. Cameron, Esquires, the proceedings then terminated by singing the national anthem, and the parents, children and friends retired to meet again in the evening at a soiree which was held, the proceeds of which are for the benefit of the school. The number of children on register at quarter ending December 31, 1887, was: Boys, 55; girls, 45. Total, 100. Daily average attendance during said quarter: Boys, 51; girls, 40 Total, 91. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Mary De Souza, 1st prize, Reading; Annie Walters, 1st prize, Dictation; Alexander Solomon, 2nd prize, Dictation; Augustus Seliman, 1st prize, Scripture History; David Beeton, 1st prize, Arithmetic; Rosaline Phillips, 2nd prize, Arithmetic; Isabella Harvey, 3rd prize, Arithmetic; Joseph Green, 1st prize, English Grammar; Rampani, (Coo e), 2nd prize, English Grammar; Robert Rudon, 1st prize, Mental Arithmetic.

On Wednesday, the 4th inst., the children again assembled to partake of refreshments which were provided for them, and were then dismissed to enjoy a well merited holiday.

I may here take this opportunity of adding that British Guiana offers a fair field for the proper planting and establishment of African Methodism; that the church, if properly organized and worked, will here be second to none in numerical strength, moral and intellectual influence, in the not very distant future. I am under the impression that if the very best talent, zeal and piety must be appointed as its agents to carry on the work, for the West Indies are enlightened, both morally and intellectually; that the present financially embarrassed state of the church here militates not a little against its progress, and necessitates timely assistance from the parent society, and that if these (men and means) be withheld, all the labors of past years must come to naught; for the cause of African Methodism cannot be much longer sustained here without substantial help.

I now conclude, dear Dr., with re-echoing the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us."

REV. N. B. STEWART'S INTERESTING LETTER.

MR. EDITOR:—My last missive was forwarded from New York. Since that we have been visiting various parts of the Southern States, of which I send you a synopsis. I preached at Allen Temple for Rev. Jackson; also assisted that noble and true hearted brother, Rev. Flipper, at Bethel Church, in Wheat street, Atlanta, Ga. I had been privileged to preach, pray, sing, teach and write, until the love of Jesus Christ find its way into the hearts of all men, women, girls and boys. And talk and teach people and members to do their duty towards supporting those schools that are already built. Build more; sustain the Episcopal Review, Southern Recorder and Sunday School Union, all to uphold our church in this land. When, oh, when shall we see those places, and hear the cries of those that want our Church, and help those preachers who are on missions in this land? Will you do something for those men who are willing to deny themselves for the Church, and go into dark and unknown places and hold up the banner of the A. M. E. Church, and teach the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man in this land? When, oh, when shall we, the A. M. E. Church, take up those poor children of our members who are sleeping in the grave, and their children dying for knowledge, and in jails, and on farms, working out fines? Oh, they are all around us! Shall we stand still and let them die? Oh, church of ours, awake! Awake to save our people! God speed sister A. J. Miller with her school at Natchez, Miss., which she started to save the children of her church. Amen, amen, to Rev. Gezaway's letter. Get a dollar from every member. Extend our church in unknown places. Send me something to build a church at Forest, Miss.

Obituary.

Death has entered the household of Ex-Representative J. S. Hinton, your old correspondent from this city, and removed therefrom and from our midst Mrs. Sophia Hinton, wife of Mr. Hinton. The deceased was a devout Christian and ever active in the upbuilding of the various religious benevolences of the church of which she was a member for a number of years. In social circles she was always useful and entertaining, making all happy with whom she came in contact. The funeral obsequies were conducted at the A. M. E. Church, on West Vermont street. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Williams, preached an effective discourse from the 31st chapter of Dantsronomy and the 14th verse. The services were attended by a large crowd of sympathizing friends.

Indianapolis, Indiana. JAMES T. HILL.

REV. E. C. JOINER.

Rev. Edwin C. Joiner was born near the city of Belleville, St. Clair county, Illinois, on the 25th day of April, 1841, and died in the city of Springfield, Illinois, on Friday morning, January 20th, 1888, aged 46 years 9 months and two days. He leaves a heart-broken widow, a son, Willie, a daughter, Lenora, two brothers, a neice, and a great host of relatives and friends to mourn his loss. While these that are left are mourning, just over the dark river, in the land of joy, he is with Ida and Harry, who left Springfield a little while ago for the sweet rest in Heaven; and his mother and two sisters, ont of Bloomington; a father, ont of Belleville, and other relatives and friends, singing and praising God. In early youth E. C. Joiner was happily converted to God, in the city of Chester, Randolph county, this State, on the banks of the great Mississippi River, in an old building that was formerly used for holding services. Soon after that he removed with his mother, sisters and Catherine and his younger brother, Peter, to Bloomington, where it was soon developed that the Spirit of the Lord was upon him to preach the Gospel; and in the month of February, 1858, in the city of Peoria, Illinois, under the pastorate of our venerable father, Rev. A. T. Hall, he was licensed to preach; and then began the useful life of this good man. It was not long after he was licensed that he entered the effective ranks of the Indiana Conference, in which he remained until 1872, when the Illinois Conference was formed, and he became identified with it, in which conference he remained until the day of his death, with the exception of one year, which he spent in Des Moines, Iowa. He was married to his now bereaved wife in the city of Muscatine, Iowa, in July, 1862. To them were born seven children, all of whom are gone but Lenora and Willie. They are left to comfort mother in her lonely and trying hours.

Elder Joiner has served as pastor of the following charges, and the most of them with great success:

Bellville, Alton, Quincy, Metropolis, Muscatine, Peoria, Bloomington, Springfield, Jacksonville, Galesburg, Lincoln, Quinn Chapel, Chicago, Richmond, Indiana, Bine River, Cairo, Brooklin, and Decatur, where he finally closed his ministerial labors.

He was a wonderful man indeed; eccentric in the extreme; a powerful preacher, a strong debater, and a grand committee man. A good, kind husband, an indulgent father, and a true and tried friend of those he loved. He and I have been the nearest friends for over thirty years of his troubles and trials in the ministry. I was always apprised when he was sorely pressed; and, though we were separated by miles, once every year he was in my house and I in his. Two years ago last August he went to Cairo and I to St. Paul, and we met no more until the 23th of last month, when I left my home and came to this city, where I found him on his afflicted bed. While in conversation with him, he said, "Well, Charley, I am glad to see you, for we have been true friends for many years, and now I am here on a sick and possibly a dying bed I feel that everything is all right and secure with me, and I am simply awaiting God's time. Oh," said he, "I am resigned to God's will."

In 1870 he, with Elders Dupugh, Jackson and myself, were elected as delegates to the General Conference that met in St. Louis, and he filled some of the most important positions in that grand body. In the several annual conferences of which he has been an honored member, you will find the name of E. C. Joiner on the most important committees, and wherever he has visited the conference he has always been honored with an appointment to preach, which he always did to the entire satisfaction of the people who heard him.

In conclusion we simply say he died as he lived—a consistent and earnest Christian. The Illinois Conference has lost a strong man, the connection an able defender, the wife a good husband, the children an indulgent father, his friends a grand companion and the world a shining light. He sleeps to-day, but will awake in the gathering morning, and we will see him again. The church will meet their pastor and the ministers their earnest co-laborer. S'e p on, Brother Joiner; we will hail you by and by. A few more storms shall beat on the wild, rocky shore; a few more tears, a few more fears; a few more sighs and groans, and we shall weep no more.

In the years gone by E. C. Joiner was the pride and joy of many of the men of God that have preceded him to the Heavenly Canaan. Such men as D. Winslow, A. McIntosh, Hamer, Roberts, J. M. Derrick, R. Bridges, Bishop Quinn, Bishop Shorter, W. S. Lankford, and others. Last Friday morning as the golden gates were opened to admit the holy spirit of this battle scarred and blood-washed warrior, these brethren possibly raised their notes of praise higher and shouted a welcome to E. C. Joiner. Oh, what a hailing! Many of his older brethren are still here lifting up their humble voices and saying, "We are coming by and by." Among them are Revs. Cooper, Myers, Malone, Davis, Brown, Trevan, Dawson, Depugh, Jackson, Dove, Turner, my humble self, and a host of younger men in the itinerant ranks.

The church at Decatur is left without a shepherd, and in her sadness she is mourning with those that mourn, and weeping with those that weep. But it is not we as those having no hope, for Elder Joiner is not dead; he only rests; he was tired, so weary; he had fought so many battles; had gained so many grand victories. He is only at rest.

Servant of God, well done;
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.

C. S. JACOBS.

"ANOTHER VOTE."

BY REV. J. M. HENDERSON.

The article in late RECORDER which attempts, by a liberal application of Greenleaf, Judge Harris and Latin, to drag out from its forgotten grave issues long since adjusted, between Rev A. J. Burton and myself, deserves and shall have no reply.

Rev. Burton was inflamed by the efforts of the writer of that same article and wrote to me, whereupon he was let into the light and I have a letter from him professing complete satisfaction and good feeling. His regards the mention of himself in my antiquated article as complimentary, and like a Christian gentleman is resting easy. Nor will I permit any mischievous scribbler to inveigle me into a controversy through the columns of a paper having the dignity and sacred character of the RECORDER.

If parties most concerned understand each other, outsiders had better not meddle. I shall try, when I write to the RECORDER or any of the other papers, white or colored, which recognize me as a correspondent, never to provoke mischief by things said. The same spirit should animate others.

St. Paul, Minn.

The one who will be found in trial capable of great acts of love is ever the one who is always doing considerate small ones.—F. W. Robertson.

Dr. Arnold, of Rugby, wrote this prayer for his own use before he went into the school every day: "O Lord, I have a busy world around me: eye, ear and thought will be needed for all my work to be done in that busy world. Now, ere I enter upon it, I would commit eye, ear and thought to thee. Do thou bless them, and keep their work thine; that as, through thy natural laws, my heart beats and my blood flows without any thought of mine for them, so my spiritual life may hold on its course at these times, when my mind cannot consciously turn to thee to commit each particular thought to thy service."

Christ comes with a blessing in each hand, forgiveness in one and holiness in the other, and never gives either to any who will not take both.

Worry is the child of unbelief; it is the child of distrust. No one can trust God fully and worry at the same time. —Anon.

When we meet with little vexations incidents of life by which our quiet is too often disturbed, it will prevent many painful sensations if we only consider how insignificant this will appear twelve months hence.

Out of hearts ploughed by contrition spring flowers fairer than ever grew on the hard ground of unbroken self-content. There bloom in them sympathy and charity for other erring mortals; and patience under suffering which is acknowledged to be meekest; and lastly, sweetest blossom of all, tender Gratitude for earthly and heavenly blessings felt to be free gifts of divine love.

MIGHT AS WELL DIE ON THAT AS ANYTHING ELSE.

When one has suffered on, month after month, committed all the best "Medicine Men" within reach, tried all the remedies suggested by sympathizing friends, still suffers on, becoming weaker and more wretched, it is little wonder that such an one becomes despondent, and cries out, "I might as well die on one thing as another, and therefore will try anything, even the Compound Oxygen."

Mr. Alonzo Clark, chief salesman in the large business house of Davis, Collamore & Co., of New York, was so greatly reduced by long continued lung trouble, proceeding from malaria, that the doctors gave him up. They said, "If you have any affairs to arrange, you had better arrange them soon, for you cannot live long." He had all the symptoms of advanced consumption. By this time he thought the doctors had done all they could do for him, which they verily had, at the rate of ten dollars a visit. Somebody dropped a hint in his sar about Compound Oxygen, and he thought he might as well die on that as anything else. But on taking it a little while, he found he was not going to die. To make a long story short, Mr. Clark is again at his post in the store on Broadway, and after doing to business with his old-time regularity. He is, as might be expected from his experience, a very firm believer of Compound Oxygen.

This Compound Oxygen has a history embodied in a very interesting two hundred page treatise, which is sent by mail on application to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Church News.

Rev. R. J. Bailey, Devereaux, Ga., writes: I was appointed to Warren Chapel Church, Ga., in 1885. I found two churches. By trusting God we have been able to buy and pay for a splendid church, with two acres of good land, for all of which we have deeds made to the A. M. E. connection. We found the people in general very immoral; but, thank God, we have been able to bring many to Christ. We have added two hundred members to the circuit, making a membership of 355. I have been able, through trust in God, to pay the debts of five churches, amounting to $290.

Rev. J. W. Williams, Forest, Miss., writes: I want to say something about home mission to the many readers of our Church paper. Our mission in life is to hit sin whenever and wherever we see it. Get ein out of our churches, Sunday schools, families, cities, towns and countries, and preach, pray, sing, teach and write, until the love of Jesus Christ find its way into the hearts of all men, women, girls and boys. And talk and teach people and members to do their duty towards supporting those schools that are already built. Build more; sustain the RECORDER, Review, Southern Recorder and Sunday School Union, all to uphold our church in this land. When, oh, when shall we see those places, and hear the cries of those that want our Church, and help those preachers who are on missions in this land? Will you do something for those men who are willing to deny themselves for the Church, and go into dark and unknown places and hold up the banner of the A. M. E. Church, and teach the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man in this land? When, oh, when shall we, the A. M. E. Church, take up those poor children of our members who are sleeping in the grave, and their children dying for knowledge, and in jails, and on farms, working out fines? Oh, they are all around us! Shall we stand still and let them die? Oh, church of ours, awake! Awake to save our people! God speed sister A. J. Miller with her school at Natchez, Miss., which she started to save the children of her church. Amen, amen, to Rev. Gezaway's letter. Get a dollar from every member. Extend our church in unknown places. Send me something to build a church at Forest, Miss.

Rev. Burton was inflamed by the efforts of the writer of that same article and wrote to me, whereupon he was let into the light and I have a letter from him professing complete satisfaction and good feeling. His regards the mention of himself in my antiquated article as complimentary, and like a Christian gentleman is resting easy. Nor will I permit any mischievous scribbler to inveigle me into a controversy through the columns of a paper having the dignity and sacred character of the RECORDER.

If parties most concerned understand each other, outsiders had better not meddle. I shall try, when I write to the RECORDER or any of the other papers, white or colored, which recognize me as a correspondent, never to provoke mischief by things said. The same spirit should animate others.

BETHEL CHURCH, Wilmington, Del., Rev. G. W. Brodie, pastor, has just closed the indebtedness on a sister church in Delaware City, Del. Bethel Church assumed the responsibility of the Delaware City church from the first.

THE BITTER, pinching temperature of the past ten or twelve days will not be soon forgotten hy many poor people in this portion of our country. Thanks to a kind Providence we have now a change for the better. A finer day than yesterday (Wednesday) is seldom seen in this latitude in mid-winter.

THE TRUSTEE BOARD of Wilberforce University, at their session last June, appointed a committee to arrange for the celebration of the quarto-centennial of Wilberforce University under the auspicies of the A. M. E. Church. The committee consists of Drs. B. F. Lee, and T. H. Jackson; President S. T Mitchell, C. L. Maxwell, Esq., and Rev G. H. Graham. It held sessions January 31st and February 1st. Elder Graham being absent, Dr. B. W. Arnett was added to the committee. The session took place in the parlor of President Mitchell, who, with Mrs. Mitchell, entertained the committee nicely at tea.

To many it will not seem that Wilberforce has existed as the property of the A. M. E. Church twenty-five years. They have been years of mingled sunshine and shadow; many times it has seemed that it could not possibly open a succeeding year, but twenty five consecutive autumns its bell has called the earnest students together from all quarters of the land, and for twenty-five consecutive summers has sent them out again. Thirty-three teachers have graduated seventeen classes, ninety-five students. With the close of this, the twenty-fifth year, they will graduate one hundred. Altogether from ten hundred to thirteen hundred studied there, more or less. Hundreds have been converted to Christ and prepared to properly perform their duty. It is well to take a few minutes to pass upon our great work occasionally.

The committee has arranged to hold the twenty-fifth anniversary June 21st and 22d. There will be prominent gentlemen and ladies invited to serve on the programme. The committee propose to address all those who have been students of the University in both the present and former régimes, expecting to receive financial and literary aid from them. The addresses on the days of celebration, together with papers from many students, will be collected and bound in a volume, whose sale shall help to swell the funds. The committee has arranged to organize an association for the study of science and history. The design is to make this association general; not limited to students of the University.

WE ARE seldom called upon to chronicle a more grieful case than we do in publishing the death of Sister Katie Beckett, the wife of Rev. J. W. Beckett, B. D., pastor of Bethel Church, this city, and daughter of Bishop Campbell. Until a more complete obituary shall have been written, we content ourself with giving the simple story of her demise, which occurred on Thursday morning, February 2d, at 1 o'clock. Sister Beckett had been ill for ten days or more, but no serious result was apprehended until the last three or four days before her death.

She leaves behind her husband and several small children to mourn their sad bereavement. The event has cast a gloom of sorrow over the congregation of Bethel, and over the whole community related to Mrs. Beckett by the ties of friendship and society. No place of worship in this city will hold the multitude that will be present to offer a token of love when her funeral takes place.

But, alas! our sad story is only half told, for while we are still hushed in sad surprise as we ponder our loss in the demise of Sister Beckett, we are compelled to relate the death of Mr. Charles E. Dillon, son-in-law of Dr. B. T. Tanner. A little less than two years ago we were all at the wedding of this most interesting and happy pair. The whole official and clerical force of the Book Concern were there, and never did we see Miss Hallie E. brighter or prettier than she appeared at the time, while her young and beautiful husband seemed her equal and fitting companion. But the order of stern, inscrutable Providence breaks up the union there formed, leaving the loving young bride and mother under a cloud of sorrow and loneliness while yet in the honeymoon of their marital experience. We all share her sorrow; we all taste her grief. And what can we say by way of solace in such an hour as this? Why, nothing at all. But we may say this at least: Herein appears a silver lining in the cloud above us. This sad display of what seems almost fate opens afresh in our hearts the fountain of sympathy and love. We realize afresh our helplessness and our sole dependence upon God. Heaven ever comes nearest to the smitten soul. The horses and chariot of fire are seen only out of the furnace of affliction.

IN THIS material age there is great danger that the Church, following in the footsteps of the State, is falling into the ruinous error of estimating all worth by the standard of finance and statistics. Against the interrogative phrases of how many, and how much? we oppose the far more important query, how good, how just, how true? While struggling to increase our numbers and influence, to systematize and enlarge our financial interests, were it not well to remember that though we may gain in numbers and in gold, if we shall have lost the essentials of righteousness, faith or purity, our gain is after all worse than failure. The king of Israel sinned once in numbering the people. Not because there is sin in taking the census, but in trusting to numbers rather than to God. In like manner we can see no fault in the Church making plans to collect the money she needs—honestly needs—to do the work before her. She may ask for the money, ask earnestly, even upon her knees in prayer, but she will be guilty of a grievous sin if she allow herself to rely more upon this agency than upon that of the Holy Spirit. "It is not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord."

O, let us not forget that it is the life of the Church, her spiritual and moral life, and not her numbers nor financial ability, that is alone salutary; not even her educational institutions, her organized departments, nor all her equipments, however splendid, are worth a fig of moral value though all be held in the name of God, except as she may be able to exert through these agencies a power to turn men from sin to holiness and from Satan to God. She must sustain a sturdy flame of moral light in all the high and low places of her being—a stern and rugged consistency between her doctrines and her life, no supersanctity; no phariseism, but a firm and heroic adherence to doctrinal truth and practical righteousness.

So we submit that the higher question for the time is not how many, nor how much, but what kind of men compose our ranks from bottom to top? Are we palming off a sickly declamation against beer and tobacco, while our pride or selfishness and greed are running riot before the eyes of the world? Isn't there too much shouting about our thousands of dollars, and hundreds of thousands of members, while men are dying through lack of faith and spiritual bread within our very doors? All who are in the Church are not of the Church; all who are without the Church are not against the Church; disloyalty to the Church has its root always in disloyalty to Christ. We plead for the old ironclad Christianity that shall feel itself always and everywhere called upon to stand for righteousness without regard to the praise or opposition of men, and that will grant no premium to malconduct, though it come ladened with talents of silver or graced with the emblems of a gladiator's victory.

OUR FINANCES AND GENERAL CHURCH WORK.

Many wise and good suggestions have been made by different brethren as to our Church work and finances. A very strong paper from Brother Shaffer in the last Review, is matched in clearness of thought and ideas by the Gazaway series now passing through these columns. Besides these somewhat elaborate discussions, many notable ideas in brief are presented by others. Still, of all, so far as they have passed under our notice, it may be said that nothing really new has been brought out. Everything of force suggested in Rev. Shaffer's admirable paper was logically seen and brought out in discussion by the men who constructed the Dollar system in 1872. On the other hand, the failure to accomplish all that was expected and claimed by the advocates of the law, was apprehended, or, rather, feared, and vehemently urged by those who opposed the system. There was good sense and strong reasons on both sides, but the stronger prevailed First, it was better than any preceding system. It has accomplished incomparably more than any plan before thought of, and yet not so much by far as the projectors supposed. Second, the system in itself is founded in reason, and from the standpoint from which it sets out, one can scarcely imagine how it could be improved.

To collect "one dollar" from or for each member, seems so simple, so direct, so easy. To attempt to show how and why our calculation has always fallen short, would require an essay. Enough it is to say that we have fallen short and will for some years future, and for the good reason that a people and their business must ever grow together. However simple and plain your laws may be, it will still be the most difficult thing to induce a weak people to become strong, or an unenlightened people to become enlightened. They want the strength and the light, but how to get them is the question. Slowly, by degrees, and "all round," the walls of a house must be built.

Seasodly, our work. While we have five departments of work and seven officers in charge of them, our work, in common with all Christian churches, may be comprehended under three heads, namely, Publishing, Evangelization or Missionary work, and Education or the founding and maintenance of Christian schools. The Review and the Sunday School work are both branches of our publishing work. The Finance Department, so-called, is not really such, but a subsidiary agency. Our business is not to make money, but to evangelize and enlighten so much of the world as God may enable us to reach. It would be well, as it seems to us, to bear these matters in mind when we are writing for the instruction of the Church at large.

Literature.

The Woman's World improves with every number, and that for February is particularly interesting. The frontispiece is a portrait of the Princess of Wales in her Academic robes as a Doctor of Music. Lady Wilde, the mother of the editor, opens the reading pages with a poem on "Historic Women." This is followed by a prose description of a historic house, Kirby Hall, the home of Sir Christopher Hattou, by Lady Constance Howard. "Medicine as a Profession for Women" is the subject of a paper by Mary A. Marshall, M.D. Last month we had a paper by Mrs. Craik; this month we have a paper on her giving a portrait and pictures of the interior and exterior of her home, "The Corner House." Shortlands, the Greek Plays at the Universities are described by a Girton girl. Following this is a paper on Alexander College, Dublin, which was founded by Mrs Jellicoe, who was its first president. The literary and other notes by the editor, Mr. Oscar Wilde, are more literary than otherwise, but they are all conspicuous for that easy style and cleverness for which Mr. Wilde is famous. The discussion of the month's fashions is left to the end of the magazine. There are London fashions and Paris fashions and pictures of Sara Bernhardt's costumes in her new play. The Woman's World realizes its mission and is prepared to fulfill it. Cassell & Co., 35 cents a number, $3.50 a year in advance.

The Pearl of Days, for February, confirms the opinions already so generally expressed in relation to this excellent magazine, that it is the foremost of its kind in the world. It is especially engaging in the defense, maintenance and observance of the Christian Sabbath, and likewise furnishes choice reading for the home. The number at hand is decidedly beautiful and will attract special attention and receive emphatic praise. The richness of its table of contents, consisting of a variety of matter by distinguished writers, gives the present issue superior value. The fine illustrations which adorn its bright pages, with the good paper and press work, indicate the great care taken to insure its welcome in every Christian home. Chief among the illustrations especially designed for it, is one by the famous artist, Mary A. Lathbury, entitled "The Inner Sanctuary," and inscribed to the members of the "Shut-In Society." We wonder if anything from the pencil of the artist has been equal to this production. An original poem by the designer accompanies it. Among the contributors we note the names of Hon E. L. Fancher, LL D, Rev. Lewis W. Mudge, D.D., Rev. H. C. McCook, Rev. F. D. Ayer, D.D, Rev. A. E. P. Albert, D.D., Rev. Geo. S. Mott, D.D., and others. This pure and healthful magazine, which makes the Christian Sabbath its chief theme, is worthy of hearty support, strong endorsement and wide circulation. It deserves and will most assuredly win unprecedented success. We advise our readers to subscribe for it, and thus fortify more strongly the defenses to protect the Christian Sabbath. One dollar a year. Single copy 10 cents. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 71 Bible House, New York.

WHAT IS THEOLOGY?

ITS RELATION TO THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION CONSIDERED.

BY REV. J. W. MALONE.

Says Dr. Lee, in his comment in RECORDER of January 5th: "Men have gotten false notions of theology," &c Theology comes from the Greek word theologia. Theos, God, and logos, a discourse. The study of religion proper. Says Mr. Webster, "Theology is a science that treats of the existence, character and attributes of God, his laws and government, the doctrine that we are to believe and the duties we are to practice." Says Rev. Charles Buck: "Theology signifies that science which treats of the being and attributes of God, his relation to us, the dispensation of his providence, his will with respect to our actions and his purpose with respect to our end." In general, therefore, theology is the knowledge of God carried to the highest degree of perfection in respect to correctness, clearness and evidence of which it is susceptible in this world. The knowledge of God as to his nature, attributes, providence and grace; of his relation to men and his disposition to men, and that which his will. Hence our affections and conduct correspond with this knowledge, or the application of this knowledge. Says Jesus: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Therefore practical theology consists of an exhibition of precept and directions, and of the motives for complying with them in all relations of life by doing the will of God Father which is in Heaven. A distinction, however, must be made between natural religion and revealed religion, between natural theology and revealed theology, also between theology and religion, because the terms theology and religion are contrasted thus: religion is practical and experimental, theology scientific—Biblical science. The human will is employed about the former, practically, and the human understanding is especially about the latter, which is called the theoretic part of religion. The science of religion, then, is that science which comprises everything relative to the knowledge and revelation of God. Theology, therefore, is that science which systematically comprehends all that is known to man concerning God and our relation to him as taught in the Scriptures of divine truth and correctness of this knowledge of God, how all important it is regard to our conduct. The human mind is compelled to conceive of God as the great ideal of moral perfection, and consequently to make him the pattern for imitation. Hence, false notions respecting his nature, attributes and commands are in the highest degree injurious to morality and holiness.

Theology only gives us a faint idea of what God is, as seeing through a glass darkly, so to speak. The knowledge of God, however, his moral government over the world and his will, can be obtained in two ways: first, by means of nature; second, by means of an immediate or direct revelation. In reference to this two-fold source of knowledge, religion has been divided into natural and revealed, hence a natural and revealed theology. Let us, then, notice the two ways by which the knowledge of God can be obtained. 1 By nature. Says the Psalmist, "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night sheweth knowledge"—the knowledge of God. This is a source of knowledge which even the heathens possessed. Said Paul, "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." So that they are without excuse. Therefore every man capable of reflection finds one source of the knowledge of God in surrounding nature, which, when he reads upon it, invites and conducts him to a knowledge of the Author. For "nevertheless he left not himself without witness, in that he did good and gave us rain from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness." Seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands." Yet even the natural knowledge of God of this purer kind leaves men in perplexing doubt on many very important points as soon as they rightly begin to feel their wants and see their needs. Hence, secondly, the direct revelation from God was a necessity to assist men in having a clearer and better knowledge of God. We see, therefore, that God has manifested himself in nature, in history and in revelation. God, who, in time past and in divers ways, spoke to men in nature, in history and in revelation, hath in these latter days spoken more direct unto us by his Son. God manifested in the flesh, the immortal Deity clothed with the nature of mortal man, the incarnate God-man. And, by the way, there is another source of the knowledge of God in man's own conscience, which distinctly acquaints him with a supreme and invisible Judge of his thoughts and actions. Says Paul, "For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law. And as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law. In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel."

Let us return to the subject. The natural revelation which God makes of himself to man is the constitution of the human soul and in the works of creation and providence would it be unnecessary to add here the knowledge of God proper if man had been continued in his natural moral condition and relation; but since, by reason of sin, man's mind has been darkened, his heart hardened and his relation to God infinitely involved, man never can be able by the mere light of nature to reach both a certain and an adequate knowledge of God. "The world by wisdom knew not God." It is therefore certain, both from the reason of the case and from universal experience, that a supernatural revelation is absolutely necessary. For all history shows that man has deeply felt the necessity for a direct revelation. First, to make certain by additional evidence the conclusion of reason. Second, to complete and render practically adequate the knowledge of God which otherwise has reached. We should, therefore, naturally expect that God would supply these defects in natural religion by means of direct revelation. Natural theology, as reached by unassisted reason, was fragmentary, inconsistent and uncertain. The Apostle Paul in his day, as he traveled among the learned heathens, discovered the truth of the statement. Natural theology, as appropriated and vindicated by reason under the clear light of revelation, is itself a strong witness to the truth and supernatural origin of that revelation. Revealed religion, then, is not opposed, but added to, natural religion. It respects, confirms and illuminates many of the precepts of natural religion and at the same time brings to light much that was before unknown Therefore, since the necessity for a direct revelation is felt so universally, the bestowment of it by the Almighty Jehovah in condescension to our wants cannot appear to the unprejudiced inquirer neither inconsistent or incredible. Yes, it is true, Dr. Lee, some "men have gotten false notions of theology." Yon well and truthfully said that "it is not pure theology that has been defiled, but mind that has become defective." Revealed theology is employed about religion and has the truth of religion for its object. The more accurate and comprehensively systematic our religious knowledge, the more it is a theology; and the more real and practical our theology is, the more it is a religion. Theology is to religion what physical science is to the practical arts. Without science all art would be unintelligent and limited. Theology, therefore, defines religion and sets it upon certain ground. It purifies it from foreign alloy and defends it from hostile attacks. By making it more intelligent it makes it more worthy of God and more effective for the salvation of men. Revealed theology does not seek controversy, but truth. It is impelled by the love of truth, wherever it can find truth. Its great aim is to learn more and more about God and of his providence and grace, Christ being the way, the truth and the life of the soul.

OUR WOMAN'S COLUMN.

BY CATHARINE CASEY.

Sabbath afternoon, the 29th of January, Bishop Campbell presented to Allen Sunday school a choice library of one hundred volumes. The members of the school and their friends who came to the presentation had been invited to contribute at least one book, and sixty-five or seventy more volumes were thus added, while many more are promised. The Bishop made one of his happiest addresses. He spoke of the great power of early impressions upon children's minds, and of the wisdom of putting good reading matter within their reach at an early age. The Bishop said that while he loved all denominations of the Lord's Church, yet naturally he loved his own the best, and he thought that the children should be instructed early in its history and in its principles. He referred to the great care which the Catholics give to the early training of their children in the doctrines of their Church; and he spoke with great earnestness of the evil that is wrought among the young by sensational or corrupt literature which gives wrong ideas of life and its duties, and stains the purity of their minds. He was listened to with marked attention by all present. It appears that the Bishop gave the first library to this Sabbath school and he said that as all those had been "eaten up," he had brought them a second. Bishop; for our Lord said that his word should be our meat and drink. Mr. Edward F. Harris was made librarian of the choice books, and of this excellent young man and untiring worker in the Church and out of it, I shall have more to say hereafter.

The Bishop's good wife, whose intelligent and refined face is an index of her character, sat in the upper part of the room, enjoying the occasion as much as the Bishop. Large-hearted, full of sympathy for the suffering and an earnest laborer wherever she is needed, she is a blessing to her husband and her Church, and an honor to womanhood.

On the above occasion Elder Coppin was rejoicing over his "black boys" and girls. They are not. Mrs. Harper's poems bound in blue and gold and lying upon our library shelves are exquisite poem, describing the life and times of Moses, bears testimony that she has a poetic genius, and she has written many lyrics which eminently deserve to be preserved as a contribution to our literature. Like Whittier, Mrs. Harper always writes upon choice subjects, and her rhythm is always simple and musical. Why is it always necessary when we want to quote a poetess to go all the way back to Phillis Wheatly, when we have such poems as those of Mrs. Harper's shining in our faces from the newspapers and magazines of the present day? Mrs. Harper's prose works also deserve to be put into a permanent form. A hundred years from now aspiring school girls will be searching many dusty newspapers for Mrs Harper's lyrics. Now, in pity to those unborn girls, why can't we have Mrs. Harper's poems published by subscription? I shall be glad to hear from any of the "black girls" whose books are already published, for I will certainly see that they are put upon the shelves of the Sunday school libraries.

Two of the most earnest and devoted temperance workers among us are Miss Theodosia Lyons and Miss Elizabeth Burrell. They have accomplished a great deal by forming Bands of Hope in our churches, and by visiting localities where rum and vice are rampant. They should be ably supported, not only with our sympathy and prayers, but with our money. It would be an excellent thing if they could devote all of their time to the temperance cause. But they cannot live on air alone. They now receive nothing for their services, and even pay their own car-fare when they visit their charges.

Mrs. Elizabeth Balls and her noble band of helpers are making the Sarah Allen Mission a great beneficent institution. Let us see to it that we do not wear out Queen Elizabeth by allowing her to do a lot of drudgery in washing, cooking and so on, that any one else could do as well. She ought to have all the money necessary to keep herself in good physical condition. Everybody should expect to give a lot of flowers when she dies is respectfully invited to walk up and give the money now. A few dollars in Elizabeth's hands now may indefinitely postpone the time for the floral offering.

As a number of the Elders have been naming gentlemen for the Bishopric, it may not be out of the way for us women to be naming some wives for the position of Bishop's wife. It is a little strange, and yet it isn't either, that those that have been named as possible Bishops so far as I know have wives who are as worthy of their possible honors as their husbands. A man is not independent of his wife, gentlemen. He never knows how much he owes her or how great her influence has been in developing a true manliness of character in him. But as a Bishop must be the husband of at least "one wife," wouldn't it be well for any aspirant who is not supplied to be looking about him for an amiable consort? Or shall we begin looking for him? All women engaged in the trades and all who are earnestly holding up the hands of our pastors in their labors, and all workers in the Mite Missionary cause will have honorable mention given to them in this column. A great deal of valuable history of the colored women of this country is being lost because we are too busy or too careless to preserve it. Now, it will be the business of this column to collect, as far as possible, brief biographical sketches of our women whose lives and deeds will be a profitable study for future generations. Therefore report to Catharine from Texas to Maine, from the Golden Gate to the Old Bay State.

Mrs. Sarah Bowers Bell has been one of the chief workers in the Industrial cause in this city and her labors are highly appreciated. She comes of a family remarkable for their public spirit and unselfish generosity. I heartily wish there were more such.

Alas! Alas! two faithful laborers in the A. M. E. Church have passed from earth to their home in the skies—Mrs. Lydia Wears and Mrs. Katie Campbell Beckett, one crowned with the benediction of three score years and the other in the prime of life.

"Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the North wind's breath,
But all—but how! all seasons
For thine own, O Death!"

I shall speak further of these dear ones at another time.

MRS. KATIE S. BECKETT.

A SHORT SKETCH OF HER LIFE AND DEATH.

Mrs. Beckett, or "little Katie Camp bell," addressed by those who have known her from birth, was an estimable woman. From childhood she possessed qualities of amiability, humility and obedience, which caused her to be admired by many. She was the constant companion of her mother, separated only when necessity compelled. They counseled together and shared each others' joys and sorrows. They were more like equals and associates than mother and daughter. Katie was deeply pious. From childhood she was religiously inclined; but not until the meetings held by Moody and Sankey in this city, 1875, did she clearly see the light. On Thursday morning, November 9th, 1876, she was united in wedlock to Rev. J. W. Beckett, going immediately with him to his appointment in Hagerstown, Md. As a wife she was loving, true, kind and affectionate. She lived to please her companion; she was the queen of the house, none was ever placed before her. There and in that home she exhibited that modest, quiet and loving character. She was never heard to utter an impatient word, always in great sympathy with the arduous duties of her husband and gave advice in the right spirit.

As a mother she was kind, loving and indulgent, yet firm and positive. Her children were devoted to her. Notwithstanding the many cares incumbent by the large family and other responsibilities, she was never abusive nor used impatient epithets to her children. She took delight in trying to answer their many and intricate questions. She never was demonstrative nor allowed herself to become excited. She took much time and care, believing anything worth doing should be well done. She endeavored to treat every one with the utmost politeness and respect and never found time to indulge in speaking evil of any one.

Her death was very unexpected. On last Wednesday morning the physician, perceiving the change, informed the husband that there were very slight hopes of her recovery. On Wednesday evening she very affectionately kissed her husband and said, "John Wesley, preach the word, preach Jesus and him crucified. You will have much opposition and will be falsely accused, but remember Jesus says, 'Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake, rejoice and be exceedingly glad; for great is your reward in heaven.' Hold up the standard of Jesus. Hold it high. Never allow it to trail. Jesus will help you. Don't dodge in and out, but live for Jesus. Keep close to Jesus. Do not go ahead of him, nor behind, but keep close at his side. Jesus is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. He is with me and he will be with you. Will you trust him?" She then sank in unconsciousness; when she aroused, she was weeping. In the presence of Sisters Hodges, Rodgers and Clark, Sister Elizabeth Balls inquired, "Sister Beckett, why do weep, are you in pain?" "No ma'am, I have not had any pain this day. I am happy. I am glad that I am saved. I never was demonstrative in religion, but Jesus is with me and I am resting in his love. Sister Hodges, my husband is a Christian. He lives to it at home and abroad; out of Church and in the Church. I know him. I have lived with him over eleven years and I know whereof I speak. He will have opposition, but in that is for him more than all that can be against him." Her last sentences, uttered before death, on arousing from slumber, she said,

"And are we yet alive,
And see each other's face;
Glory and praise to Jesus give
For his redeeming grace."

BETHEL CHURCH, PHILADELPHIA, February 3, 1888.

At a meeting of the Official Members, held on the above date, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, In the exercise of Divine clemency and mercy various states and conditions are meted out to humanity, some are allotted length of days; others, to an early grave, but each fills his probation; and

WHEREAS, We are well assured by Him who cannot err, that a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without our Heavenly Father's notice; and

WHEREAS, It has pleased Him in whose hands are all our destinies to remove from our midst and from the side of our very excellent pastor his most pious, amiable and inestimable wife to an endless habitation beyond the grave; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That while we condole our brother's loss, and drop a tear of sympathy with him and the little ones bereft of a mother's care, yet we rejoice in the full assurance that our dear sister and friend, Katie S Beckett, is

"Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast,
There by his love o'ershadowed,
Sweetly her soul shall rest."

And be it further

RESOLVED, That a copy of these proceedings be tendered the pastor and his bereaved family, as a token of our sympathy and respect.

NOTICE OF PETITION AND CONTEST.

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the African M. E. Church, in session at St. Louis, Mo., May, 1880, did, by resolution unanimously passed, express its pleasure and willingness to effect organic union with the British M. E. Church, and did create a Commission to treat with the representatives of the British M. E. Church on the subject of organic union; and

WHEREAS, The commissioners on the part of the African M. E. Church did assemble themselves at the place and time of meeting of the General Conference of the British M. E. Church, viz: Toronto, Ont., September, 1880; and

WHEREAS, The General Conference of the British M. E. Church, in session at the place and time aforesaid, did create a Commission to treat with the commissioners of the African M. E. Church on the subject of organic union; and

WHEREAS, The Joint commission, to wit: the commissioners of the African M. E. Church and the commissioners of the British M. E. Church, agreed to effect organic union; and did formulate, consent to, approve and adopt articles of agreement for organic union, and attested the same by affixing their several signatures, thereby mutually agreeing and solemnly pledging and binding themselves and the denominations which they represented, viz: the African M. E. Church and the British M. E. Churches, to faithfully, completely and without reservation as to any part thereof, conform to the property to the possession and for the use of the African M. E. Church. The petitioner will inquire—Did the African M. E. Church intend to simply effect organic union with but a mere fractional part of the British M. E. Church or with the British M. E. Church as a whole? The petitioner will affirm that if it meant the former then has organic union been completed; and if it meant the latter, organic union has not been completed; and for the sole reason that the British M. E. Church has failed to fulfill each and every stipulation and condition embodied in the articles of agreement, thus releasing and absolving the African M. E. Church from any and all responsibility for the failure to complete organic union with the British M. E. Church, and also releasing it from all obligation to further recognize Bishop R. R. Disney as one of its bishops.

Notice is also given that the right to seats in the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, of all persons who may claim to have been elected as delegates from any part of the territory occupied by the British M. E. Church, prior to September 4, 1884, to said General Conference will be contested. The Demarara Annual Conference of the British M. E. Church is hereby advised not to attempt, under any circumstances, to send delegates to the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, for any other purpose than to apply to said General Conference for admission into the general body of the African M. E. Church; inasmuch as the said Demarara Annual Conference was not made, for reasons known only to the representatives of the British M. E. Church, a party to the consideration, rejection or approval of the articles of agreement for organic union between the African M. E. and the British M. E. Churches.

Further notice is given that the right of Bishop R. R. Disney to equal consecration with the bishops of the A. M. E. Church in presiding over and regulating the affairs of the General Conference of the African M. E. Church, to convene in Indianapolis, Ind., May, 1888, will be contested, and the petitioner will endeavor to show that the said Bishop R. R. Disney has never been, and is not now, a de facto bishop of the African M. E. Church.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 20, 1888.

"In all respects more than answers my expectations. It is very neat, of a form convenient for use, firmly bound, of large, clear type, with contents of just that general character which the popular reader requires—comprehensive, accurate, and compact. Its marvelously low cost makes it a prize eagerly to be sought in every intelligence-loving household."—PROF. HENRY N. DAY, D.D. LL.D., Yale College, New Haven, Conn.

"We can hardly say too much for the Manifold. It is a rich blessing to the man who feels unable to invest in the larger encyclopedias. We deem ourselves personally unfortunate in having invested in the higher priced works. We have to-day twenty-five volumes of the Britannica, at a cost in cash of $150, and our set is incomplete by at least six to eight volumes. Alden's Manifold actually covers every practical want in this line. The bulky encyclopedia is a piece of showy extravagance that a man will sadly mourn before he gets it paid for. If you wish an encyclopedia, take Alden's before any other."—Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dayton, Ohio.

SCOTT'S EMULSION of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a combination of two of the most valuable remedies in exisience for the cure of Consumption and all Wasting Conditions; is more generally recommended and used by Physicians than any known remedy; it gives most satisfactory results, and tones up the system; and when the Consumptive has wasted away and loses hope, the Emulsion will speedily check the ravages of this terrible disease, and restore the sufferer to good health and happiness. This is equally true in regard to Rickets in Children, or Marasmus and Anæmia in Adults, and all impoverished conditions of the blood; and especially desirable for Colds and Chronic Coughs, as it will cure them more quickly than ordinary Specifics used. Palatable as milk.

"Now Job," said Mrs. Shuttle, "those trowsers are altogether too big for the boy. They'll have to be changed." "No, they won't. They're all right. I bought 'em when they advertised 'Boys' clothing to play in.' They are just big enough to play in without going out of doors. They're so roomy."

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

$500 THE PROPRIETORS OF Dr. Sage's CATARRH REMEDY

WILL PAY FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

For a case of Catarrh in the Head which they cannot cure.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS 50 CENTS. The Only Guaranteed Cure

CATARRH IN THE HEAD.

SYMPTOMS OF THE DISEASE.—Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at other times thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with some fever; the voice is changed and has a "nasal twang"; the breath is offensive; smell and taste impaired; there is a sensation of pressure, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians.

COMMON SENSE TREATMENT. If you would remove eh evil, strike at its root. As the predisposing or real cause of catarrh is in the majority of cases, some constitutional impurity, or otherwise faulty condition of the system, in attempting to cure the disease our chief aim should be directed to the removal of the cause. Hence we see of this odious disease, and we treat successfully thousands of cases annually at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, by a course of treatment which combines the use of a local, soothing and healing application, a thorough and persistent internal use of blood-cleansing, and tonic medicines.

CHIEF RELIANCE. In curing catarrh and all the various diseases with which it is so frequently complicated, as throat, bronchial, and lung disease, weak stomach, catarrhal deafness, weak or inflamed eyes, impure blood, scrofulous and syphilitic taints, the wonderful powers and virtues of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cannot be too strongly extolled. It has a specific effect upon the lining mucous membranes of the nasal and other passages, promoting the natural secretion of their follicles and glands, thereby softening the diseased and thickened membrane, and restoring it to its natural, thin, delicate, moist, healthy condition. As a blood-purifier, it is unsurpassed. It thoroughly cleanses the blood, carrying to the diseased lining mucous membranes, or of the blood, it will readily be seen why this medicine is so well calculated to cure this disease.

LOCAL AGENT. As a local application for healing the diseased condition in the head, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is beyond all comparison the best preparation ever invented. It is mild, soothing, and healing, producing no smarting or pain, and containing no strong, irritating, or caustic drugs, or other poisons. This Remedy is a powerful antiseptic, and speedily destroys all bad smell which accompanies so many cases of catarrh, thus affording great comfort to those who suffer from this disease.

PERMANENT CURES. The Golden Medical Discovery is the natural "helpmate" of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It thoroughly cleanses, purifies, regulates, and builds up the system to a healthy standard, and cooperates therewith, in most cases, in producing a permanent cure. When any such exist, but, from its specific effects upon the lining membrane of the nasal passages, it is especially fortifying the disease against a return, and liberates it from its dependence upon other remedies. When a cure is effected in this manner it is permanent.

Both Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are sold by druggists the world over. The former, $1.00, six bottles for $5.00. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy 50 cents; half-dozen bottles $2.50.

A complete Treatise on Catarrh, giving valuable hints as to cleanliness, diet, and other matters of importance, and a list of questions, sent to any address, on receipt of a 3-cent postage stamp.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, New York.

Do to day's duty, fight to-day's temptation; and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things which you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them.—Charles Kingsley.

By nothing will the Church of the future justify its methods so fully as by the emphasis it lays upon character. In nothing will it differ so radically from the Church of the past.—J. C. Learned.

WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6, 1888.

FINEST OF THE FRENCH SATEENS. The NEW ones out here; the most popular fall. Well worth seeing; so bright, so modish.

More than two hundred and fifty styles. May be some of them a bit more pronounced than last year, but nothing obtrusive. The sheen of the fabric and the handsome colors live in your mind as a perfect picture.

HABIT CLOTH. FINE, SMOOTH, CLINGING All wool, and not a scrimp about it. From the fleece of the dry sheep stay taken with extra care Combines warmth with lightness. In the favorite Spring shades—tweedy of them Plump 29 inches wide, and 50 cents. We know of no handsomer stuff for the money.

AS A SAMPLE OF WHAT WE ARE DOING IN Robes: Scotch 54 inch combination all-wool materials for a liberal dress, $2. In a box.

BLACK SERGE FOULE. A NEW ARRIVAL. Every fibre fine wool Soft to the touch, yet firm and crisp under finger pressure. Stuff that we shall hear much of, 47 inches wide, 37½ cents. A before unheard of price for such goods.

ALL-WOOL TURKISH BATH WRAPS from France. Handsome, soft, luxurious you can scarcely tell Fluffy, fuzzy, nappy, fine. Have been, are and will be $12.

Cozy Bath Wraps of French Flannel, $5 each. They have been $8.50.

VALENTINE'S DAY IN LEAP-YEAR WILL BE an occasion of unusual interest The variety for this season is very large. Some of the gay cheesecutest shapes you are likely to come across Sense and sentiment. Fun and timest. Anything a right-minded buyer will care for.

BOOK NEWS for February just out; portrait: Edward Everett Hale.

"My little son, three years of age, was terribly afflicted with scrofula. His head was entirely covered with scrofulous sores, and his body showed many marks of the disease. A few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured him."—W. J Beckett, Hymera, Ind.

"Hi! you dropped a brick up there!" shouted a pedestrian on whose shoulder one of those articles had fallen from a three-story scaffold. "All right," cheerfully responded the bricklayer, "you needn't take the trouble to bring it up."—Chambers' Journal.

"I am one of the happiest mothers in Lowell over what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for my child, as I really believe it saved her eyesight," says Mrs. R E. Williams, Lowell, Mass.

Counsel (impressively): "Now, madam, will you please explain what could have caused you to sleep so soundly that, as you allege, you did not hear the noise in the adjoining room?" Witness: "A bard day's wurruk, sorr, and a clear conscience."

COUGHS AND COLDS. THOSE WHO ARE suffering from Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, etc., should try BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES, a simple and effectual remedy. They contain nothing injurious, and may be used at all times with perfect safety.

NOTICE BY THE MANAGER.

We again call the attention of the pastors and presiding elders to the form of Warranty Deed we have prepared and published for general use in the purchase of church properties. The form is ample, and plain as plain can be, yet it is believed to cover every point in the law. It was drawn by an old experienced attorney, with our Discipline before him. Price, 25 cents per copy, or 5 for $1.00.

Address, J. C. EMBRY,

THE CENTENNIAL OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

LAST CALL.

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do so at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing the same.

Brethren will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairman of General Committee.

WITH A BOTTLE

Of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral at hand, one may feel comparatively secure against the various diseases arising from sudden changes of temperature, exposure to drafts and storms, and the inclemencies of spring and fall. "Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of Colds, Coughs, Bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there are none, within the range of my experience and observation, so as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes Thos. G. Edwards, M. D., of Blanco, Texas.

George W. Dick, of Newton, Mass., says: "Two years ago I took a severe cold, which, being neglected, was followed by a terrible cough. I lost flesh rapidly, had night sweats, and was confined to my bed. A friend advised the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I began to take this medicine, and, before finishing the first bottle, was able to sit up. Four bottles effected a perfect cure."

ey thus spent is a thousand fold worse then wasted; but the worst feature of all in this matter is, that so many of the preachers and some of the Bishops—the leaders of the people, the professed representatives of the Lord Jesus Christ—are engaged in this filthy, wickedness, helping to carry on this wholesale waste of the Lord's money, leading our boys astray, and some of the above-mentioned leaders are so blind or so ignorant that they have the assurance to try to prove that it is no sin.

Mr. Editor, I wish to press this one thought upon the mind and heart of all who read this article, that all who use tobacco by chewing or smoking, whether they be professing Christians or infidels, they are guilty of helping to rob God and humanity by wasting $300 000.-000 of the Lord's money merely to gratify their acquired appetite.

Now, my dear readers, in view of the above facts, in God's name I appeal to you in behalf of the tens of thousands of our boys and girls who are being led into this whirlpool of filth; I ask you, is it not time for the Church of the living God to lift up her voice as the voice of one man, against those unreasonable and inconsistent preachers and leaders who will use all their moral force to make laws to prevent church members from attending dances and theatres, but are so blind that they cannot or will not see the need of them ever trying to pass a law that the Church may be relieved of those leaders who are leading thousands of our boys and girls into the filthy and injurious habit of using tobacco? Some tobacco slaves seem to be so dishonest or forgetful that in the General Conference could pass a law in regard to tobacco and they should hasten to be the committee to compile the Discipline, I feel quite sure that they would forget and leave out everything said about tobacco; for we all know men do not love to publish anything to prohibit them from doing what they claim to be their rights. In our next we will give the readers some startling facts that have come under our notice in regard to the injurious effects of tobacco upon human beings.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

BY BISHOP A. W. WAYMAN.

Mr. Editor:—I left the "Monumental City" on Monday, January 16, for the North Louisiana Conference. I had made arrangements to stop off at several places, viz., Chattenooga, Nashville and Birmingham. On reaching these cities I found a great deal of ice and mud. I had the good fortune to reach Shreveport, La., where the conference met safe; and as it had been raining in Louisiana for about six weeks, there were fears entertained that we should have a bad time, but Shreveport is the greatest town for mud that I have ever visited in the South. There were two conferences beside ours that met in that town this winter, the M. E. South and the C. M. E, and the weather and mud were so bad that the people could hardly get to the church. On Wednesday, the day our conference met, the weather cleared up and during the whole time it was as pleasant as any spring weather that you have in Philadelphia. The weather being fine, the conference was very largely attended and the meetings were of the most interesting character. Every morning at 6 o'clock a prayer meeting was held, conducted by a number of the ministers, and they were well attended.

The financial reports were better this year than at any previous session, and the outlook is more encouraging than ever. The last two years young and active men have been appointed presiding elders and they have gone to work to build up the cause and they have succeeded admirably. I find that what is most wanted in the work in Louisiana are men who will work with heart and go to it resolved to succeed.

As this was the conference to elect delegates to the General Conference the candidates had everything cut and dried and almost every minister that was eligible was a candidate and expected to be elected, as he said, on the first ballot. A motion was made to elect on Saturday, but one brother who thought he had the inside track got moved to amend by striking out Saturday and inserting Friday, for he was anxious to have the voting over. The time arrived and the voting commenced, and as Rev. A. M. Green, from the Arkansas Conference, was present, he was requested to act as teller, who announced that J. W. Rankins and J. B. Wehh were the successful candidates. The conference held very interesting memorial services on Saturday, when Rev. A. M. Green spoke of Bishops Shorter and Cain, and Rev. P. W. Williams spoke of Elder Walker, who died at his post during the past year.

Sunday was a great day in Shreveport; there were large congregations out and the collections were good. The crowd was so great at night that one of the pillars under the church gave way a little, but there was no harm done Monday was another fine day—the conference met to wind up its business—the several committees reported; the one on temperance provoked the greatest discussion on account of the stand the committee took against the use of tobacco. At night there was an old fashioned love-feast, which lasted until 9 o'clock, and then the conference met for the last time and a few complimentary resolutions were passed. The appointments were read and the conference finally adjourned On Tuesday morning there was a taking out of the members. While they went to their appointments I started to Charleston, S. C., to meet the conference, and should I reach there you will hear from me again.

NEEDS OF THE SOUTH.

THE PLACE FOR YOUNG COLORED MEN OF ABILITY.

BY JOSEPH L. JONES.

Not long since I was before you in an article, "Trip to Waco," but the apparent lack of energy spent in the right direction by the major part of young colored men prompts me to again appear, endeavoring to place a stimulus before the rising generation which will incite them to action in a right field of labor, their minds to a right sense of duty, not only to themselves, but to the colored people at large. For colored men who can place themselves within the scope of my topic, the present South presents a wide field of labor; and on you who are continually condemning the South by your Northern friends, rests the responsibility of forming a new South. Do not make so much complaint about famine you make no effort to remedy. The South is large and the Southward, especially, is filled with a people thirsting for knowledge, while the Southwest, perhaps, represents a more favorable picture—being newgiving you the opportunity to settle in a small, thrifty town and grow up with it. Land is cheap, living is cheap and to him who has brains a superabundance of work. Leave your cosy quarters, convivial society, mother and friends, go out into the world and cle r your own path to success. It is a well established fact that there is no place like home; therefore, ere you start expect great disadvantages, and if you are energetic you will be surprised whet few impediments obstruct your path to prosperity and success, and these will only be momentary. You will probably but surely marching on to a bright and eventful future. More earnest laborers in the work, not seeking self-aggrandizement, is the present need—good men who, by the likeness of the light, will push onward and not dare to take one retrogressive step; men who are strong mentally, and especially morally, who will seek to lift the colored people to an attainable standard which will demand recognition. This cannot be done by talking, therefore cease your hypercriticisms on the South and set yourselves to earnest work. The time is not far distant when we, as a people, shall be felt and the means to make ourselves felt are not shrouded in mystery. We need real estete, more mechanics and less third rate teachers and preachers. Inefficient and immoral teachers have reduced what should be a noble profession to a most pitiable and non enviable condition. The present school teacher is a target for the public to shoot at, an object ever regarded with the eye of suspicion. I pause to find a presentable reason for the seeming moral deficiency of many colored teachers and preachers. Even he who claims to be commissioned by Divine authority to disseminate the word does not always give testimony of a blameless life. Let me be up and doing. The bright star whose rays shall light our people to success is just below the horizon.

THE CENTRAL TEXAS CONFERENCE.

"WHAT IS IT?"

To the Editor Christian Recorder:

In the issue of your paper hearing date of 19th January, 1888 you have seen proper to introduce some questions as to the existence of the Central Texas Conference. With unbecoming taste you say it must be an odd sort of affair. That much permit us to admit true, as there are so many odd things in Texas, as thought by men in your part of the country.

"We hear little of it annually" The reason for which is that, at our sessions every year, a motion prevails that these West Texas and Central Texas Conferences meet together. This is agreed to by the members. Now, we ask the question, Whose business is it if all the Texas conferences should meet together? We have lost no churches, our Dollar Money and church work stand in bold relief for the criticism of all, and peace, success and harmony prevail here from the basin of the Red river to the Gulf of Mexico.

"Is it a quadrennial conference?" Yes; as other conferences it elects every quadrennium its delegates to the General Conference, as that is what you seem to be driving at.

"We find no explanation in the report." We take great pleasure in sending you by to day's mail a copy of our minutes. Possibly you may get, through this medium, the desired information. You will learn that it has held its fifth session.

"It has no place in the Bishops' calendar." After the conferences decided by vote to meet together, the Bishop of course publishes his call accordingly. We happen, dear brother, to understand things down here in this "odd State" much better than many suppose.

"A strange conference." Yes, we frankly acknowledge 'tis "a strange conference," and it being so very strange accounts for the fact that we have no visits from our General Officers in attendance upon our sessions with only one honorable exception, it being that of Dr Embry, who is a member of the West Texas Conference.

Now, to the last interrogatory propounded, "What is it?" We invite you to look on page 300 in our Book of Discipline and you will find the boundary of this "What is it?" the Central Texas Conference, as was laid out by our last General Conference. It has more geographical territory than the States of New York and Pennsylvania combined "What is it?" It is this conference whose votes at the last General Conference were cast to aid in making the editor of the Christian Recorder, who with so much sarcasm now asks the question, "What is it?"

Doctor, if this is not information enough, we beseech you to wait until the month of May, and then Dr Grant, Rev. Wilhite, Pryce Keeling and Moore and others whom you will meet in Indiana will take great pleasure in satisfying your mind upon the matter of this "What is it?" Central Texas Conference. If the above is not enough light upon the subject, doctor, please put on brake until May.

Yours for God and humanity,

B. W. Roberts,
J. Harvey Jones,
Presiding Elders of the Central Texas Conference of the A. M. E. Church.

"THAT CENTRAL TEXAS CONFERENCE."

In the editorial column of the Christian Recorder of January 19th appeared the following editorial, "That Central Texas Conference must be a sort of odd affair; we hear very little of it annually. Is it a quadrennial conference? We find no explanation in the reports, which shows that it had no distinct existence The sessions in which its members have those of the West Texas Conference were promiscuously united with one chairman," &c.

In reply to above and for the information of all concerned, I would say that the Central Texas Conference was organized in San Antonio, December, 1883, by Bishop R. H Cain, with between thirty and forty appointments within its bounds, and by resolution it was agreed that the Central and West Texas Conferences meet conjointly in the next session. There have always been those in each one of these conferences who wanted to hold together, hence a resolution that we, the West Texas and Central Conferences meet conjointly has passed in every session since the creation of the new conference. We have always recognized the Central Texas Conference, but still we have hung together by resolutions, each conference electing its own officers, book stewards, local board of education, trustees of Paul Quinn College, &c.

HASTE.

1. As we are rounding up the business for the quadrennium, we ask that conference missionary reports due this office be sent at once, and that all persons knowing themselves to be indebted to the department, remit without further notice.

2. That we desire every church and Sunday school to send at once and get their Easter programmes.

3. That the secretaries of the following conferences please send us a copy of their last minutes: West Kentucky, South Kansas, Kansas, Tennessee, Indien, North Missouri, Mississippi, North Georgia, Arkansas, West Tennessee, Florida, South Arkansas, North Alabama, Macon, North Carolina, West Arkansas, Alabama, Texas, Columbia, North Mississippi, Northeast Texas, Georgia, West Texas, North Louisiana and South Carolina. Responses to these requests will greatly favor us.

Brethren will address all communications to

The man who is above his business may one day find his business above him.

A weak mind is like a microscope, which magnifies trifling things, but cannot receive great ones.

A SINLESS AMBITION.

One of the finest human feelings is the natural wish of parents that their children may be better off than themselves. This may not always be wisely manifested, but there is the essence of self-sacrificing love in it; and in the hearts of most fathers and mothers it is glorified into the hope and prayer that their offspring may be not only better off, but better, than themselves.

At the close of the Civil War, a newly-emancipated negro slave, on his dying bed, kissed the baby fingers of his youngest child, and whispered, "This little hand will write." His last vision on earth was of the happier and more favored future which his posterity would inherit. And his words were prophetic, for he left a wife whose motherly heart sympathized with his longing faith. Her highest joy for freedom, as his had been, was in loving separations and expectations for the little ones who bore his name. There were five of them, and the humble mother set herself resolutely to realize the promise of better things that had come to them with liberty and peace. She could work, and remain ignorant. They could learn to work, but they should be educated. Many years she toiled and struggled, inspiring them with her zeal, and happy in seeing that they seconded her efforts. She has lived to see them all graduated at Fisk University. Last summer her "baby"—the child whose hand the dying father kissed—delivered his commencement oration. The theme of his essay was, "The Evolution of Self-Sacrifice," and the cloud of witnesses there saw in himself the evolution of Christian manhood. His father's prophecy was more than fulfilled. He could not only "write" but "write" with power and clearness; and he spoke like a born orator, bidding fair, with his sanctified gift, to do grand work as a preacher of righteousness. At the same commencement, in the alumni meeting, the oldest son, a teacher, told the story of that mother's noble purpose and sacrifices, and paid manly tribute to her worth and affection. It was but one of many similar stories told (or that could be told) annually at Fisk University, and every other colored school. It was the oft-repeated history of parental hope and desire for the children, always inspiring on something better for them, never satisfied till their lot and condition are some improvement on the past.

There is a pathos in the example of that poor negro woman that lingers after one hears it told; but we cannot help dwelling longer on the noble and filial pride of her children in responding to her wishes and working out her plan. And here a point suggests itself which parents and teachers are likely to overlook. While we are endeavoring to guide the faith of the young, it is only also to stimulate their moral ambition. We can not ignore the solemn fact that they will imitate what they see in us, and hence the emphasized obligation to be as good as we can: but we should encourage them to aim higher, and make their standard that they be simply as good as we are is far too little to be satisfied with. We must tell them that they are not only to be Christians, but they are to hope and try to be grander and more useful Christians than we are. The famous Origen was great, not simply by his gifts, but because he early took and cherished for himself the holy ambition cherished for him by a pious father, the father who used to lean over him in his childhood sleep, and uncover and kiss his breast, and call it "the temple of the Holy Ghost." If we would help to make the next generation great and good above the average of to day we need, as religious educators of the young, to fasten, with our hope and prayer, upon the highest possibilities of character in them, and train them to recognize these and never live below for them, but press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.—Sunday School Times.

IMPORTANT QUESTIONS CONSIDERED.

BY REV. R. F. HURLEY.

Mr. Editor:—Notwithstanding my abhorrence of egotism, especially in ministers; and notwithstanding the ceaseless clatter of oratorical machinery from all parts of our great Church, all directed to the mighty questions that must engage the attention of the General Conference, I beg space to insert a few thoughts pointing in the same direction.

First of all we come to that mighty question: "Do we need more Bishops?" We don't expect to agree with everybody in what we shall say on this subject, nor do we suppose any one will be troubled about our disagreeing with them, for we are neither a delegate to the General Conference, nor a candidate for the Bench; hence, we can fire away and no one will notice us, we being placed in a harmless position. The question, "Do we need more Bishops?" has been answered both ways—yes and no; and as there are only two sides to it I must side with one; thus I take sides with the negative. We don't need any more Bishops now, which fact seems to me well sustained by Dr. Steward, of Washington. But let us consider whether we need more Bishops or whether we do not need them. If we need them there must be reason why we need them. The reasons offered by the agitators are on account of the rapid progress of our Church, its extension of our territory and the old age of the present Bishops.

Now, let us notice the first. Our membership is not increasing so rapidly. This is a fact well known to those who are watching the statistics of our Church; but we could grant the contrary and then fail to see by that fact the necessity of more Bishops; our membership might be doubled and still there would be no need of more Bishops. We have forty-two conferences with a membership of about four hundred thousand, presided over by seven Bishops. Now, it is clear to my mind that we have too many conferences already, and yet our seven Bishops get along nicely holding them.

There seems to be a false idea in our Church, not only as to what a Bishop is to do, but as to what a Bishop really is. The Bishops are supposed to travel through the work and preside in the conferences; they are not supposed to go around and count the members. Dr. Seward touched the key-note when he referred to the great M. E. Church, and that it would to profit by the example of that Church on this point, at least.

Secondly, let us notice the extension of territory. Are we extending our territory? I think not, and if we are, it is so insignificant that it is not worth speaking about. We, in fact, have one, "that is why we call for more Bishops, to be the better prepared to extend our territory" Well, I would like to know what power has any man to extend the territory of the Church after he is elected Bishop that he did not possess prior to such election.

It is a false notion that a man must be a Bishop or a presiding elder to extend the Church. Let us not forget the fact that making Bishops is not adding talent to the Church; no more than the dividing of conferences adds to the membership of the Church.

Thirdly, "Our Bishops are old," says one, "and must soon go the way of all the earth." Yes, they are, but this should be counted their strength, for by their long and great experience they are the more qualified to stand at the helm and steer the great ship of African Methodism.

It seems to me that God has taught an important lesson on this point. In 1880 we thought, as some Bishops were old, that we had better elect some younger and smarter ones to take their places God showed us our folly by taking from us two of that election. We think we had better let God decide when a man should retire from the work to which he has called him. Besides, I think it is not a compliment to be eternally telling our Bishops, who have grown gray in the work of the Lord, that they must soon step and take back seats, for they are going to die. It is time enough to fill men's places when they become vacant. It is not policy, nor is it right in the sight of God, either to settle or retire Bishops and even if it is, we cannot or shall not give the present Bishops a decent support. Thus to talk of taking care of men while they do nothing, and at the same time keep up a dozen more in their places (in name only), is the highest folly. I fail to see why we should make more Bishops simply because we have men capable of being Bishops when there is no need of them. I would to God that every man in the Church was worthy of being exalted to a station so high, much less being capable.

In conclusion, allow me to call the reader's attention to two very important suggestions—read, consider and digest. First, let the presiding elder system be a recognized and established fact in our Church, with a rigid enforcement. Let men who love God and the Church, and who are willing to work for God and humanity, be not only the presiding elders but pastors, then there will be harmony and prosperity. Second, discontinue the episcopal districts and adopt the plan that has succeeded so long and so well in the M. E. Church. Let a Bishop be a Bishop wherever you find him, with official functions and authority, then you will have a uniform administration of the affairs of the Church, and we will hear less about the abuse of the transfer system, Bishops' favorites, etc. Do these two things, and we will have disposed of the two great questions which agitate the minds of so many.

In closing I recapitulate: elect new Bishops upon the seventh or all supernumeration of the old ones; make the presiding elder system one in fact as well as in letter in all parts of our Church; discontinue the episcopal districts and let the Bishops alternate. Do this and we will save the Church from what is bound to come if we do otherwise. To what do I allude? The election of men by the ung dly method of combinations, that reflect discredit even upon the political parties of this age. But a greater danger than this threatens our Church to-day. What is it? The election of men on account of the section in which they are engaged rather than for their qualification and fitness. I know of nothing so threatening to our Church at this time as the "geographical" election of Bishops. God save the Church from such a calamity.

WHAT WE ARE DOING AND WHAT WE SHALL DO.

BY REV. H. H. KING,

Mr. Editor:—In every Recorder for the last seven months we see an account of what the next General Conference must do. There never has been a time in the history of the Church when our counselors were so numerous and their advice given so freely. We have not come as a counselor, but to give a few facts and figures of the great Southwest.

Verily the wheels of time do move and the old pendulum in the unerring chronometer has ticked off another year, whose misery, within the heart like a spectre dies, points its cold and solemn finger to the beautiful and holy things that have passed away. On the dead waste of life the spectre lifts the coffin lid of hope, joy and love. The quadrennial has gone, and with it many a glorious throng. Its mark is on each brow; its shadow in each heart. In its swift course it has waved its sceptre over the beautiful and they are not; upon the strong man and the haughty form. It trod the halls of revelry, where thronged the bright and joyous; and the tearful wail of the stricken one is heard. Even from the earth forever." Three has the Church been called on to bow on account of Death's visit to our Episcopal ranks, and in the next General Conference the care-worn veterans will come together to take a retrospective view of the past and provide for the future. He who has led the Eighth Episcopal District, though made to drink from the bitter cup of death, can truly say, "Great is our God who has given us the victory." Four years since Bishop Ward took for the second time this section of our Church, and during that period we can truly say,

"What troubles have we had;
What conflicts have we passed.
Fighting without and fear within
Since we assembled last."

What are we doing? We are working, as the figures will show. Arkansas Conference shows over $2 100 Dollar Money. Mississippi comes next, within one dollar, and Arkansas over $2,000; North Mississippi, $1 950, thus making a total of over $8,000 more four years ending against $4,000 in 1884. To augment the above, churches have been built in Fort Smith, Brinkly, Forest City, Pleasant Grove, Oseola, Pine Bluff, Texarkana, Raymond, West Point, Vicksburg, a parsonage valued at $2 00; also Batesville, Augusta and a number of smaller places. In all of the work, so far as we have been able to glean, the churches have increased numerically. Now, what we are doing down here. To us the A. M. E. Church is the grandest of all the churches now in existence, and it is to be hoped she will remain so. We shall have a word about the General Conference in our next.

ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

[The following is by Carrie C. Malone. She is the daughter of Rev J. W. Malone, and is eleven years old.—Ed]

The Sunday school of to day is the church of to-morrow, therefore the purpose of the Sunday school is to teach God's word. In noticing thousands of little boys and girls all over this broad land of ours on the Sabbath day rushing to and from their Sunday schools in different directions, with eager eyes and listening ears, desiring to get all information from their teachers in regard to the blessed Saviour and his teaching, for he has taught us in his divine word to search the Scriptures for in them we think we have eternal life. The little boys and girls in the Sunday school are like the plants in the flower garden, the real value of the plants depends upon the care they receive. If the flowers are trimmed and the dead leaves are picked off the plants and they receive the sunlight, great success may be expected. The same may be said of the little boys and girls in the Sunday school. If they receive the proper instruction while young they will grow up to be great men and women, doing much good in the glorious cause of Christ. The first impressions are the most lasting, for we never forget the kind and tender words that fall from the lips of our teachers, directing us in the paths of peace and happiness.

Nobody ever outgrows Scripture; the book widens and deepens with our years.

A VOICE FROM PLYMOUTH, MASS.

BY REV. I. A. GRANDY.

Mr. Editor:—I take pleasure in writing you a few lines to ask you for a place in your paper to state what I call facts, and that is this. I don't see why our ministers should suffer and need to establish churches in this great land of ours and have them deeded to the conference, and just as soon as they leave to other fields, and some to heaven, that the conference should let that property get away from them in the hands of other people without a cent for it after the members say, by their actions and words, that they will not keep it up or have anything to do with it. We have a church here in Plymouth, Mass., worth from $1 500 to $2 000, will soon be in the hands of some private parties or run down if something is not done. If there is no provision made to look after such property, I hope that the General Conference will see that something is done to save deserted property that our fathers have got together and given to the conference. I am here looking after it without one dollar of support, only what I can get out of the white people—now and then five cents from this one and ten from that one. I hope in God that our intelligent head will look after such things and not let the labor of the fathers be wasted.

VIRGINIA CONFERENCE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

The Virginia Conference Electoral College met in the Third Street A. M. E. Church, Richmond, Va., at 1 o'clock P. M., January 18, 1888. Hon. George W. Dalley was elected president, and Prof. A. Solomon Walton, secretary. After devotional exercises a meeting was declared ready for business. The delegates presented their credentials, etc., after which quite enthusiastic speeches were made by Brothers Hunt, of Portsmouth; Pryor, of Manchester; Walton, of Richmond, and Dalley, of Norfolk. The college elected by ballot Prof A. Solomon Walton and Hon. George W. Dalley; alternates, Morris Hunt and H. W. Pryor. Much harmony prevailed. A vote of thanks was tendered Rev. E. H. Boiden, A. M., for the hospitality extended the delegates and visitors. After fraternal interchanges the college adjourned and partook of the repast which had been prepared by Rev. Boiden.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO GENERAL CONFERENCE DELEGATES.

Reduced fare has been secured for all General Conference delegates, except those residing in Arkansas, Kansas and Texas. Delegates will pay full fare going and be returned for one-third fare. Persons other than delegates desiring to attend General Conference will be given the same reduction. A circular giving full information will be mailed to each delegate about the 20th of April. I hope to be able to secure some reduction for the delegates from Kansas, Arkansas and Texas. If I cannot, then delegates from Texas can pay full fare to and from New Orleans and obtain the benefit of the reduction from that point to and from Indianapolis. Arkansas delegates can pay full fare to and from Memphis, Tenn., and get the reduced rates from there to and from the General Conference. Delegates from Kansas can pay full fare to and from Kansas City, or St. Louis, Mo., and get the benefit of the reduction from either of these points to the General Conference. In all cases the reduction will only be made on return tickets. Persons must return by the same route by which they go.

Fraternally,

C. S. Smith.

Church News.

Rev. E. W. Johnson, Monticello, Fla., writes: I was appointed by Bishop D. A. Payne to this charge, and we have some good property at this place; all it needs is repairing. I have selected for building purposes $104 40 since I was appointed to this charge. I got with the good workers at Monticello. By the last of April I must show you a change at this place.

Rev. I. H. W. West, Macedonia A. M. E. Church, Amityville, Long Island, N. Y., writes: Commenced a protracted meeting January 1st, and continued four weeks. The Lord revived his work and ten precious souls were happily converted to God, and the church has been greatly revived and the power of God has been wonderfully felt in this place through the preaching of his word. We ended our meeting on the 27 h to get ready for our third quarterly meeting, which was on February 5th. We were blessed with a grand time all day, and eight joined the church on probation; and one was read into the church. So the Lord is with us. Pray for us.

Rev. J. A. Broadnax, Walnut Ridge, Ark., writes: Having heard nothing from our vineyard, I thought I would let you know that we are still in existence and trying to let our lights shine at Walnut Ridge, with our presiding elder, J. C. Jones, at the head of the district. We have just started a Sunday school, using our own literature, and have twenty-five scholars who seem to take a deep interest in the school, both parents and children. We are not efficient in conducting Sabbath schools, but our superintendent, Prof. Scott T. Bay, Mrs. Gilbert, Miss Ivy, teachers of the female and male classes, and Mr. Johnson, teacher of 24 class, are doing their best. We are ready in need of a chaplain or some one to lead in prayer, but as we have none we will do the best we can. Got pity the man who stands idly by finding nothing to do while this world's wide conflict rages. I hope the General Conference, which is not far in the future, will have and eye single to the territory of the West, for in a few years that will be one of the garden spots of the West for the ministers of our great Church. Brethren, pray for us.

SUCCESSFUL REVIVAL.

Mt. Zion Church, Center street, Darby, under the jurisdiction of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, of the Philadelphia Conference, Rev. W. H Davis, rector, is now in the midst of a glorious revival. Since January 29th there have been twenty-eight conversions, and forty-two have come to the altar asking to be prayed for. The like has never before been witnessed in this church. The interest at the meetings has been so great that only not more then two sermons have been preached since they began. The Rev. Nora D Semple, of Morris Brown Mission, Philadelphia, delivered last Sabbath morning, a very interesting sermon. In the afternoon, Rev. J. B. Stansberry, of Mt. Pisgah Church, West Philadelphia, delivered a powerful sermon. The church was packed to its utmost capacity. There were twenty-one persons at the altar on Sabbath evening.

FROM CHATHAM, ONT.

BY W. MURRAY.

Dear Editor: Kindly allow me space for statement of Campbell Chapel A. M. E. opening, which took place January 1st, a success that reached our endeavors after an arduous and gigantic struggle for seven months. The site is one of the most desirable of church locations of our town, situated on the corner of King and Princess streets, two blocks from the business centre, which make it of easy approach for all. The building is of modern architecture, having four gables, a neatly proportioned spire with slate colored top and ornamental peak. The church is built of red brick of uniform color. The dimensions are 68x34 feet; 22 feet ceiling, with a semi-octagon off set at the rear part for the choir. It contains a commodious and excellently lighted and toned. The entrances are at each side of the north, or King street, point, by easy stairs. The ceiling finished in colored wood, showing the gables, which makes it very neat cheerful, the wainscoting, like the ceiling, showing the beauty of the grain, this, assisted by the mechanical skill of the builder in ornaments, adding more to richness of appearance. The Gothic windows, encircled with variegated lights and ground lights for the centre, is another contribution to its grandeur. Two neatly formed vestries, the sides seats diagonal facing the sanctum or pulpit, which, I am informed, is a representation of the Metropolitan one, the choir occupies a place back of this, in structure and finish compares five to the other parts, and none less adorned by the talent and ability with which entertain their hearers from whom they receive flatteri g encomiums. There are other attractions this edifice offers, together with its spacious basement, that makes it one of the rival churches of our town and superior to any colored church of Canada. It has been termed, by our local journals, a step forward. It is one for the race and a tangible evidence of the permanent existence of African Methodism in the Queen's dominion as a representative church. The service in the morning was conducted by Rt. Rev. Bishop Disney, who discoursed to a well filled house, who enjoyed a rare treat, all going away pleased with the services. Rev. H. M. Joseph spoke in the afternoon and a stranger at night. The choir rendered a number of very choice selections, placing them amongst the leaders of the town. Thus, despite opposition, our church moves to the front and inscribes her name, "Excelsior."

They must keep close to the throne of grace who would win the throne of glory.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Brother Thomas Jones, a well known citizen and much beloved by all who knew him. He held the office of steward and trustee in the A. M. E. Church last year, and was re-elected trustee for another year under the pastorate of Rev. U. G. Cannou. Brother Jones had been a faithful member of our church for a number of years, and was always found at his post. This dear brother was taken sick on the night of January 10, 1888, and died the next morning, the 11th, about 9 o'clock, leaving a dear wife and daughter with a great many friends behind to mourn his departure to a better land. Rev. U. G. Cannon, his pastor, officiated over the remains.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY.

Whereas, It has pleased the all-wise God to deprive our fellow-student and brother, W. A. Joiner, of an endeared father, who as a minister of the Gospel, having ended his labors in the Church Militant, has gone to join the Church Triumphant; and

Whereas, We realize to the utmost extent of our ability the affliction which our brother must undergo because of the decease of his father; and

Whereas, We are assured that He who notes the sparrow's fall will not forseke him in an hour of trouble—

Resolved, That we, the students and faculty of Wilberforce University, cooperate in tendering our heartfelt sympathies to our brother in this his hour of bereavement, and that we commend him to that Being whose wisdom is made manifest in all of his judgments. Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to our bereaved brother and a copy be sent to the Indianapolis World, Christian Recorder and Springfield Capitol for publication.

BEAUTIFUL ADDRESS.

DELIVERED BY REV. MORTIMER OVER THE REMAINS OF MRS. LINDSAY.

We are permitted to publish the following brief but beautiful and appropriate funeral address by Rev. B. G Mortimer, pastor of the A. M. E. Church of the city, the occasion being the death of Mrs. Dr. F. T. Lindsay.

When the bells were about to sound out the gladtidings that there had arrived the day which we celebrate as the birthday of the Christ-child, we were required to pause a moment and look upon all that is mortal of Mrs. Eliza Russell, who, after months of heroic suffering, fell asleep in Jesus. And now, before the new year is one week old, we again assemble with sorrowful hearts and look upon the remains of another noble Christian woman, whose spirit took its flight on last Wednesday passed into the rest which remains for the people of God. Christian friends, our beloved sister is not dead. Redeemed from death are all those who have lived the life of the righteous. We are freed from the bondage of clay, she has been ushered into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

She has been simply translated—raised to a higher plane of existence. Dropping the earthly house of her tabernacle, she inherits now that other building not made with hands eternal in the heavens. No tongue, however eloquent, can do justice to the character of one whose life has been as sweet, as pure in word, as Christ like. Mrs. Lindsay did not think that she should live for herself alone. The talents entrusted to her care, and which had been improved by years of faithfulness, were humbly laid at the feet of the Master, and here in Xenia, as elsewhere, are many in whose hearts she has erected a lasting monument and who will rise up and call her blessed. To strengthen the weak, to speak a word in due season to him that was weary, to bind up the broken hearts, in a word to make mankind better and happier—this was the work for which she had received an anointing of the Lord, and the zeal and faithfulness wherewith she fulfilled her mission is surely worthy the imitation of us all.

A devoted wife, a kind neighbor, faithful in the performance of all her Christian duties, she leaves behind a blessed influence, which will surely tend to ennoble the lives of all with whom she was acquainted.

There was joy in heaven when her gentle spirit met in the glory land her dear little son, who for some time has been waiting for her arrival. Soon mother, father and son will meet in our Father's house in the heavens, where there is no night, and where God will wipe all tears from their eyes. Death does not end all. Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. As one as well said, "There is a region where the rainbow never fades; and where the beautiful beings that now pass before us like shadows, will stay in our presence forever.—Xenia Torchlight.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

To the A. M. E. Sunday School of the St. John A. M. E Church:

Your committee, appointed to prepare resolutions on behalf of the Sunday School, as part of the memorial exercises in honor of the life, character and services of the late Mrs. Dr. Lindsay, beg leave to report the following in that behalf:

Since it has pleased God, in his infinite wisdom, to call from the circle of our associations our beloved friend and co-laborer, Mrs. Eunice P. Shedd-Lindsay, it becomes us as members of this Sunday school, on account of the intimate relations she long held to the school, to piece upon its record our appreciation, in so far as words can express it, of the meritorious services she has rendered the school as pupil, teacher and assistant superintendent, and of the precious influences distilled by her noble Christian life.

Resolved, That while we bow submissively to the will of our Heavenly Father, in this sad visitation of his Incrutable providence, we nevertheless realize and here make note of the great loss sustained by the community, the Church and the race, in the removal of one who was a consistent Christian and an earnest, philanthropic worker, one who so loved

"That when her summons came to join
The innumerable carravan, that moves
To the pale realm of death, she went
Not like the quarry slave, scourged
To his dungeon, but with an unfaltering trust,
Approached her grave as one who,
Wrapping the drapery of her couch about her,
Lies down to pleasant dreams."

Resolved, That in her death the Sunday school and church have lost one who, in counsel, in sympathy, in generous liberality and devotion to the right, was ever reliable and constant.

Resolved, That we regard her life of usefulness, of unselfish endeavors, of unobtrusive benevolence as forming a character worthy the imitation of the women of our church and community.

"Go to the grave; at noon from labor cease;
Rest on thy sheaves, thy harvest task is done;
Come from the heat of battle, and in peace,
Christian, go home; with thee the fight is won"

Resolved, That we hereby tender to the bereaved husband and other relatives our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to Him whose tender and loving compassion is infinite.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our Sunday school and also published in our city papers.

WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18, 1888.

EVERY DAY during the coming season we shall offer from our stock of Dress Goods. The advertiser's pen cannot keep pace with the new goods. The following are only a few of the many offered to us early Spring wear, and are very cheap:

Fourteen Salons in 1888—a great number of our own exclusive styles, equal in pattern, color, and finish to the finest French at twice the price.

French Cashmeres, 40 in., at 50c.; at least one quarter off from all previous prices. Many new colors.

A rare lot of Suitings in new shades of gray and brown and fancy mixes. 36 in. wide, at 25c. a yard—would be cheap at 37½c.

Black Henriettas, 40 in. wide, 75c. A large lot, including 51 varieties of color; all the new fashionable shades, plain and mixed. Also another lot, 42 inches wide, at 50 cents. A quarter off present market value. 50 colorings, including choice new shades.

Brocades, 20 inches wide, at $1.20. They are 10 per cent better in quality than similar goods at $1.20.

Wool Challis. Sixty varieties in color and figure that are just open. Twenty-five at 50 cents, thirty five at 60 cents, 36 inches wide. The lower priced are all silk and cream grounds, the higher have also pink and blue.

The Silk known in the trade as "Summer Silks" that have been so fashionable, especially for country wear, are of Swiss make. But the prices have been squeezed down until production has nearly stopped. Neat checks and stripes in two colorings, 75 cents a yard.

27 in. India Silk, $1.

Shantung Pongee, 25 a piece.

22 in Black Grenadine $1.

Entire Frenchelle, $1.50.

THE cabalistic letters C. O. D. are a well-known device of the express companies, and means, "Collect the hill herewith on delivery," hnt the secret words "Tawks Faith," of the telegraph company, who understands?

BROTHERS TAYLOR AND ROBERTS tell us what the Central Texas Conference is. The latter seems very tender on the subject and says we were sarcastic. Much depends upon the way a statement or question is taken as to the amount of sarcasm one gets ont of it. We put none into our questions. We are informed of the votes that made, that helped to make, the editor. Is that sarcasm? To us the conference seemed anomalous. It seems none the less so after the explanations—this irrespective of voters.

WE THINK it is well for the whole Chnrch to know that our venerable Bishop Brown is a very sick man. Not at the point of death? O no, not by far; bnt he is, nevertheless, in very poor health. Since we saw him last on returning from the Georgia Conference, December 21st, to our view he has lost gronnd. With his wonderful power of recuperation, it was reasonably expected that he would have been quite restored ere this, but it must be said that he is suffering an unusually severe trial this timo. Need we say the Church should pray for him and his loved ones aronnd him?

IN THE ABSENCE of our editorial chief, we take the liberty of saying that; from a letter appearing in the public press to-day (13), from the Hon. James G. Blaine, refusing the presentation of his name to the ensning National Republican Convention for the nomination to the office of President, it appears that the tide of affairs politically is taking a decided turn. We believe that we express the sentiment of thousands of the best Repnblicans of the country when we say we shall be glad if the announcement holds good. We say this for the reason that we want the next President to be a Repnblican; we want him to win, and hence we want to see a man pnt in nomination for whom every Republican in the land—who will he allowed to vote—can vote. A united party can elect its man.

THE SOUTHERN RECORDER still seems disconsolate about the possible election of Dr. B. T. Tanner to the office of Bishop, last his separation from the Review should result in blotting that particular star from the literary firmament of the race. By way of consolation, we are moved to ask if there is, at this day in our history, a single enterprise worth living that must needs perish on acconnt of the death, the transfor or removal of any one man? The Southern Recorder may believe so, but we do not. While the whole Chnrch appreciates the snccess of the Review as chiefly owing to the ability and energy of the managing editor, it is certainly saying too mnch to say that no ons else can edit that publication. If the Southern Recorder isn't joking, where is its specs? Will it please pnt them on and look around before it speaks again?

WE PUBLISH in this issno a business-like proposition from Rev. J. M. Hendsreon relative to the establishment of an extension society in our Chnrch. That we favor an extension department need not be said now, as it has been said sufficiently frequently. Among a certain class of men, in any race variety, some of the plans of Brother Henderson could be eslablished; some of them could not. In the first place, while money is a good thing we cannot be too careful respecting conditioning church membership on the pyment of money, or ministerial standing npon ability to raiee meney. "Step aisy; here lies the dead." Nor shall we ever dare say to an applicant for license, "You mnst become a stockholder in a certain business institntion before you can receive license." A few ministers could snceeed by snch methods, many could not. More option, less compulsion.

"The more come in with a free good will, It make the banquet sweeter still."

Push your oanse, brother, hnt modify your methods, slightly.

IN DISOUESING, through a labored article, the relations of Bishop Wm. Tay lor, now in Central Africa, the Northwestern Christian Advocate of the 8th inst. has this notable passage:

He [Bishop Taylor] makes no report to any Church officer and will make none to the General Conference. Why should he? The General Conference has no more to do with the work or the workers than it had a few years ago with the outside and unofficial work of Bishop Janes, when he laid out a town in New Jersey and inserted in every deed that no lotexicants should he sold on the premises forever; or the unofficial work of Bishop Ames, who, about the same time, laid off an addition to Indianapolis and inserted in every deed: "Said property shall never be sold to, rented, leased, or occupied or enjoyed in any way by a negro or mulatto."

Can any serlons Christian man read this statement in one of the authorized official papers of a leading denomination in our country without a blush of shame? How tenaciously the primitive barbarism of our Anglo-American brethren olings to them! One can scarcely believe his ears when he hears the will of Stephen Girard rehearsed in making his heqnest of the magnificent property comprising Girard College, in the centre of Philadelphia. When we reach the provision that no minister of the gospel shall ever be permitted to even enter the premises, we cannot help feeling that this man was little less than a savage. Bnt here is a Christian Bishop—a ruler in the Church of our Lord—deliberately recording in legal form his malign and barbarons hatred of his fellowmen. O, hnt don't our hearts grow sick to fainting when we hear these canting hypocrites, these whited sepulchers, hemoaning the superstition and pollution of our race? O, the wiles, the disguises, the malice of satan! The Northwestern ought to be ashamed to publish snch a record; for to any mind not distempered by the ourse of American race hats, such a statement is no less offensive than to publish a felony in connection with an honored name, or at least an honored title.

OUR LAST MISSIONARY EFFORT FOR THIS TERM.

The attention of pastors, superintendents of Sunday schools and the publishers of annnal conferanco minntes is respectfully called to the notices and requests of Rev. Dr. Townsend, which are published in this issne.

The missionary department of our Chnrch is engaged in a great work Never before in our history was the demand on this branch of service hsen more nrgent, nor have there ever been so many open doors for its efforts. The dear Savionr calls for workers in the vineyard. We have made answer, "Here, send me." Our offer of service is accepted; and now are we ready,—willing to go? The significance of any answer we may make to this question will depend on the push and liberality we show in this last rally for the holy cause of missions.

DEATH OF DR. JOHN M BROWN, JR

"Dust to dust; ashes to ashes."

Dr. Brown, the snbject of our sketch, was the eldest son of Bishop Brown, and was especially dear to his mother. He was born Angnst 16, 1854, and died February 4, 1888, aged 33 years 6 months and 12 days. Congestion of the lnngs was the fatal malady that earried him hastily to a prematnre grave.

After reaching the junior year in his college conrse, he entered the medical school of Howard University in '77, and gradnated from that department Jnne, '80. In 1881 he trned his steps Westward in search of a good location for the practice of his profession, and in process of time located in Kansas City, Mo. Applying to the legal authorities of the city for a license to practice, he was snbjected to the severest tests, and even after the ordeal of a second examination, he was continually searched and scrutinized by the "profesion," by freqnent appointments to read papers, etc., on every imaginable topio.

In June, 1884, eighteenth day, he was married to Miss Ella Davis, of Kansas City, herself a gradnate of Lincoln Institute, Missouri, than whom a more gifted, eprightly and lovable girl one ocnld seldom find through the breadth of the land. Bnt now within the period of three and one-half years, the nnseen but resistless hand of death onte asandor the bond of union, bearing the immortal spirit ont and np to the realm of spirits, and dashing the smitten, withered body into the grave.

We can hnt deplore the untimely end of one who was reared with so much oare, and who was reasonably expected to accomplish a nsefnl carecr. It was a sad and eolamn scene at the funeral. A weeping wife and a weeping mother who seemed to feel nnntterable sorrow at the loss of her first horn son. Bnt not the least sad of this sorrowful spectacle was the dear father, lying helpless on his bed in an npper room, and listened with wakeful, loving attention to catch each word, each sentence, every prayer that fell from the lips of the officiating clergy and attending friends. Dr. Derrick, of New York, read the service; Dr. Handy delivered the enlogy; Miss Handy, Miss Patterson and Prof. Layton chanted the pathetic hymn, "It is well with my soul." Prof. Layton sang an ode, and then we hore his dnst away to its mother dust.

THE PUBLICATION OF ANNUAL MINUTES.

It is the onstom of nniversal Methodism to publish the proceedings of the annual conferences in pamphlet form and scatter them throughout the jurisdiction of the same for the information and encouragement of the people. We cannot speak advisedly of other branches, bnt among ns these published minutes have become the official documentary record of the conferences. This form of printing has become a very important item in our annual fiscal statements. We snppose that of our forty-four conferences the annnal minutes average at least $60 each as the cost of printing, or, in the aggrogate, $2,700, and incoinding the cost of distributico, perhaps not less than $3,000. Since our connection with the Book Concern, from constant intercourse with these conferences, we find that a great majority of them are in continual financial embarrassment on accennt of the minutes. We have printed for a nnmber of the conferences and have found, to our own dismay, that very few are prepared to pay for the work. Now, the printing of Methodist minutes, as of all others, is a species of advertisement. It is designed by the diffnsion of information to create enthnsiasm for the work among the ministry and people. Considered in this light, it is a bnsiness matter, pnre and simple. As a mere official record it is of little valne, because that is best contained in the official jonrnal. Hence it seems clear to our mind that mnch of the matter nsually contained in our minntes could be left ont with profit, and great saving in cost as well, while a good deal of nsef nl information could be inserted that would cost far less and still ha of more use toward the end for which they should be made:

It was our purpose to have written at length on this very frnitful snbject, hnt time forbids. Bnt our leading thoughts on the snbject may be condensed into this hrace of sylabi:

1. Each conference keeps its official journal in three parts in lieu of one: (a) Jonrnal of Proceedings; (b) Jonrnal of Statistics; (c) Jonrnal of Finance.

2. Drop from the printed minntes all tables of statistics and finance, give aggregates only, exhibiting increments and losses.

3. Our Publishing House should print all the minntes, and for this purpose each conference could deposit of its funds with the department a snm equivalent to the average cost and then let the Manager be obligated to print promptly all minntes and distribute them per direction of the Publishing Committee of the conference, and then any balance due the Concern or due the conference could be essily adjusted after.

If the conferences should appoint a compiling committee to compile as they are made, to transcribe ohsenre parts, so that all would be ready to transmit immediately after adjonrnment, the minutes of every conference in the connection could be in print twenty days after its close, and in thirty days all would be sold. We commend these suggestione to our brethren. Some, of corse, will oppose and sncer; but we have practically proven the snccess of such an arraagement by our experionce right here on the ground. The Philadolphia Conference, old as she is, had less than $30 for minntes in '84, when we came here, to pay for work oosting $100; now her treasurer has oash to pay on delivery and a snrplus in in hank.

Personal.

—Bishop A. W. Wayman is still in the Southwest.

—Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Derrick attended the funeral of Dr. John M. Brown, Jr.

—Bishop Campbell assisted Bishop Ward in conducting the South Carolina Conference.

—Drs. Tanner and Lee are attending the South Carolina Conference and will visit the East Florida before they return.

—A work on "The Evolution of Episcopacy and Organic Methodism" is in course of preparation by the Rev. T. B. Neely, D.D., of the Philadelphia Conference.

—We had the pleasure of an introduction to Mr J. M Trotter, Recorder of Deeds, of Washington, in that city last week. Mr. Trotter demonstrates his sagacity in making his home with that princely family, the Pattersons.

OUR WOMAN'S COLUMN.

BY CATHRINE CASEY.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Parent Mite Missionary Society of the A. M. E. Church was held in Bethel Parsonage, February 7th. Since our last meeting two of our faithful co-laborers had been taken away and a sadness seemed to pervade the meeting, especially as we were sitting in the home of dear Sister Beckett and within the sound of the voices of her dear little children. Alas! they little know what they have lost. May He "who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," supply a mother's tender faithfulness to these bereaved ones. Words cannot express what I felt as I saw Elder Beckett sitting in his sindy with his little baby on his knee and the other little ones playing about him. If the angels are indeed "ministering spirits" their dear mother might not have been as far off as I thought. The flowers that were sent on the occasion were the most beautiful I have ever seen. One piece was made of sheaves of wheat, bound together with lilies of the valley. This was sent by Mrs. Alice Beckett, of Washington, D. C. The church at Wilmington sent a harp of white rose buds and pinks. Bethel choir sent a wreath, and an exquisite bouquet, which our dear Katie wore upon her breast to the grave, was presented by Mrs. Margaret Jones, of this city. The most beautiful piece in design and workmanship was the offering of Mr. and Mrs John Langford, florist, Thirteenth street, near Grand Depot. It consisted of a dove with outstretched wings, standing upon a crescent with a star of red pinks above it and the whole mounted upon a pedestal made of japonicas and white roses—buds.

Mrs. Lydia Wears was one of the original founders of the Parent Mite Society and for years an active worker in it. The society, therefore, decided to hold a memorial meeting to commemorate the services of these two faithful ones—Sisters Wears and Beckett—and a committee was appointed to make arrangements to see if Allen Chapel could be obtained for this purpose Sunday evening, 26th inst.

The Society decided to consider the matter of sending a delegate to the World's Conference of Foreign Missions to be held in londnn in June.

Mrs. Alice Griffin, of New Haven, Conn., is skilled in all kinds of art work and embroidery. Every Sabbath school in the city ought to have a banner made by this excellent woman. Nothing is more needed in the city of Philadelphia than a Colored Women's Exchange, where each beautiful work as that done by Mrs. Griffin, Miss Addie Campbell and Miss Jones might be put on exhibition.

Cathrine has some names ready for the position of Bishops' wives, but that no one may pay for the start of some she will wait until the names are handed in from the South and the West.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

BY REV. T. G. STEWARD.

Bishop Brown has been sick since last November and is still seriously ill. His disease seems to be a severe form of rheumatism. A few days ago the sad intelligence of the death of his oldest son, John M. Brown, Jr., arrived and this bereavement, added to his own affliction, has rendered the whole family very sad. On Monday last the Preachers' Meeting of this city visited him in a body and had communion with him.

There are now great efforts being made here by the friends of temperance in favor of prohibition in the district. The meetings seem quite enthusiastic and are well attended. Our choir is much in demand to sing for temperance meetings and are highly spoken of on all hands. The one great evil in the way of all religious and moral improvement, is the foolish color line, which seems more definitely drawn here in all social and religious matters than, perhaps, anywhere else in the country. This is probably owing to the fact that there is so little of business and politics to compel the people to associate.

The greatest farce has been played in the efforts at so-called evangelism carried on in the name of the whole city and ignoring one-third of its inhabitants. Those who manage it would like to have the colored people come to Christ, or rather go to him, but they positively object to their coming on that side of Christ where they fancy themselves to be.

The Bethel Literary Society still holds on its way and continues to attract large weekly audiences. Mr.

Graham, ex-secretary of the Senate, read a paper before the society last week dealing with a few interesting facts in American history His paper was a very able one This week J. H. Brooks, Esq., ex-trustee of public schools in this city, read a brief paper and made an address on the history and growth of colored schools in this city

The entertainment given by the literary society on February 3rd was a grand success. About 1,500 persons attended and seemed highly pleased with the exercises, although all regretted the absence of Miss Flora Batson, who was detained by serious illness. Miss Nahia's readings were well received. As an elocutionist she takes very fair rank, evincing a degree of skill that is decidedly commendable.

Rev. J. R. Riley, pastor of the Fifth tsenth Street Presbyterian Church, retires from the pulpit on the last of the present month, and as yet no successor has been announced.

In the attempt to reorganize the Republican party here and send delegates to the National convention the whiskey men and the disorderly elements seem to have had it all their own way.

Mud, mud, mud is the general report from all the snrrounding country. Rev C. W. Fitzhugh, at St. Paul's; Arthur Jones, at Garfield; C. H. Robinson, at Hillsdale; J. W. Bowser, of George town, and Christ. Jones all report their work as progressing favorably. Rev. J H. A. Johnson speaks especially well of some parts of his work, but not so well of others. He is carrying opposition ment and he is entitled to the sympathy and snpport of all the brethren in his effort to do good and glorify the Master

The Metropolitan still drives on. Our congregations fell off during the severe weather in consequence of the fallure of the furnaces to comfortably heat the building. Since then the heaters have been overhauled and they are now doing much better and the congregation is returning. Pray for us that the Lord's cause may still prosper in our hands We have now in the church twelve good classes, two having been formed since I have been here, and they are doing well. This church has now the outlines of a magnificent work for God and humanity in its hands, and if it can be sustained nntil it acquires sufficient strength to fill up these outlines, it will stand for us a monument by which we may point with congratnlation and pride.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

BY REV. J. M. HENDERSON.

To the consideration of General Conference delegates I wish to submit a plan for creating a church extension fund, which will be proposed at the coming conference. This is a day of dollars and cents, and a day in which no enterprise, ecclesiastical or secular, can succeed without money. Money is plenty and can be had if sought intelligently and with zeal. A fund of nearly $100,000 can be in our hands for the purpose of church extension by four years from now. But methods up to the times must be adopted.

Some months ago before our church here was completed, we proposed certain additional improvements which would cost about $1,000; one old brother said we could not raise the money; another, that the additional expense was needless; still another objected to the fair which was proposed as the means of raising the money, saying it was a worldly method, and that it would bring church people and worldly people into too close contact, as many who would be needed to help in the fair were nnconverted persons. This same brother has honest scrnples against the use of snbscription books, pin cards, etc. His idea is that the church should get on with the sums paid by its members. To the improvements adopted he subscribed $1. In the sum of $2,700 raised a few weeks before he had given $1, which he paid in installments We held the fair and cleared $916.40, gained several members and now are in the midst of a glorious revival. The honest brother said to me a few days ago, "Bro. Henderson, you were right, but the world does change so I can't keep track of it. I never dreamed such work could be done, and all the time the fair was going on I was praying for you, for I feared it would result badly, but I guess things are different now-a-days." Had this dear and truly good brother and his like been ascendant in our society, we would still be worshiping in the rickety old chapel of one year ago instead of the beautiful church. Were it not for Bishop Payne and his kind, our pnlpits would still be filled by ignorant anecdote-mongers, dream-tellers, etc; were it not for Bishop Brown and others we would still be groping along in the by-paths of fifty years ago as to our method of worship; were it not for Arnett, Embry, Shaffer and others, we would still be limping on from hand to mouth in the scant efforts of a financial nature we now make; were it not for Tanner, Lee, Smith and others our Church would to-day be unknown to the literary world, and the loud-voiced, strong-lnnged enthusiast would rule instead of thoughtful men. Were it not for the Recorder we would never hear from such truly great thinkers as Dr. Johnson, etc. As it is, though all do not agree with their ideas, they do not meet the encouragement due to them, nor do all show the editor that gratitude due him for his fair and judicious presentation of matter to his readers. But I thank God that men are raised up who are not afraid to drop old notions and methods in the face of new facts and necessities.

To raise a fund for church extension, let a board be appointed with instructions to incorporate. Let stock be issued at $25.00 per share Let these shares be placed in the hands of the Bishops. At the first annual conferences following the General Conference, let each preacher holding a charge with less than 100 members, be required to take two shares, those with charges with between 100 and 300 take four shares, all over 400 take eight shares. Let each society be required to take from two to eight shares according to the same rule of membership. Make the pastor responsible for the raising of the money. Let each local preacher before receiving his license be required to take one share. Each snbsequent year until the ensuing General Conference, let an assessment of 50 cents be collected on each share. Let all this be compulsory, even if several hundred preachers, itinerant and local, are lost; the churches will comply if proper men are sent to them Let each party holding shares in the fund to the sum of $100 or each share for a period of not more than five years upon safe security; also let a certain proportion be given to missions, etc., upon proper recommendation from the presiding elder and bishop.

The following table shows the figures, the allowance being made for several thousands of delinquent locals. Not being able without great labor to classify church memberships, we reckon each church at two shares each:

2,500 pastors, 2 shares, at $2.50	$12,500 00
2,500 societies, 2 shares, "2.50	12,500 00
7,000 local preachers, 1 share each	17,500 00
10 Bishops, 20 shares each	500 00
8 General Officers, 20 each	320 00
100 presiding elders, 2 shares each	5 0 00
Total first year	$55,750 00
Interest for one year	3,902 50
Annual assessments:
Pastors	2,500 00
Societies	2,500 00
Local preachers	3,500 00
Total second year	$68,152 50
Interest	4,770 67
Assessments	3,500 00
Total third year	$81,423 17
Interest	5,699 23
Assessments	3,500 00
Total fourth year	$90,722 40

This can he realized without interference with any established interests So confident am I of its practibility that I would not fear to contract, under adequate bonds, to place at least $90,000 to the credit of the Church in four years, if this plan is adopted and faithfully cooperated with by the Bishops. Further more, I would be willing to advance any sum between $1 000 and $5,000 in establishing such a department. Brethren, you have the plan, if you see improvements to it would be pleased to receive suggestions, or to see your plan offered and adopted at General Conference. A letter addressed to St. Paul will reach me.

DR. SMITH'S VERDICT AGAINST THE STATUS QUO OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

I am again compelled to state, through the columns of the RECORDER, in defence of the present status quo of the A. M. E. Church, that I shall request the learned doctor at the proper time and place among the many things which he intends to prove, I shall desire him to prove the following:

First. To prove to the satisfaction of the Bishops, the clergy and lay delegates at the coming General Conference upon what churchly and Christian grounds he could plead justification for committing the Church which he professes to love to the throes of a violent revolution, as he well knows the consequences of disturbing the ancient landmarks and the wisdom in letting well alone.

Second. To prove that the General Conference of a Christian Church is bound by the legal quibble, the mere ex parte statements in a civil court in Canada, to repudiate its Tenth Episcopal District, to place it, a la Rome, under a ban, to interdict it and excommunicate, yes, on that legal quibble, one of the only authorized Bishops of the A. M. E Church. Dr. Smith must know the history of that ex parte statement and the disingenuousness of using so ignoble a weapon in a question of such gravity to our branch of Christ's Church.

Third. To place beyond a legal doubt that any such failure to observe and fulfill the condition of the third article of agreement can render the organic union of two such Churches, after it has been an accomplished fact for four years, null and void at this late period, foisting into the articles of union, as he is attempting to do. The terms were that upon any plan being afterwards discovered the innocent party could dissolve the union after it has been consummated one, two, three or four years. But such option is not even granted in civil matters without original and expressed stipulation How many men have not entered into partnership in firms supposed to be strong and have had to meet the liabilities of bankruptcy. Can so much more exalted a sphere as that of Christ's Church fall below the moral code of honor riadily observed in civil contracts? The good doctor is in grave error, however delightfully complacent he might feel to make the A. M. E Church pose like the irresponsible autocrat of all the Russias against itself and to hold it a matter of common sense and decency for her to raise such an issue and cut her own throat.

Fourth. To show it comports with the growth and prosperity of the Church and the advancement of Christ's kingdom for the A. M. E. Church to rend herself into two factions, made hostile by a rnptnre for snch trifles and unworthy of her high calling, and why the stronger party should, like a violent mob, take advantage of its superior strength to hurl the weaker party into disgrace of compulsory exile. They say they do such things among the people to whom we are sending missionaries; hnt why should not our conduct be held worse, if, after wooing the then B. M. E. Church into wedlock, we turn round and repudiate her after being an integral part of ourselves? The doctor knows, as any other Christian gentleman, how extremely shabby it would seem to court with ardor and then kick with hate. Could the A. M. E. Church so act against herself?

Fifth. To explain satisfactorily to the General Conference how a question of mere civil law could so vitally affect the basis of a union consummated for reasons superior to common law, commanded much the higher platform of homogeneousness in origin, in traditions of sorrow and sufferings, in church genius, in doctrines, constitntions, in customs, in objects Must the natural basis of union count for nothing because of a legal figment.

Sixth. To fairly show how the desperate remedy in the overthrow of the union could be the only course open to the A. M. E. Church. Dr. Smith must know that the very act that admitted Bishop R. R. Disney into our episcopate subjects him for misdemeanor proved against him to our Discipline, and that the true manly course to be pursued by Dr Smith and his compact or party is to formulate a charge against him before the proper Church tribunal

Seventh. To show the justice, leaving out the charity, of indicting, trying, condemning Bishop Disney; gloating over his remains without granting him the privilege which even civil tribunals allow the meanest subject, of a trial by his peers. The doctor, a man of his wide culture, knows that he has placed himself before the world, at least through the RECORDER, as plaintiff, juror, judge, executor of Bishop Disney. That if such is a fair case of malice prepense, he places himself thereby out of court.

Eight. To show the exclusion of the Demarara Conference from the articles of union, how there belng no part to it harmonizes in all conscience with the fears that now torment the good doctor that they are prepared to send delegates to the General Conference, and with the pains and penalties, as if he were the A. M E. Church, which he finds it expedient to hold in terrorem over their delegates should they send any. The doctor knows what the Lord meant at "straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel," and the great men to whom our Master charged the fault. It were a contradiction in terms for Bishop Disney to have failed in consulting the Demarara Conference on their wishes for union and for the same conference to be now Dr. Smith's alarm. Sending delegates to the General Conference, they must have been consulted.

Ninth. To justify his presnmption as a minister having the spirit of Christ in hurling defiance against innocent and unoffending delegates whose cara no proclamation of the then A. M. E Church counted to that which announced the union to be an accomplished fact.

Tenth. To prove that personal hostility toward Bishop Disney on the part of certain parties did not somewhat turn the tide against the spirit of the union in course and check its development after its formal acceptance.

W. B. DERRICK.

IN MEMORY OF DR. JOHN M. BROWN.

BY MISS SOPHIE A. BRODIE.

"The good die first; and those whose hearts are dry as summer dust burn to the socket."

Truly the good die first. Those who are best fited for God's kingdom He calls first. Death has entered the family of our beloved Bishop John M. Brown, and has taken from the family circle a loved son and brother. The golden chain has been broken and a link has been severed and transferred to heaven to be joined to the loved ones gone before. As the chain decreases here, it increases in the home above. One by one the loved ones pass over to the other side, and we have a strong hope and an assurance that in God's kingdom we will be joined never to be broken. Oh, what a beautiful thought that we shall meet never to be separated; that in the fields of glory we shall be together forever and forever, we shall know each other there and shall worship God eternally.

Dr Brown was one whom we all loved. I have known him for ten years, and during that time I loved him as a brother, for such he seemed to me. He was always kind, gentle and loving; he had a smile and kind word for every one. The rich, the poor, the old, the young, all were treated kindly by him. In his father's family all looked up to John; they loved him with an intense love. Next to father and mother, John was the one to go to for advice. In sorrow or in joy he had to share a part—he would comfort in sorrow and rejoice in joy with them.

His sister and I have, since our first meeting, been intimate friends, and I have almost been as one of the family. There has sprung up between us a strong devotion; we have spent many happy and pleasant days together. I remember well many pleasant incidents which took place during our days and years of friendship. We have studied together, and many an evening after studying would sit and wait for John —who was a medical student at that time— to come home so to as have a talk with him, either about our lessons or on some topic of interest. He always took a philosophic view of things, for whatever thing we could not exactly understand. At other times he would say to us, "Come, Mame and Sophie, let us go and have some music." then we would go into the parlor and sing and play a piece after piece; soon father, mother and other members of the family would come in and the evening would be enjoyed by all. "Every day and hour," one of Sankey and Moody's hymns, was his favorite, and especially the last stanza:

"Let me love Thee more and more,
Tilt this fleeting, fleeting life is o'er;
Till my soul is lost in love,
In a brighter, brighter world above."

"Flee as a bird to the mountain" was another favorite of his. His thoughts always seemed to dwell on religious things. Often he would say, "When you get there I'll be there." Yes, he is there. "He is not dead, bnt sleepeth."

Seldom do we find a son so devoted to home and mother as was Dr Brown. One year ago he wrote a most beautiful letter to his father and mother, the occasion being the thirty-fifth anniversary of their married life, and as it was their pearl wedding, he sent his mother a pearl card case. Among the other beautiful and noble thoughts expressed in the letter was this, "I hope not one of your children will cause one hair to turn gray that should be black, and not one wrinkle to come upon your cheeks," and in addressing his mother, he said, "You, mother, are my pearl, my princess, my beautiful mother." Such expressions show the love, the devotion, the respect he had for his parents. He loved his sisters and brothers with an equal share of love.

How Dr. Brown was loved and respected in the community in which he was reared has been shown by the hnndreds of friends who have called to sympathize with the family. How he was loved by those away from home has been shown by the many letters and telegrame of condolence received by the family. Telegrams were received from Bishop Campbell, Drs. Lee and Tanner, etc. Letters have been received from Bishop Campbell and wife, Dr Derrick, Rev. G. W. Brodie, Mrs. Bishop Turner, Mr. W. H. Gibson, Mr. R. S. Smith and many others that space will not allow me to name. From all parts of the country the friends condole and sympathize with the bereaved family. All have had loving words to say about John, for all loved him.

Dr. Brown fell asleep in Kansas City, Mo., Saturday, February 14th, at 2:30 A. M. When dying he said to his wife, as he lay in her arms, "Pet, I am dying; it is getting so dark and I am growing cold." His wife did not want to believe he was dying. Soon he said, "Tell all good-bys for me and tell them to meet me in heaven." Yes, John is at rest.

A few days before he died he went to spend a day with his brother, Prof. Wm. L. Brown, and, when coming from him, he said, "Will, will any one at the Beautiful gates be watching and waiting for me?" His brother said, "Yes, grandma will be there and other members of the family will be there." Little did that brother think that John would soon be there. Oh, what a meeting there was at the beautiful gate when Dr. John Brown got there. His body was brought home for interment, accompanied by his wife and brother.

On Thursday, February 9th, at 1 P. M., his body was borne home to its last resting place. The services were conducted by Revs. Derrick, Handy and Embry. A quartette from the Metropoll an Church choir, under the direction of Prof. J. T. Layton, furnished the music, and Dr. Brown's favorite hymns were sang. There was not a dry eye in the room, as affecting was the occasion and so deeply did all feel the loss. His father was and is still prostrated upon a bed of affliction and was not able to attend the services; hnt God is with him and he is bearing the loss with a calm resignation to God's will. Rev. D. F. Brown came on to attend the funeral. May we all so live that when it comes our time to go, we can calmly lie down and say, all is well, meet me in heaven. The family has my deepest sympathy. May God sustain and keep them in this hour of sore trial and sad bereavement.

THE WILBERFORCE REVIVAL.

There has just closed the most remarkable revival ever witnessed at this University. As the Week of Prayer, which has always been observed here, drew to an end, a spiritual concern was manifested by two or three young ladies and a service of prayer and of song was held at their rooms by their companions. The Sabbath following, in answer to an earnest appeal hy Dr. Jackson, these went forward. The ensuing week brought a few additional seekers and several converts. The next week saw the work growing in intensity and result

The Faculty designated Friday, January 20, as a day for fasting and prayer. Begining at 7 o'clock in the morning, with preaching at 11, at. 3 and at 7 o'clock, and with praise and prayer-meetings and private devotions occupying the intervals. There was experienced such a visitation of the Holy Spirit as must have thrilled the disciples on the day of Pentecost. During the snbsequent week it reached a glorious culmination. For two days recitations were suspended. The entire Christian body of school and community gave themselves wholly to the work. Students and citizens who had passed through previous revivals, went down in tears and penitence. The Y. M. C. A. was especially active, holding a noon service daily and rendering efficient organized aid. The series of meetings ended, forty have been converted, fifty-two added to the Church and a proportion of more than ninety-eight per cent. of the students are professed Christians—only two are ontside of the fold. It is the highest percentage of Christian believers the University has ever recorded.

Wilberforce, Ohio.

We are just receiving from the binder a fresh lot of Hymn Books in cloth, sheep, roan and gilt, and, as business is dnll just at this season, and we have some stiff bills to meet in February and March, we have resolved to offer churches, choirs and presiding elders this new lot of six hnndred copies at a great reduction from regular rates for the next sixty days. One dozen cloth bound for $7.20; one dozen sheep bound for $8.40; one dozen roan (black), for $9 60; six extra roan gilt for $7.00, and a corresponding reduction on morocco of any class. Now, please send on your orders at once. Do not wait until they are all gone, and then complain that we cease selling at the same rate. Remember, there are only 600 copies at this rate, and the first that come will be the first served.

Remember, also, that we sell the People's Hymn Book, a small, cheap, excellent work, collected by Mr. S. B. Scheiffelin. It contains tnnes of standard excellence on the opposite page. Only 20 and 25 cents per copy But we must tell you that the best selling song book we have had for two years or more is the little gem called "Sought Out Songs," by Rev. A. B. Earle, of Boston. This book contains the famous "Lily of the Valley," and other lively tunes and hymns that stir the multitudes into a glow. Send in your orders. Only 30 cents per copy; 5 cents extra by mail.

Finally, we call attention to this paper. We have been late "to press" the past two weeks, and we come a little late still, this week, but with all this we snbmit that we are handsomer and handier than ever we have been. We are clipped and pasted, we are lighter weight and finer paper than ever before. One drawback only is worthy of note. Having changed our printer, our new pressman has not, for want of skill or time, been able to give us a clear page as we have been accustomed to show our readers hitherto. In appreciation of all we have tried to do for the convenience and pleasnre of our patrons, will not our patrons help us a little by securing for the paper at least one cash subscriber for '88?

To the Pastors and Superintendents of our Churches and Sunday Schools:

Dear Brethren—Our programme for Easter, "Missionary Day," are ready. We desire to supply every church free of charge. Please send at once for the nnmber you need. Let us begin in time.

Address,

NOTICE AND REQUEST TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS OF CENTRAL AND WEST TEXAS CONFERENCES:

You will remember that the conferences appointed me to take the names and money for the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. This was done on the last day of the session when we were all pushing to get through and be at home for Christmas so we neglected to call the roll for the RECORDER. The presiding elders will please collect from each pastor on his district the sum of $1 50. Send the money and address to Rev. J. C. Embry, 1531 Pine St., Philadelphia, Pa. By doing so, you will save collecting at the next annual conference $3.00. Where the brethren have sent on and paid for the paper, as I am going to do to-day, of course you will not collect. This will be shown by receipts from Manager Embry.

Yours, faithfully,

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. FAOE, Watertown, Mass.

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, lifeless, and tired all the time? Are you nervous, physically and mentally? experience a sense of fullness or bloating after eating, or of "goneness," or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nervous prostration or exhaustion, irritability of temper, hot flushes, alternating with chilly sensations, sharp pains, transient pains here and there, cold feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from the most common of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. In its more complicated form your disease has become, the greater the number of symptoms present, the more subtle and far reaching the poison in the blood. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY will subdue it if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time, though in such complicated cases as Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Disease, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in, and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and healing their diseased action. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has gained great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred troubles.

BILIOUS ATTACK.

DAVID G. LOWE, Esq., of St. Agathe, Manitoba, Canada, says: "Being troubled with a terrible bilious attack, fluttering of the heart, poor rest at night, etc., I commenced the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and derived the very highest benefit therefrom."

LIVER DISEASE.

Mrs. I. V. WEBBER, of Yorkshire, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "For five years previous to using 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' I was a great sufferer; had a severe pain in my right side continually; was unable to do my own work. I am now well and strong."

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and bodily health and vigor will be established.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY cures all humors, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating remedy. Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Virulent blood-poisons are, by its use, robbed of their terror. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, "White Swellings," Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

SALT-RHEUM AND RHEUMATISM.

"COLUMBUS, OHIO, APR. 18th, 1887.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen—For several years I have felt it to be my duty to give to you the facts in relation to the complete cure of a most aggravated case of salt-rheum, by the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' An elderly lady relative of mine had been a great sufferer from salt-rheum for upwards of forty years. The disease was most distressing in her hands, causing the skin to crack open on the inside of the fingers at the joints and between the fingers. She was entirely unable to use the raw places by means of adhesive plasters, salves, ointments and bandages, and during the winter months had to have her hands dressed daily. The pain was quite severe at times and her general health was badly affected, paving the way for other diseases to creep in. Catarrh also troubled her, caused a great flow of mucus in addition to the salt-rheum. She had used faithfully, and with the most commendable perseverance, all the remedies prescribed by her physicians, but without obtaining relief. She afterwards began treating herself by drinking teas made from blood-purifying roots and herbs. She continued this for several years but derived no benefit. Finally, about ten years ago, I chanced to read one of Dr. Pierce's pamphlets setting forth the merits of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and other medicines. The name struck me fancy, and seeing that it was essentially a blood-purifier, I immediately recommended it to the old lady who had been so long a sufferer from salt-rheum. She commenced taking it at once, and took one bottle, but seemed to be no better. However, I realized that it would take time for any medicine to effect a change for the better in such a case, and therefore purchased and forwarded a half-dozen bottles, and before these had all been used she began to notice an improvement. After taking about a dozen bottles she was entirely cured. Her hands were perfectly well and as smooth and healthy as a child's. Her general health was also greatly improved; the rheumatism entirely left her, and the catarrh was almost cured, so that it ceased to be much annoyance. She has enjoyed excellent health from that day to this, and has had no return of either salt-rheum or rheumatism. The 'Discovery' seems to have entirely eradicated the salt-rheum from her system. She is now over eighty years old, and is hale and hearty for one of her years ago.

I have written this letter, of which you can make any use you see fit, hoping that some sufferer from salt-rheum might chance to read it and obtain relief by using your 'Golden Medical Discovery'—for 'Golden' it is in its curative properties, and as much above scalously flaunted before the public as gold is above the baser metals.

Respectfully yours,

F. W. WHEELER, 182 21st St."

CONSUMPTION, WEAK LUNGS, SPITTING OF BLOOD.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest Coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

CONSUMPTION.

SOLOMON BUTTS, of North Clayton, Miami Co., Ohio, writes: "I have not the words to express my gratitude for the good your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has done my wife. She was taken with consumption, and after trying one doctor after another I finally gave up all hopes of her recovery, being very poor and having but one dollar in the world. I prayed to God that he might show me something; and then it seems as though something told me to get your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I did so, my wife took it as directed, and as a result she is so she can work now."

COUGH OF FIVE YEARS' STANDING.

Mrs. N. W. RICE, of Newfane, Vermont, says: "I feel at liberty to acknowledge the benefit I received from two bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which cured a cough of five years' standing, and dyspepsia, from which I had suffered for a long time. I have also used Dr. Pierce's Extract of Smart-Weed, or Water Pepper, in my family, with good effect."

GAINED 25 POUNDS.

Consumption Disease.—WATSON F. CLARKE, Esq., of Box 100, Summerside, Prince Edward Island, Can., writes: "When I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I was so sick I could work and was a burden to my wife. At that time I weighed 125 pounds, and to-day I weigh 147 pounds. Then I used to eat about one meal a day, and now can eat four or five if I dared to."

WORTH $1000 A BOTTLE.

W. R. DAVIS, Esq., of Belleville, Florida., writes: "I have taken your wonderful 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and have been cured of consumption. I am now sound and well, and have only spent three dollars, and I would not take three thousand dollars and be put back where I was."

Discovery $1.00, Six Bottles for $5.00; by Druggists.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:—

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

ASTHMA.

A young man taken down with asthma was very much frightened, and went to the best physician in the place and stated his symptoms, and in great suspense awaited the response. After several questions, the answer was: "Long life and ill health. Your disease is asthma." The first clause of the physician's answer comforted the young man, who feared death was near. But the second clause, given after waiting a little while, depressed his spirits to nearly as low a point as he had reached when he entered the doctor's office. This consultation was held before the discovery of our Compound Oxygen. By its use multitudes of sufferers have been cured. A monograph giving reports of cases of asthma, and our brochure, "Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," of two hundred pages, can be had on application either in person or at our office. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia Pa.

No other spring medicine has won for itself such universal confidence as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the most powerful combination of vegetable alteratives ever offered to the public, and is acknowledged by the medical profession to be the best blood purifier.

A visitor to Ireland was bidding farewell, and said to an attendant: "Good-by, yer honor. May God bless yon, and may every hair in your head be a candle to light your soul to glory." "Well, Pat," he said, showing him a bald pate, "when that time comes there won't be much of a torchlight procession.

A book containing statements of cures accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla will be sent to any desiring it who send address to C. I. Hood & Co, Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

"Did it rain!" exclaimed the Western man in the course of a thrilling recital of border life. "Say, it rained so hard that afternoon that the water stood three feet on a slant roof."

DESERVING OF CONFIDENCE—There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering from Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs, and Colds should try them. They are universally considered superior to all other articles used for similar purposes. The late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher said of them: "I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first, except I think yet better of that which I began by thinking well of. I have also commended them to friends, and they have proved extremely serviceable."

Whether by land or sea, who are liable to be out of reach of drug stores and doctors, would do well to have a supply of Ayer's Pills at hand. For this purpose, the Pills are put up in bottles as well as boxes, and may be conveniently carried in one's pocket. Six of the most distinguished physicians of Syracuse, N. Y., in giving their joint testimony as to the excellent medical combination of Ayer's Pills, make this point: "Their beautiful coating of gelatine and sugar is a great advantage, in that it protects them from change by time or climate, and renders them pleasant and even agreeable to take."

"During the twenty-five years I have lived on the frontier," writes John McDowall, of Sweetwater, Col., "Ayer's Pills have been my best friend. I have lived, mostly, where there was no doctor within twenty miles, and have been hard sick several times. I always kept Ayer's medicines on hand, and with them, and the Almanac, have pulled through. I have also doctored others, and believe I have saved some valuable lives by the use of Ayer's Pills."

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame." —Civil Service Gazette.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

LESSON HELPS IN FOUR GRADES.

THE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY. A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson helps for teachers and older scholars. Its value is enhanced by the introduction of appropriate forms for opening and closing exercises, hymns and tunes, maps, dictionary of proper names, etc.

THE SCHOLAR'S QUARTERLY. Similar to the above, but with such necessary changes as adapt it to the wants of scholars in the main school. It is marvelously cheap. Five or more copies to one address, per year, 7 cents each.

THE JUVENILE LESSON PAPER is a four page weekly, designed for younger scholars who have outgrown the infant class, but who retain their fondness for pictures and simple stories. 208 pages for a dime!

THE GEM LESSON PAPER is a beautiful lesson sheet, four pages handsomely illustrated and printed on pink paper; for primary or infant scholars. Each number contains, besides the lesson, a page or more of "baby-land" talk. All for 6 cents a year, where five or more copies are sent to one address

THE CHILD'S RECORDER, now beginning its eighth volume with a larger issue than ever before, offers superior attractions for the coming year. With additional editorial force, and a list of regular contributors skilled in the style of writing required by the young no pains will be spared to put this publication abreast with the foremost of its class.

ASTHMA.

A young man taken down with asthma was very much frightened, and went to the best physician in the place and stated his symptoms, and in great suspense awaited the response. After several questions, the answer was: "Long life and good health. Your disease is asthma." The first clause of the physician's answer comforted the young man, who feared death was near. But the second clause, given after waiting a little while, depressed his spirits to nearly as low a point as he had reached when he entered the doctor's office. This constitution was held before the discovery of our Compound Oxygen. By its use multitudes of sufferers have been cured. A monograph giving reports of cases of asthma, and our brochure, "Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," of two hundred pages, can be had on application either in person or at our office. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia Pa.

Lady (to dog clerk): "A two cent stamp, please." Clerk (absent-minded); "Yes ma'dam. Will you take it with you or have it sent"

No other spring medicine has won for itself such universal confidence as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the most powerful combination of vegetable alteratives ever offered to the public, and is acknowledged by the medical profession to be the best blood purifier.

A visitor to Ireland was bidding farewell, and said to an attendant: "Goodby, yer honor. May God bless you, and may every hair in your head be a candle to light yer soul to glory." "Well, Pat," the observing him a bald pate, "when that time comes there won't be much of a torchlight procession.

A book containing statements of cures accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla will be sent to any desiring it who send address to C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

"Did it relief" exclaimed the Western man in the course of a thrilling recital of horder life. "Sey, it reised so hard that sitteroom that the water stood three feet on a slant roof."

DESERVING OF CONFIDENCE—There is no article which so richly deserves the entire confidence of the community as BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. Those suffering form Asthmatic and Bronchial Diseases, Coughs, and Colds should try them. They are universally considered superior to all other articles used for similar purposes. The late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher said of them: "I have never changed my mind respecting them from the first, except I think yet better of that which I began by thinking well of. I have also commended them to friends, and they have proved extremely serviceable."

THE CENTENNIAL OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

LAST CALL.

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do so at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing in same.

Brethren will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairmen of General Committee.

What Scott's Emulsion Has Done!

Over 25 Pounds Gain in Ten Weeks. Experience of a Prominent Citizen.

THE CALIFORNIA SOCIETY FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 7th, 1886.

I took a severe cold upon my chest and lungs and did not give it proper attention; it developed into bronchitis, and in the fall of the same year I was threatened with consumption. Physicians ordered me to a more congenial climate, and I came to San Francisco. Soon after my arrival I commenced taking Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites regularly three times a day. In ten weeks my avoirdupois went from 155 to 180 pounds and over; the cough meantime ceased. C. R. BENNETT

ANNUAL CONFERENCE NOTICE.

To the North Louisiana Conference, A. M. E. Church:

All candidates for admission in the itinerancy in the North Louisiana Conference and all students for first, second and third years' classes, must put in an appearance at Shreveport, La., on Tuesday morning, January 24th, 1888 for examination as the committees all will be positively instructed not to examine any one after that day. All the respective committees must also be present on same day, else others will be substituted. The conference will meet Wednesday, January 25th 1888, and reports must be ready on first day.

By order of Bishop Wayman.

J. W. RANKINS, Secretary.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION NOTICE.

The Quarterlies and the Lesson Papers for the fourth quarter are now ready for distribution. Patrons will please send their orders without delay. All Sunday school supplies must be paid for in advance. Address

Rev. C. S. SMITH,

Nashville, Tenn.

The Friends' Review remarks editorially: On a smaller scale, the desperate wickedness of the human heart of which Ware comes (James iv. 1, 2), is just now being brought to light, at the border between Kentucky and West Virginia; where, for more than twenty years, a "vendetta" has been going on between two families and their adherents, killing one another at sight. Is there anything more barbarous among heathen tribes in the centre of Africa?

CATARRH IN THE HEAD.

SYMPTOMS OF THE DISEASE.—Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, a thorough inflation of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a "nasal twang"; the breath is offensive; smell and taste impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a backing cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians.

COMMON SENSE TREATMENT.

If you would remove an evil, strike at its root. As the predisposing or real cause of catarrh is, in the majority of cases, some weakness, impurity, or otherwise faulty condition of the system, in attempting to cure the disease our first aim must be directed to the removal of that cause. The more we see of this odious disease, and we treat successfully thousands of cases annually at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, the more do we realize the importance of combining with the use of a local, soothing and healing application, a thorough and persistent internal use of blood-cleansing and tonic medicines.

CHIEF RELIANCE.

In curing catarrh and all the various diseases with which it is so frequently complicated, as throat, bronchial, and lung diseases, weak stomach, catarrhal deafness, weak or inflamed eyes, impure blood, scrofulous and syphilitic taints, the wonderful powers and virtues of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cannot be too strongly extolled. It has a specific effect upon the lining mucous membranes of the nasal and other air-passages, promoting the healthy secretion of their follicles and glands, thereby softening the diseased and thickened membrane, and restoring it to its natural, thin, delicate, moist, healthy condition. As a blood-purifier, it is unsurpassed. As those diseases which complicate catarrhal diseases of the lining mucous membranes, or of the blood, it will readily be seen why this medicine is so well calculated to cure them.

LOCAL AGENT.

As a local application for healing the diseased condition in the head, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is beyond all comparison the best preparation ever invented. It is mild and pleasant to use, producing no smarting or pain, and containing no strong, irritating, or caustic drug, or other poison. This Remedy is a powerful antiseptic, and speedily destroys all bad smell which accompanies so many cases of catarrh, thus affording great comfort to those who suffer from this disease.

PERMANENT CURES.

The Golden Medical Discovery is the natural "helpmate" of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It not only cleanses, purifies, regulates, and builds up the system to a healthy standard, and conquers throat, bronchial, and lung complications, but when any scrofulous taint is present, its specific effects upon the lining membrane of the nasal passages, it aids materially in restoring the diseased, thickened, or ulcerated membrane to a healthy condition, and thus eradicates the disease. When a cure is effected in this manner it is permanent.

Both Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are sold by druggists the world over. Discovery $1.00, six bottles for $5.00. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy 50 cents; half-dozen bottles $2.50.

A complete Treatise on Catarrh, giving valuable hints as to cleanliness, diet, and other matters of importance, will be mailed, post-paid to any address, on receipt of a 2-cent postage stamp.

Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE.—TARRANT'S Effervescent Seltzer Aperient is the safest and most reliable remedy for Sick Headache, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Liver Complaints and Constipation. Recommended by physicians and sold by druggists everywhere.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

LITERATURE presents, weekly, a comprehensive survey of the entire literary world, from the standpoint of the interest of American readers of books. Its many unique features can not be adequately described in these few lines. A specimen copy—free—will best tell the story. It will be one of the most characteristic and "lively" products of the Literary Revolution. Biographies, with portraits of notable characters; select readings from new books, including specimens of choice illustrations of the world; criticism; anecdotes; gossip—whatever interests readers of books—will fill its 1200 or more handsome pages. It will be not simply worth more than its cost to any lover of good books, but also the means of saving subscribers many times its cost in the reduced prices of the books they buy. Address JOHN B. Any information concerning them will be most higly appreciated. by W. C. Martin, 503½ D street N.W., Washington, D. C.

INFORMATION WANTED OF MY FAther or his people, and my mother's people. My father's name was James Clark; he belonged to Dr. Thomas McCullough, Abingdon, Va. He married Elizabeth Sidney Trigg, who was raised by Judge Cooly F. Trigg, of Abingdon, Va., but was owned by Judge J. P. White, who bought her from John L. Coleman, and was afterwards brought to Sparta, Guadalupe Co., Texas. The information I want is of my father or my father's people; my mother

THE CENTENNIAL OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

LAST CALL.

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do so at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing the same.

Brethren will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairmen of General Committee.

BETTER THAN EVER.

LESSON HELPS FOR 1888.

The Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church is prepared to furnish the best series of Lesson Helps that can be obtained. We have received testimonials from scores of our most prominent Sunday school workers endorsing and emphesizing the high quality of our periodicals. Our aim is to do the very best we can to meet the demands of our Sunday schools. A full list of our periodicals and their prices, will be found on another page of this paper. As we are the only authorized publishers of lesson helps for A. M. E. Sunday schools, we expect to receive that patronage which respect for law and denominational interests demand. Samples and price lists sent free on application Address.

REV. C. S. SMITH,
Nashville Tenn.

NOTICE.

All communications intended for the Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church that are addressed to Rev. C. S Smith, Nashville, Tennessee, will be received. It is not necessary to give the name of the street nor the number of our business place. Rev. C. S. Smith, Nashville, Tenn., is sufficient. Telegrams addressed the same way will reach us. We are fully settled in our new headquarters and prepared for business.

C. S. SMITH, Secretary.

To the Pastors and Superintendents of our Churches and Sunday Schools:

Dear Brethren—Our programme for Easter, "Missionary Day," are ready. We desire to supply every church free of charge. Please send at once and the number you need. Let us begin in time.

AN ARMY OF bright women are now using JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE, the BEST washing compound ever made.

Better than soap—better results—saves the rubbing and wear—economical.

Be bright yourself, and try this modern way of washing and cleaning.

Every grocer has PEARLINE. Avoid dangerous imitations.

JAMES PYLE, New York.

"Used Up,"

"Tired Out," "No Energy," and similar expressions, whenever heard, indicate a lack of vital force, which, if not remedied in time, may lead to complete physical and nervous prostration. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine to vitalize the blood, build up the tissues, and make the weak strong.

"For nearly three months I was confined to the house. One of the most celebrated physicians of Philadelphia failed to discover the cause of my trouble or afford relief. I continued in a bad way until about a month ago when I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It acted like a charm. I have gained flesh and strength and feel ever so much better. Shall continue using the Sarsaparilla until completely cured."—John V. Craven, Salem, N. J.

"I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla to be an admirable remedy for the cure of blood diseases. I prescribe it, and it does the work every time."—E. L. Pater, M. D., Manhattan, Kansas.

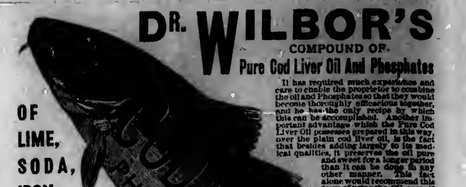
COMPOUND OF
Pure Cod Liver Oil And Phosphates
OF LIME, SODA, IRON.



CURES
CONSUMPTION,

BRONCHITIS, DEBILITY,
WASTING DISEASES, and all
SCROFULOUS HUMORS.

It has required much expenditure and care to enable the proprietor to combine the oil and phosphates so that they would become thoroughly efficacious together, and he has the only recipe by which this can be accomplished. Another important advantage which Dr. Wilbor's Cod Liver Oil possesses prepared in this way, over the plain cod liver oil, is the fact that besides adding largely to its medical qualities, it preserves the oil pure and sweet for a longer period than it can be done in any other manner. This fact alone would recommend this form of using the Oil even if the phosphates did not also add vastly to the healing qualities of the compound. The perfect incorporation of these ingredients with the cod liver oil has only been accomplished by the adoption of the most perfect mills of modern times and a medicine has been produced which, while it is a specific remedy, is also perfectly palatable and pleasant.

Almost as palatable as cream. It can be taken with pleasure by delicate persons and children, who, after using it, become very fond of it. It assimilates with the food, increases the flesh and appetite, builds up the nervous system, restores energy to mind and body, creates new, rich and pure blood, in fact, rejuvinates the whole system.

FLESH. NERVE. BLOOD. BRAIN.

This preparation is far superior to all other preparations of Cod-Liver Oil; it has many imitators, but no equals. The results following its use are its best recommendations. Be sure, as on value your health, to get the genuine. Manufactured only by DR. WILBOR, 18 Chemist, Boston, Mass. Send for illustrated circular, which will be mailed free. Sold by all druggists.

OUR MANUAL OF EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN

BE STILL, O HEART!

BY ALICE E. WOODBY.

Be still, O restless heart, be still!
Why roam each day the vale and hill?
Why search for that that's gone for aye—
For that which to thee'll ne'er reply?
Be still, O heart, be still!

Be still, O restless heart, be still!
Submit thyself to God's wise will;
For what is best for souls of men
He sends to bring them back again.
Be still, O heart, be still!

Be still, O restless heart, be still!
For God will make thy will His will;
He'll draw the curtain of thy night
And on thy gloom shed holy light.
Be still, O heart, be still!

Be still, O restless heart, be still!
Though long His promise He'll fulfil;
And in the end restore tenfold
That which He took thy soul to mould.
Be still, O heart, be still!

GOD'S WAYS.

God's ways are not our ways: Oh no:
Through heat and cold, through frost and snow,
He leads us on:
Through shadowed paths, and sunlight fair,
Through times of joy, and hours of care,
From dawn to dawn.
God's time is not our time: with love
Unchanging, from His home above
He watcheth still;
And though His time be soon, or late,
Through good or ill, let us await
His gracious will.
What matter it! a few more years
Of pain and sorrow, or the tears
Of silent grief?
How swift and soon is short the way,
That leads to an eternal day
Of sweet relief.
Thy will be done, O hallowed One:
Through passing days, from sun to sun,
Till time be o'er;
Then "face to face" we'll dwell with Thee,
And all Thy "hidden ways" shall be Made clear forevermore.

—Mrs. A. M. Tomlinson.

WHAT IS A THEOLOGIAN?

SOME OF THE REASONS CONSIDERED WHY GOSPEL MINISTERS OUGHT TO BE THEOLOGIANS.

BY REV. J. W. MALONE.

Having in a former article considered the relation of theology to the Christian religion, let us now notice the gospel minister as a theologian.

A theologian proper is one who not only himself understands the doctrines of religion, but is thoroughly able to explain, prove and defend them and teach them to others. However, every religious man is a theologian just as far as his knowledge is accurate and comprehensive Every true theologian must be a religious man as far as his knowledge is experimental Truly every preacher, to be a theologian proper, must have a deep and pervading enthusiasm; he must have an inward harmony with the object which interests the mind of Christ, so to speak, and in which every selfish feeling is absorbed and lost. The main impulse of the theologian must be from within—from sanctified affection, from the real sympathy of his soul with God The Bible should be his principal text-book and should be carefully read and studied that he may bring from its stores the precious truths of life, and from its crystal fountains the water of salvation. The study of theology will enable the preacher to rightly divide the word of truth The study of the Holy Scriptures will make wise unto salvation. Praise the Lord.

A man is not a theologian who has acquired some facility in the use of some theological terms, or who has read a few theological treatises, etc. It requires scientific study, biblical study to become a theologian. Theology being a science, therefore every minister in the gospel ought to be a theologian in order to be conversant with the art of preaching. so as to enable him to present the Scriptures of divine truth in a systematic, logical and forcible manner. Preaching, therefore, is a progressive art, and in this aspect it is worthy of profound study—theological study. "Study to show thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth" means theological, biblical truth Hence, the Christian minister should not merely study to acquit himself well in the estimation of his fellowmen, but should endeavor so to study and to preach as to be approved of God, whose servant he is and whose work he is to perform. The true theologian is the man who is a constant and growing student of all manifestations of the divine in nature, man, the word and the spirit Therefore a minister of the all-comprehending, all-loving, all-wise God should be a man of liberal culture and able himself to add something to theology from the other sciences; hence the minister should look upon the fields of science and theology as spread out before him for exploration and occupancy, and apply himself to the acquisition of all the knowledge he can attain to fit him for the work of preaching the glorious gospel of Christ and of saving souls and of building up the Church of God "Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves and to all the flock over which you may be appointed to feed the Church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood."

Preaching has not lost its power, as some fanatics suppose, over the human mind any more than the gospel has lost its power to save; for truth always demands an interpreter, and that interpreter must be a theologian, a biblical scholar. And the soul always yearns for a teacher in divine things, and that teacher must be a learned, pious, Christian theologian, a sanctified man of God And, by the way, the preacher of the gospel that is not a theologian, proper, cannot, with propriety, hope to lead and guide minds—intelligent minds—If he does in no wey comprehend the demands and necessity of an advancing age like the present—an age of inquiry in theological questions, speculative dogmas and of the bold reconstruction of religious philosophers, modern rationalistic philosophers. Theories of society, education and science are evolved and tested with astounding rapidity. Scientific skepticism and infidelity are at work. Yes, skeptical science, infidel geologists are at work trying to sap or undermine the foundation of the Christian religion, and is no less hostile to the pure doctrine of the gospel now than heretofore, but has simply changed its modes of attack. In many instances it is masked and now waives a direct warfare and resorts to strategy, sometimes even subscribes to the Christian Scriptures; but put an entirely new gloss upon them and by scientific philosophizing would make them teach another religion—a religion unknown to the apostles, the fathers and the Church of Christ.

The Christian minister being set apart for the defence of the gospel of Christ should, therefore, be prepared to detect and expose the sophisms and poisoned potations of the masked enemies of our common faith and Christian religion. and maintain uncorrupted the pure and word of God; defending the plain, the pure and unsophisticated doctrine of the Christian religion. To be a successful gospel preacher we must have a theological instinct which appropriates everything of God, which sound, which brings all knowledge into an organic whole, which invites free scientific investigation in every direction around, with a subordination of all to the spirit of Christ. This is a living theology which does not suffer itself to become imprisoned in any one speculative school, but gathers new ideas and widens its dominion over the whole field of truth in nature, in history and in revelation, and its true field is not controversy, but truth; not in false reasoning nor in speculative philosophizing, but truth. Defend the truth and preach the word While it is true het truth born of God does not change, but the form in which it is apprehended and its modes of influencing are continually undergoing developments. The old gospel contains more new systems of theology and is capable of producing many new methods of preaching. The human method of presenting divine truth so that it may be received to the welfare of the soul must be adapted to the soil, and to the soul of the age in which we live. Therefore the age in which we live calls for and demands an educated ministry—theologians—men called of God, qualified by the Holy Spirit and commissioned by the Lord Jesus Christ. It takes the Holy Spirit to convert, to sanctify, to qualify and set apart and endue with gifts and graces the minister of Christ preparing to teach and to preach the glorious gospel of the Son of God. "Living a holy life, reading and searching the Scriptures, which make wise unto salvation; and speak the things which become sound doctrine."

Oskaloosa, Iowa.

THEOLOGY SOILED BY THE TOUCH OF MAN.

BY REV. E. SEYMOUR

MR. EDITOR:—Please allow me space in your valuable columns to speak a few words in reply to a criticism made by the CHRISTIAN RECORDER on an article written by E. Seymour, entitled, "From Atchison to California." In said article, Seymour speaks of the thoughts on the road and speaks of nature, human nature, more Bishops and re-unions. The paragraph criticised by my scholarly friend and brother, is this: In speaking of nature, Seymour said, "She is pure and contains the only real truths we have." She is like her God, unchangeable; she is always positive; here is the fountain of truth, for even our theology, the best of it, has been soiled by the touch of man." It is a typographical error that Seymour says that theology has been deified by the touch of man. He says that theology has been soiled by the touch of man and that is what he believes. Nature alone must hand us the real truths of God: My scholarly friend takes great exceptions to these words and pours out smoke and fire against the author, and says, if nature alone must hand us the real truths, why preach the gospel? And criticizes Seymour, the preacher of the gospel.

Now, to start with, I hope that my friends who will attack the article written by Seymour, will please be philosophical enough to attack the right man, for the Seymour the Methodist Church licensed and set out to preach is the ambassador with limited authority, having article of faith and doctrines of the Methodist Church as set forth in the Bible to teach and preach, and woe is me if I preach any other. But Seymour in the realms of thought is the plenipotentiary having full power So then, my friends, don't knock hold up the ghastly ghost of heresy and charge Seymour with promulgating it. Now, in understanding, let us be men; let us reason, we were once children when reason was unknown to us, then we asked no questions, we observed now law except the law of our parents and teachers in commandments. We reposed with simplicity on any commandment given by them and asked no questions. But then comes a time when we reach manhood and we will ask questions and stake everything on the answer. That time with some of us is now, hence we must exhibit and sustain our doctrine, not lying athwart the line of the world's thinking.

Now, in one paragraph of my learned brother's criticism he says that Alexander Bain could not have uttered a more cold, unqualified, materialistic statement, as inconsistent as materialistic. Well, it may to the brother appear cold and he is philosophical and ought to know that you cannot throw a hot shell from a hot cannon, but to do effectual work in battle the cannon must be cold. Now, Seymour spiritually may appear to some to be as cold as Mr. Bain, yet if he is God's cannon, he can use him in time of battle to his own glory. Secondly, the brother says that the statement is unqualified, meaning, unlearned of what we are saying, ignorant of the etymology of the word we are using

Now, Seymour did say that our theology has been soiled by the touch of man and there is where I stand waiting for philosophical and historical evidence to be shown to prove to the contrary "Canst thou by searching find out God?" Canst thou find out the Almighty to perfection? It is evident that both of these questions are put to the reason of the person to whom they are supposed to have been addressed, and it is only by admitting the first question to be answered affirmatively that the second could follow; the two questions have different objects. The first refers to the existence of God, the second to his attributes. Reason can discover the one but fails infinitely short of discovering the whole of the other. Theology, the science or study of God, if I am going to reason this question I decide at once there is a God, for I did not make myself; yet I exist and by searching into the nature of other things, I find that no other thing could make itself, yet there are myriads of other things that exist Therefore it is that I know by positive conclusive resulting from this search that there is a power superior to all those things, and that power is God That is the theology that is pure. We believe in a pure, all-wise and everlasting God:

Our theology is what the article said had been defiled by the touch of man. He meant the plan that is established by the Church for us to study God. As to the theology that is now studied I ask my scholarly brother, is it not a human opinion and a human fancy concerning God? It is not the study of God himself in the works that he has made, but in the words or writings of men. We accept the Bible with many mysteries. My faith, and faith alone, must be my support and only support. Theology have to me, believe, and says I am not to reason why, but believe. What, must I believe in God as he teaches himself in nature; or in Him as taught by finite man? The Bible, God's inspired word as given to us, was written by inspired men, but at different periods. David wrote 400 years after Moses, Isaiah 250 years after David, Matthew 700 years after Isaiah and 400 years after Malachi; so the time between Moses, who wrote the first book, and John, who wrote the last, is an interval of 1,500 years.

O, my brother, is there not a chance for our theology to be defiled by the touch of man? You claim the Bible to be God's inspired word, which I believe it is; but how inspired, was it ideal or verbal? Did God use man in this great work? He certainly did. Did he give man the idea and allow him to clothe the idea with language, or did he furnish both? Did he speak to men as man speaks to man, and was man only the stenographer? Admitting that the word of God came not by the will of man, but that holy men wrote and spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, they might, after the Holy Ghost had departed, have kept on speaking when there was no inspiration about it? And, admitting that the Bible was not only God's thoughts, but God's words, and that it was pure when first handed to man, has it not been handled enough by this finite creature to soil it? Has not the version we possess, that we call King James', been translated seventeen times? Being commenced by Coverdale in 1535, and going through its last under King James in 1607, by forty-seven of the learned men of England. Dr. Andrew Ax drew, the Dean of Westminster, at the head. This translation was commenced by fifty-four men, but for some cause seven of them dropped out, which left this great work to the remaining forty-seven, who did in four years give us the Bible as we now have it; and it may be possible that this totally depraved creature, finite man, who is conceived in sin and born in iniquity, whose carnal mind is susceptible of many mistakes and the clearest eye only sees through a glass darkly, is it possible that he could, with all his weakness and blindness, translate God's word, which is our guide and the foundation of our theology, which contains 3,586,489,000 letters, 73,693 words and 31,173 verses and 31, 189 chapters and 66 books? Then, my brother, is it not possible that our theology has been soiled by the touch of man? Now, my scholarly friend says, "If theology is defiled, why preach the gospel?" Scientists prove to us that we have but very little pure water and the most impure is that which is need in our large cities; yet we cannot refuse to drink it, for we have no substitute for it, and to sustain physical life we must drink it with all its impurities. So with the gospel. If our theology has been soiled by the touch of man it is all we have to preach, and if you can travel by dawn, why wait for the noonday?

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S TEN MINUTE SERMONS.

BY REV. E. V. N TENEYCK.

STEADFASTNESS.

"And Joseph was a goodly person."—Gen. 39 6.

Jacob had twelve sons, among whom was Joseph, who had been reared with tender care and dearly beloved, and whose virtues and unbending integrity had gained his father's special favor. Consequently this excited the envy of his brothers, who afterwards with malignant design, sold him to a company of trading merchants, who again sold him in the servitude of an Egyptian captain. This was a position entirely different to what he had ever been used to. But while earthly adversities conspire to destroy him, God preserves and blesses him, and his life throughout displays in beauteous radiance the inherent principle of steadfastness, which aided in forming the basis of his pro y.

His steadfastness in truth during his early youth among his home associations is strikingly illustrative. His brothers were inclined to waywardness, dissipation and dishonesty, which is evidenced by their hatred towards and final treatment of him. He was not a hell-late, but he only related the simple truth which it was reasonable for their father to know. The cause of their trouble was not in the character of his reports, but it was their wrongful deeds antagonizing against the truth. Wrong has always been at enmity with right, falsehood with truth and injustice with justice. The wicked man does not want to be disturbed in his wickedness. Hence their selling Joseph was not because they hated him, but because in his heart the truth which had exposed their wicked deeds. The selling of Joseph was the result of shame, mingled with cowardice; the death-shot fired from the culture of revenge. While Joseph now seems to suffer on account of the truth, we will soon see how the truth gains for him new friends, guides and lifts him up and makes him the greatest among all men in Egypt's great kingdom.

His steadfastness in regard to virtue is equally great. Daily the wanton woman in beauteous garb and with bewitching smiles tempts him to betray his trust and step out of the pathway of rectitude into the downward road of recklessness and ruin. But he clings to virtue, while his steadfastness upholds him and the truth makes him brave; and, like the lightning of a storm-cloud, truth flashes from his lips, declaring, "How can I do this thing and sin against God?" Smitten by this stinging rebuke, so unexpected and coming from one whose position of inferiority she considers should compel him to comply with her wishes, irrespective of their immoral shade, consequently she determines upon his destruction. Again the spirit of shame and not the demon of revenge unite in inventing false charges against him and thrusting him into prison.

Seventeen years had now passed away. Pharaoh's strange dreams had been interpreted. The seven years of abundant harvest and the seven years of famine that should follow had been fofetold and Joseph had been released from prison and become the ruler of the land. So rapidly had he risen out of slavery into eminence that he had become engrafted into the king's family by marrying his daughter. He also rode in the second chariot and occupied a seat next to the throne. Yes, in fact, he was King Pharaoh's adviser.

A servant comes running in, announces a company of men at the door. They have come a far distance; tired, hungry and footsore. They stand waiting to meet the governor. He comes. Joseph recognizes his brother. They have forgotten him. They receive their corn and return home. Again they come. Joseph makes himself known to them. What a sweet embrace! Tender affections renewed after such a long period of years. His brothers, who had felt like falling down at his feet and begging for mercy but he satisfies them that he holds no malice against them, declares that God had so ordered it, that he might be an instrument in saving the people from the terrible famine. He inquires after his father, whether he yet lives. He does not say "old man," like we sometimes hear some young people do, and think that it is quite witty to into prison—punished for having committed no crime. How many a young man would have commenced his ruin here. Only think of the situation; turned out of the influence of good society—wicked men and hardened criminals for his companions, whose language is rife with vulgarity, profanity and blasphemy, and he, a little transplanted, tender twig, struggling against the furious blast of the immoral hurricane. Still more to add, no Bible to read to encourage; no good books of any kind and no religious papers to help to console; no Christian conversation to strengthen. Yet, in the privation of all these, he remains steadfast and unmoved, a true and only child of God in the midst of a great heathen nation. My young Christian friends, could any one of you have endured the same and remained steadfast in good marks of righteousness? But remember that when we trust and obey God, he helps to overcome all things that encounter and accomplish all that duty enjoins.

Young women and young men, my heart in deep solicitude bends toward you in behalf of your interest. It is realities that make life serious, and we should wisely consider the realities of the past to prepare for the realities that are coming. Never give up the right for the wrong under any consideration. But then, in the first place, be sure that you are right. Young people sometimes make a mistake and think that they are right when they are "terribly" wrong. Study your Bible often and that will teach you wisdom; read good books and good papers and they will make you intelligent. Give your heart to Jesus and he will preserve both your soul and body, and his Holy Spirit will sanctify and lead you higher and higher in degrees of holiness. Be decided, be firm, yield not to temptation's beckonings, stop your ears to her entreaties, for within the folds of her cloak is hidden the dagger that smites and kills. Jewels, they are scattered around you. The shining pearl, the glittering gold, the sparkling diamond, so lovely, so grand; but virtue untarnished and sanctified excels them all. Virtue—it is this that makes the perfect lady when all other things may fail. Virtue—it is a crown of strength to the young man and makes him king over his baser passions. Virtue—it is the basis of manhood and manhood's grandest constituent, earth's richest adornment and heaven's highest pride. Therefore prize it, keep it, cherish it, for it is a treasure that you cannot afford to be without. No; without it Joseph would have remained a slave; Pharaoh would have been without an interpreter for his dreams and the world have spread carnage through the land, and Jacob would have formed no storehouse to supply the wants of his family. Like Joseph, be steadfast in all things that are right and good. If you are engaged in mercantile, mechanical, literary or domestic business be steadfast in every duty relating to it. Or, if you have engaged your services to another, pursue every duty appertaining to your position with a willing mind and steadfastness that will insure your own success and gain the confidence of your employer. And as in temporal duties, be also steadfast in spiritual duties. This is the greatest and most important concern of all. By the grace of God never allow yourself to backslide. As long as you keep close to Jesus, as long as you daily commune, and converse with him in prayer and praise, so long as you strive to get nearer and nearer to him and further and further from that which is wrong, there can be no backsliding, because he who continually advances cannot go backwards.

And now to you who are yet strangers to the Saviour my cry is, awake, awake. Prepare to meet your God. The receding events of the past are admonishing you; the stern realities of the present are entreating you, and the future is brightening with gilded radiance of prophetic vision, betokening the coming of Him whose tread will awake the dead, whose voice will assemble together all the nations of the world; when the gospel shall cease her invitation and truth shall vindicate its cause before the bar of justice; when priest and preacher shall look down from the altar of God and the last convert shall cease his labors and with quickening haste come to receive his eternal reward. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF MEHARRY MEDICAL COLLEGE, NASHVILLE, TENN., FEBRUARY 20, 1888.

BY "CASCARA."

DR LEE:—I thought a word in reference to the above memorable occasion would be of interest to the readers of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. The Grand Opera House, the place selected for the event, was literally packed with humanity long before 7 30 o'clock, the hour for the execution of the programme to begin, had arrived. The programme was as follows: Prayer, Rev. E. Tyree; Salutatory, Thesis, "The Tongue"—G. W. Honesty; Music. Valedictory, Thesis, "Odontelgia"—C. M. Wade (Dental Department); Music; Valedictory, Thesis, "Diphtheria"—R. T. Brown; Music; Address to the Dental Graduating Class, J. P. Bailey, D. D. S; Music; Address to the Medical Graduating Class—Prof. E. L. Gregory; Music; Conferring of Degrees by the President—J Bradan, D. D; Music; Benediction. Reception Committee—J. F Dyson, B. J Smith, A M. White, H R. Butler, A J. Love, E. P. Darden, J. B. Goin, G. Phipps, J. R. Grossland.

This graduating class is the largest that the college ever had, numbering 18; and the dean, Dr. G. W. Hubbard, says, as a whole, it made an excellent average in marks. This occasion was also the second commencement of the Department of Dental Surgery of Meharry Medical College, and "sheep skins" were given to Messrs C. M. Wade and Smith. The platform was occupied by many distinguished citizens of both races of this city and from abroad, some of whom, upon invitation, delivered themselves of thoughts complimentary and encouraging. The remarks of Bishop Walden, president of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, were especially interesting, coming from one who is in a position to answer the question whether the Christian philanthropists who have contributed in so large a measure to the present intellectual status of the colored people of his church are pleased with the returns from their applied charity. His opinion upon this question may be gleaned from his reply to that part of the address on the dental department, as the dullness of the grandest sons that ever graced the loins of humanity is not to carry the breath of books about with him like some men carry the odor of tobacco. To prove that the fever of bookishness the best thing a young man can do is to join a volunteer corps. The drill will serve to brush off the taint of pedantry and gird the loins stoutly for all the duties that belong to citizenship and active manhood. We would not ignore or disapprove such organizations in our modern schools as would compel the student, without undue exertion, to go through certain gates of gymnastics—which would develop the muscles and make a man hearty and strong and vigorous for the contest of life. Some nations make it obligatory on every man to serve in the army. We, the Americans, rush to the store or counting room, and our citizenship and manhood are blunted accordingly. Our advantages are superior to those of one hundred years ago. The cheapness of food makes it possible and inexcusable in the youth that is studious, who will sit week after week and month after month as if chained to the dull book, when he might breathe a purer air, inhale imagination from the very face of nature in some green glen or wave-splashed isle. A book, of course, may always be in the pocket, if at all a book is necessary; but it is better by far to steer clear of them and cultivate independence. Learn directly from observation of nature and to sit in a frame of "wise passiveness" growing insensibly in strong thought and feeling by the breezy influences of nature playing about us. We cannot close this subject without mildly referring to eating and drinking as practiced by students. Of course it is necessary to have something to eat, but what we eat should be substantial and nourishing. Regarding the details of this subject we shall refer you to hygiene and your medical adviser. But we believe it is generally agreed that the plainest food is the best for the good of the brain and blood.

The supply of good nourishment may be adequate to the demand and yet persons err when they come to use it. Many men do not walk, but roll through life; they never sit down and take things quietly. Bustling and hurrying, they snatch their meals so as to be done with them as soon as possible. This is the worst kind of all philosophy. Ah, we will not call it philosophy, for we do not like the use of the word in this connection; nonsense. They who eat in a hurry lose the pleasure of eating and the benefits of digestion. Business men, who, in the constant excitement of their business, are apt to indulge in this unhealthful habit. Students and bookish men are not free from the same temptation, and it often happens that the man who is an eager reader will not hurry down a full dinner, that he may get back to his book, but will read it while eating, thus forcing nature to act from two points at the same time, alike vitel—the brain and the stomach. The result is the ill-feeling of both. Some one once said, "A whole man to one thing at a time."

The use of drink is most damaging. Strong drink too often enters as a stimulant or aid to digestion. Students, as a rule, are poor and the money thus spent might aid them in some great achievement in life. Water, at least, can lay claim to one merit—it never made any man a murderer and a sinner, and whiskey, however mild, however beneficial its claim may be, only deadens the nerves, produces unhealthy fat and weakens the muscles. He who never indulges in its use will never die in the ditch and will always find money in his pockets to help himself and his friend in an emergency.

Students to preserve their health must guard against the evil effects of badly ventilated rooms. Impure air never makes good blood, but corrupts the whole system. The effect is not felt at once, but is sure and certain. Lastly, exercise care as to your sleep. Sleep when you are asleep. Rise betimes. Walk an hour before bed-time, have a pleasant chat with friends, show off the care of your business or studies. We would enjoin no rule as to time; some persons require more and some less sleep, but get enough. If you would be healthful be good, to be good be wise. If you would be wise be devout and resolute. "For the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom."

AN OPEN LETTER TO BISHOP WARD.

MR. EDITOR:—Please allow me a small space to express a word of sympathy to my venerable Bishop and father, T. M. D. Ward. In using the term father, I do not mean my legitimate father, but one supplying that place of such. He has often taken me into his dining room and welcomed me to the comforts there, and from the dining room to his consecrated study, and there like a natural father with his son at his knee, has taught me the leading principles respecting my temporal and spiritual welfare, urging most strictly upon me to practice what he taught. And many times when I had no money to get sustenance for my family, being on small salary, he gave me many dollars. Has he not been a father to me?

Turning, as I do, my attention to his dear companion, Mrs. Rachel Ann Ward, with whom my companion and I were well acquainted, having lived with them for quite a while, I would say of her, she was a faithful Christian lady, a loving companion, a model house-keeper and a hospitable friend to the poor and the stranger. She was deeply interested in the A. M. E. Church, willing to work for the same. I could say more about her good work, but do not wish to intrude on your precious time.

Dear Bishop, three years and three months ago you joined in holy wedlock with Miss Rachel for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer. To you she was a good companion; but, alas! the monster death has gathered her by its shaft and you are left awhile longer to tour the valleys and mountains of life. But, dear Bishop, if we be faithful to our Redeemer we all, sooner or later, shall see her with the rest of the saved children of the King, in those jasper walls where tronbie never comes. You have my earnest prayer that the Great Companion of all men be ever by your venerable side, yea in your soul.

NORTH LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

BY REV. J. GOINS.

The sixth session of the North Louisiana Annual Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church convened in St. Matthew's Chapel, Shreveport, La., at 10 o'clock A M. The Bishop being absent by misconnections of the trains, Rev. J. W. Rankin, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, on motion was elected Bishop pro tem. He then sang hymn on page 503 and fervently appealed to the throne of grace for divine guidance. The secretary of the last annual conference came forward and called the roll, and members present answered to their names. This having been done, Rev. I. J. Williams was elected secretary. On motion Rev. J. B. Webb was elected recordin secretary; Revs. N. Henderson and E. L Cromwell were elected marshals of the conference; Rev. J. Goins, reporter for the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, and Rev J. H Hord, for the daily papers. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. Hord. On second day the statistical reports and other business was taken up. Revs. G. W. Dudly, L. Allen, Thomas Webb, G. W. Sims and Charles Allen of the Baptist Church, were introduced. Rev. A. R Calhoun, of the C. M. E Church, and S B. Haron, of the M. E. Church, were introduced and seated within the bar. Sermon on Sunday preached each night by members of conference and visiting brethren from Texas and Louisiana Conferences. The third day statistical reports were completed. Revs. G. W. Sims and Charles Allen of the Baptist Church, were introduced. Rev. A. R Calhoun, of the C. M. E Church, and S B. Haron, of the M. E. Church, were introduced and seated within the bar. Sermon on Sunday preached each night by members of conference and visiting brethren from Texas and Louisiana Conferences. The third day statistical reports were completed. Revs. G. W. Dudly, L. Allen, Thomas Webb, BROTHER BRADWELL'S article will receive the endorsement of all men in so far as it is direct and clear. Innendoes are as likely to hit nobody as to hit anybody. We have heard of but two annual conferences expressing their preferences for Bishops. It may be in bad taste, but might certainly be done in good spirit and righteousness. In 1864, when all elders who had traveled six full years composed the General Conference, one man went to the conference with votes for his election counted and made known to him, without his asking. It is true he was not elected; for some of the voters changed their mind. There are many sins that disqualify men from exercising any and all ministerial functions. Where shall we find the men whose pure arms can cast a stone that will not rebound to some spot on the sender?

EN ROUTE to Wilberforce, we met Dr. C. Asbury, at Pittsburgh, on his way to Evansville, Ind., where his aged father, Ambrose Asbury, was buried February 1st, aged over ninety years.

It was our pleasure at one time to be pastor of this faithful Christian, at Marietta, O. He was an earnest, modest Christian; zealone, prompt and wise with the wisdom that comes down from above. He had twelve children—eight sons and four daughters. The sons and two daughters survive him. Four of his sone have been ministers in the A. M. E. Church, all eloquent and well informed. Three are still in the active traveling connection: Rev. J. W. Asbury, in Kentucky, Rev. J. Asbury, of Virginia, and Rev. Dr. C. Asbury, of Pennsylvania.

Ambrose Asbury was a native of West Virginia. His father was not named Asbury. The name was derived from the following circumstances: At the time his father who had the same man for both master and father—reached the proper age for naming and baptising, his father, having a white family, was visited by Bishop Francis Asbury. It was agreed that the slave son who was to be baptized by the Bishop should not receive the sacrament under the name of his master—father. After weighing the matter it was decided to make Asbury his surname. Thus, by name, leading African Methodist ministers are connected with the first Methodist Bishop ordained in America.

Father Asbury was a member of the African Methodist Church.

WE PUBLISH this week an article from Brother R. Seymour, evidently one of our original contributors. We are not inclined to discuss the subject with Brother Seymour, though he knows that all he says relative to theology in human hands can be well said of natural science in the same hands. He knows that theology is as pure as any science, and that nature as a source of truth is, to say the least, no purer than the source of theology. If we possess theology in an impure state it no more argues the impurity of the original source of theology than the possession of geology in an impure state argues that the fountain or basis of the science is impure. If nature is our only pure source of truth, should we not discard not only popular theology, but popular Scriptures also? If nature is "our only pure source of truth," may we not be vainly exercised in placing our faith in God? Or does Elder Seymour consider nature and God synonymous? We direct the world to Christ with all the perspicuity and emphasis that we exercise in directing students to the study of the material world: in the one case to learn to do well, in the other to see "how the lilies grow" for practical purposes in aid of well-doing. We cannot doubt that our knowledge of theology may be fenlty, but we know that our knowledge of all materiality is imperfect; so while we know "in part" concerning the divine, the same may be said of our knowledge of everything else. In looking out upon the prairies and streams, mountains and seas, Elder Seymour is as truly, if not so greatly, perplexed as when he scans the moral and religious pictnres before him. We must insist that nature gives us much impure knowledge. She hardly begins to answer us satisfactorially. Is she "soiled by the hand of man," or is all human knowledge limited, finite, concerning all things?

WE VISITED Wilberforce University January 30–31st, en ronte we called at Pittsburgh and Alleghany, Pa., and Columbus, Ohio. Rev. John Coleman, B.D., is pastor at Columbus. The Lord is blessing his work with spiritual growth to the church, as well as additional members. Lively revival meetings were in progress. Elder Coleman is a man whose solid character and pious devotion to the truths he preaches must commend him to all who receive his services, while his thoughtful and earnest presentation of gospel truths must enlist men in the service of Christ. His works in the past are lasting works. He has now a good field. May the Lord bless him, his family and his good people abundantly.

At Wilberforce we found the great revival in progress, mentioned in these columns last week. To say that everybody there was interested would be no exaggeration. Many ex-Wilberforce students will rejoice to learn that among the converted are John Morris, Abram Jackson (son of the late Rev. H. A. Jackson), Joseph Smith, Henry Y. Arnett, Josephine Pipers, Earnest Clark and others. Altogether we saw some of the most wonderful revivals in our trip that it has ever been our privilege to see. On our return home we spent an evening with Rev. W. H. Colman, at Newark, O., and one with Rev. R. C. Ransom, at Altoona, Pa. Elder W. H. Coleman is the cheerful, happy pastor. He is in his third pastoral year at Newark. The book of original sermone promised by the elder will be forthcoming soon. At Newark we were greeted by a good, appreciative audience.

At Altoona Elder Ransom had called out a good number of people. He is accomplishing a good work. Vigilant, eloquent, studious and religious, he is enlightening the people by the power of the truth. Our call on him and Mrs. Ransom was very pleasant.

We were kindly entertained at Wilberforce by Rev. J. A. and Mrs. Clark. Upon the whole our visit was exceptionally pleasant. We stated in a former number that we were West in connection with business pertaining to the quarto-centennial of Wilberforce University under the control of African Methodists. The kindness of all the brethren and their families is highly appreciated.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The South Carolina Conference began its sessione in Mt. Zion Church, Charleston, February 8th, Bishop Ward presiding, assisted by Bishops Wayman, Campbell and Ward. The Rev. S. Washington was elected chief secretary, choosing his assistents. The organization was very easy.

The address of Bishop Ward was noble and assuring. The religious services, by Bishops Wayman and Campbell, were touching.

The principal events of the conference were the reports, the anniversaries of the several conference sub-associations and the election of delegates to General Conference. Several brethren from the Columbia, North Georgia and Georgia Conferences visited this conference. Rev. A. Grant, of the Central Texas Conference, also spent several days at the conference.

Dr. W. J. Gaines represented the Church Financial Department; Dr. Johnson, the Educational Department; Drs. Lee and Tanner the Publication Department, and Rev. W. H. Heard, the Sunday School Department.

This is a large conference, numbering over one hundred and sixty members. Their Dollar Money and other finances were reported on the increase. There are some refined, cultured, strong men in the South Carolina Conference. It may be observed that Rev. L. R. Nichols leads the General Conference delegation. Rev. J. E. Hayne, B.D., has brought out his new book, entitled, "The Negro In Sacred History," which, judging from a slight scanning, is well worth the reading. It contains over one hundred pages and is neatly bound in cloth. We regard it as a valnable addition to our literature. Rev. M. B. Salter was changed from Marion to Morris Brown, Charleston, at this conference. The Rev. B. H. Williams remains at St. Emannel, and the Rev. W. H. Heard at Mt. Zion. The Rev. J. E. Hayne, B.D, goes to Aiken. Prof. P. C. Lawrence, the talented and scholarly astronomer, who is a member of the British Astro-Meteorological Association, is in the South Carolina Conference.

The conference may congratulate itself that it has outgrown the danger that threatened its life four years ago. We did not remain to the end of the session, being anxions to see the great city of Savannah as we passed on to the East Florida Conference, which met the morning after the adjournment of the South Carolina Conference. We out off a day from the close of the latter and a day from the opening of the former to indulge this desire.

We left Charleston, however, sensible of the fact that for courtesy and hospitality it is hard to surpass. With Revs. Bishop Wayman and Dr. Tanner we were guests of Rev. Bruce H. Williams and Mrs. Leah Williams, at the Emanuel parsonage, 51 Mary street, where we were treated with all the kindness that an enlightened Christian home can afford.

The Revs. Gourdine, Dart, J. E. Hill, M. Singleton and a few others remain to tell the present generation of the pre-organic days of negro Methodism. Grand old gentlemen to whom the name of A. T. Carr is still precious; as it is to thousands in our Church.

The brethern of both South Carolina Conferences are making extra efforts to lift Allen University ont of its indebtedness. Eldera Wall, S. H. Jefferson, I. S. Lee, C. Pierce Nelson and President Morris were at the South Carolina Conference in the interest of their school. Allen has had a long struggle. It is to the interest of our connection to aid this work and establish it upon a living basis. The one thing to which that school, se well as others, should bend its strength, is theological work; for our Church suffers greatly from the want of a better educated ministry.

In Savannah, Ga., we were guest of Rev. S. H. Robertson, but also enjoyed briefly the hospitality of our old friend, Rev. M. R. Wilson, B.D., and his intelligent wife.

Elder Robertson is pastor of St. Phillips A. M. E. Church, of which we had often heard. February 14th, it was our privilege to preach in it to a large and interested audience. Brother Robertson hea opened a series of meetings. He is almost constantly receiving additional members. For solid, common sense he is a rare man. St. Phillips is a nice church. Rev. Wilson's church, St. James, is a good size building and its present pastor is doing a very good work.

In Savannah we called on Col. Devaux, of the Tribune. The colonel and his associate were in good spirits. The Tribune is set up and printed by colored men. The office also has a liberal job patronage.

February 15th, the East Florida Conference opened at Palatka, Fla. This is a conference of about 120 members and probationers, presided over by Bishop Payne. There are some very thoughtful, strong ministers on its roll. Among its oldest members are Rev. W. W. Sampson, who, on acconnt of sicknass, was unable to be present; Revs. Long, Brown and Sawyer. Its younger members are marked by a dezen strong men. The secretary, Rev. S. H. Coleman, leads his General Conference delegation; other delegates are Revs. M. M. Moore, J. E. Lee, T. C. Denham and W. P. Ross. Elder Lee is a practicing lawyer in Jacksonville, and is making a noble reputation. He is pastor of St. Paul's, Jacksonville. Elders Moore and Denham are presiding elders. Elder Ross has been for five years the leading spirit in our educational work in Florida. The Divinity School, a nice brick building, is a lasting monument to his patience, patronage and push. Its present president, Rev. J. H. Welch, is directing its affairs with a view to increasing its worth to its patrons.

The Rev. John R. Scott, B. D., former student of Wilberforce, has done good work as teacher in the Divinity School. Florida brethren should take care of that school and lift the idea of its progress and ultimate greatness far above the little differences that may exist among them, on whatever accounts.

True to his episcopal record, Bishop Payne has drilled these brethren in essay writing and trained them in critical scriptural studies. With age, his powers to analyze and impress the teachings of the Bible seem to increase. Several of the young brethren read good prise essays on the subject, "Missions—Home and Foreign." With Bishop Payne's conferences great stress is laid upon the literary society anniversary. The fees paid in amounted to between $100 and $150.

To us it was a rare pleasure to sit once more at the feet of our old instructor each morning while he unfolded the interesting truths of the book of Malachi. Would that this good man could give these morning readings to all our conferences. The Rev. W. W. Hicks, D.D., LL.D., visited this conference and made a remarkable speech, expressing the most sanguine hope of the "negro's ease in equity," and in righteoneness. Dr. Hicks will be remembered as the spiritual adviser of Guitean and the only man upon whom Wilberforce Universelty has conferred the honorary degree of LL. D.

The doctor is thoroughly acquainted with the negro. His appeals to our feelings could not have been more skillfully directed by the most adroit of our own orators. He is a man of deep and strong feelings himself, and capable of arousing the deep feelings of his fellows. When such a man uses right methods he is no more forcible than when he uses wrong methods. Dr. Hicks doubtless meant right in his strong encouragement of the development of emotionality by colored people, but in seeming to discard intellectuality from the realm of religious life, he was giving us a very injurious lesson. There is not the least necessity nor excuse for degrading intellect in religion or feelings in religion in order to exalt either of them. Both are natural, both are right. The Book of God says comparatively little about either, but it certainly does not degrade nor speak lightly of intellect, or thought and reason. It is unnecessary to make discriminations that are useless—much less those that are harmful.

The Florida Conferences have a large field and a work to do that admits of no delay. With brave and pure hearts they can accomplish it. Revs. A. J. Kershaw and E. W. Johnson, of the Florida Conference, attended the East Florida Conference, representing their conference as trustees of the Divinity School.

Bishops Wayman and Turner assisted Bishop Payne. All seemed to associate in perfect harmony and helpfulness. The presence of Revs. S. H. Robertson, of the Georgia Conference; W. J. Gaines, of the North Georgia Conference, and A. Grant, of the Central Texas Conference, was apparently appreciated highly by the East Florida Conference.

A noticeable coincidence occurred in connection with the two "big brothers," Gaines and Grant. At the South Carolina Conference we heard the latter preach from the text, "Men ought always to pray and not faint;" at the East Florida Conference we heard the former preach from the same text. Each carried his audience and received several persons into church on probation after his sermon. Both are strong men to rally our great forces. Both appear to be good executors and organizers. Elder Grant is a native Floridian; when Bishop Turner spoke to the conference of the mighty work God is doing in the Southwest through the instrumentality of Elder Grant and our good Brother B. W. Roberts, the conference was exultant. Grant is a fair sized Central Texas Conference, himself; we have nothing more to say on the subject, Brother Roberts.

Personal.

—Mr. H. O. Tanner is casting a hust of Bishop Payne.

—Bishop and Mrs. Campbell spent last Sunday in Trenton, N. J.

—Rev. D. P. Brown, of Evanston, Ill., is visiting his father in Washington, D. C.

—We spent a few minutes with Bishop Brown en route from Florida. He is improving slowly.

—Rev. L. M. Beckett, of Elmira, N. Y., was in Philadelphia on the occasion of his sister-in-law's funeral.

—Dr. J. C. Price, the talented president of Livingstone College, has been tendered the Liberian consulship. Hope he will not accept.

—Rev. J. B. Stansberry assisted Rev. F. F. Smith, Little Bethel, Camden, in his quarterly meeting last Sunday. Six persons joined the church.

—Rev. W. H. Heard has done a great work for the Charleston (S. C.) people, in bringing before them as lecturers snch men as Derrick, Price and Douglass.

—The Rev. R. A. Johnson, of Cleveland, O, and his people, are enjoying a gracious outpouring from on high. Twenty conversions and thirty-five accessions.

—Three Wilberforce graduates teach in the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial School—Misses L. L. Clark, B. A., and E. A. Gaines and Mr. J. L. Watkins, B. A.

—Dr. J. H. A. Johnson spent last Sunday in New York. He paid our office a brief call. The doctor will soon issue his series of articles, published in the CHRISTIAN RECORDER, in book form.

—Rev. J. S. Brown, of Morganton, N. C., has had a revival in which fifty two souls have been converted and sixty-eight added to the church. He prays for Bishop Campbell to be returned to preside over the North Carolina Conference.

Literature.

The most interesting frontispiece the Woman's World has yet had is the portrait of Christian Rossetti, which accompanies the March number. It is a capital reproduction in fac simile of a crayon drawing by her brother, Dante Gabriel Rossetti. A sympathetic criticism of Miss Rossetti's poems, by Amy Levy, is the occasion of the portrait.

Under the non-committal but very enggestive title of "Eighty-Nine," Cassell and Company will soon publish one of the most unique and curious of books. It is a story based on the possibilities of the present socio-political conditions, written from a standpoint so new and singular that it seems strange that it should not before have attracted attention and yet so full of probability that the reader is startled with the thought that what is therein described may at any moment occur. Unlike all other works of this character, the climax is not reached by an absurd appeal to force, but by a quiet and simple evolution of social forces, the growth and character of which are set forth with a sort of blundering deceitfulness that half conceals the art which underlies the wierd forecast it rivets in the reader's consciousness. The author's name is given as Mr. Edgar Henry, a name previously unknown in literature and which would suggest the idea of a nom de plume were it not that the book contains incontrovertible evidence of being a first novel—though by no means a first work, as it is unquestionably written by a writer of great power and pronounced ability. It has a sort of intensity which, combined with the peculiar character of the subjects it discusses, makes it certain to attract wide attention and awaken sharp criticism.

OUR WOMAN'S COLUMN.

BY CATHARINE CASEY.

As it will not be long before our schools and colleges all over the land will be sending out into the world their finished products, in the shape of young people whose minds have been trained within their walls, a word to "our sweet girl graduates" about their commencement dresses may not be out of place. The truth of the old adage that "Beauty unadorned is adorned the most" is never more plainly felt than when we turn from a mass of frizzes, flonnces and foolish fashions to rest onr gase npon one whose good sense, refined taste and modest simplicity have adorned her beyond the power of any gaudy furbelows. It is a noticeable fact at commencements that those who have the highest averages and the best essays are generally the most simply dressed. Nun's veiling, a soft and graceful material in all colors, and white material are very cheap and make as pretty a dress as any girl could wish. Indeed it's just "the thing" now for young girls to graduate in dresses made by themselves, as an evidence of the fact that their hands have had a little training in important matters as well as their heads. But some one may say, "My parents can afford to buy me what I want," and so she comes to the front radiant "in silk attire." As a matter of taste, it would seem that the parlor and reception room were the places for such display; and if the taste of this person had been cnltivated and refined by her educational training, as it ought to have been, I think she would agree with me. But our young girls must not bear the burden of being the only ones who are fond of making a fine appearance on public occasions. Many older ones are not without sin in this matter. But, in spite of our outward trappings, the truth remains that "It is the mind that makes the body rich, and as the sun breaks through the darkest clonds, so honor peereth in the meanest habit." Not what people appear to have, but what they are, commands the respect and admiration of those whose esteem is worth having. The Ledger, under the head of "A Lenten Study," says with its usual just criticism: "We heard a word of remonstrance, in yesterday's Ledger, about the dresses worn on graduating days, among the Normal School girls, 'pink stockings and satin slippers' being specially objected to. The school girls dress like brides or bridesmaids, and the mill girls, at Newark at least, wear quite costly headgear. Yet is not very much of fashionable society also engaged in 'aping something that is not,' adopting English speech, epithets, customs, fashions, and scorning the proper and staid old American ways of doing things. Criticism must begin at home. Study of false conditions of life should be focussed upon any one set of circumstances, or occupations or positions. Many persons during the Lenten season wear black, or dress with the severest simplicity. It might be a good time to consider how the almost universal extravagance of dress that is conspicuous among American women may be reduced to moderation. The very fashionable set or sets do not wear fine clothes on the streets or in public conveyances, it is true. They have their opportunities for it Example might permeate more quickly than precept if some of the Lenten leisure were given to remembering what are the sound and what the unsound ideals of life in this country."

The granddaughter of Henry Highland Garnett, a lovely and promising young girl, is at school in this city, being prepared to assist her mother, Mrs. Sadie Garnett, in her Industrial School at Brownsville, West Coast of Africa. She is being thoroughly trained for her work, and we have high hopes of what she will accomplish if her life is spared to take her place at the head of that school and train the native women to become efficient teachers. I have long wanted to get my hand on some young girl that might be trained for this great work, and Providence has sent me Nettie Barbour. She was for five years with her mother in Africa, and, although young, knows something of the responsibilities of her future position. God grant that from the seed thus sown Africa may reap an hundred fold.

CRITICISMS.

BY REV. C. L. BRADWELL.

MR. EDITOR:—Please allow me space for a few thoughts. Surely the world does move. Now, Dr. J. H. A. Johnson's General Conference is over, the districts are all laid out the eight new Bishops selected, and everything is in readiness; make the assignments and let us move on under a new dispensation. Yet some brethren do not think the General Conference over, for they are going around having resolutions passed pledging whole delegations to vote first, last and all the time for them. We would like to know if anybody ever before heard of ungodly practices in the Christian Church? Were men ever driving? What has God to do with the selecting of the man or men, when conferences pass resolutions instructing their delegations to support none other than the selection of a certain man is condemmnated? This very fact, exshows conclusively the unfitness of the man.

I believe there is a law or rule in politics called the "gag law," which compels a delegate to vote and be guided by the wishes of the party, but this, I think, is the first instance in the history of the Church wherein this dangerous rule has ever been applied to Christian bodies. What will the world think of us coming with this or that delegation pledged to support unflinchingly this or that man? If God does rse the man can we not believe he will reveal it to us in time sufficient without human aid? Does it not show weakness on the part of those who pass such resolutions, and a greater weakness on the part of that poor deluded man in whose interest they are passed.

If I had concluded to vote for a certain brother, and should it come to my knowledge that he was the agent of such actions and resolutions, a reaction would set in and I would never, no never deposit a vote for him. Judging from the delegates elected the amount of intelligence and common sense that will characterize our General Conference will warrant nothing but the best interests of the Church and the edification of God's kingdom upon earth as grasing their first, paramount and permanent actions, and not the flippant aspirations of ambitious men. Now, in the name of God and in the name of the purity of the fathers of the Church let the General Conference keep her hands off of every man upon whose lips is guile. The dignity of the office demands men of higher character than those who would stoop to the tactics of ward politicians. What I have said I hope every delegate to the General Conference and every thinking man who has the Church at heart will read with though and care.

THE PITTSBURGH REVIVAL.

BY "HICKORY."

MR. EDITOR:—And still the great revival in Wylie A. M. E. Church continues. Over two hundred have professed the faith and quite a number yet remain at the altar. Friday evening, the 17th inst., was the occasion of the jubilee over the conversion of the second one hundred souls. The attendance was extremely large. All the available seating capacity and very nearly the entire aisles were crowded with standing, interested persons. The mellowing influence of the Holy Spirit seemed to pervade and characterize every effort of the evening, so much so that from the pulpit to the rear of the congregation individuals stood up with the greatest liberty and spoke for Christ, so that all the house was filled where we were sitting and expressions of joy over recent deliverance from sin. Spiritual experience and miraculous deliverance in old age were heard. An old gentleman eighty six years of age, who had just the week before found Christ, arose, giving a wonderful experience. Prof. J. C. Dorsey, who is but lately from the fountain, being acquainted with the former wicked life of the old gentleman, involuntarily exclaimed, "Lord, send the power!" which sent a thrill of animation throughout the congregation, bringing out the strong voices of amen and praise the Lord. The pastor requested to be sung as a closing piece, "I believe that Jesus saves." During the singing of the chorus a young man, quite intelligent looking, sprang to his feet, exclaiming, "I believe that Jesus saves me," which caused another general outburst of rejoicing throughont the congregation, thus closing one of the grandest gospel jubilee meetings your correspondent ever had the favor and privilege of witnessing in all the years of his experience. One of the fathers of the church, stepping up to me during the fervor of the moment, gleefully stated, "Wylie will regain her lost standard. Yes, she will retake her lost territory and establish herself as the church among churches." We have one hundred and eighty odd that have joined the church; but look, we are filing our own and other churches, too, with converts; let the good work go on, they can but point back to this church as the home of their birth, the Jerusalem of their joy. One feature of the revival at work we very much appreciate is the musical part. Nearly all the hymns sung during its progress have been selections from Moody and Sankey, though with many we have thought our people could not profess religion during the singing of such music aside from their own peculiarly written songe But strangely, it is the fact now in Wylie, yet we acknowledge that we have never heard the selections sung before with such great interest and power as they are now. Several evenings ago a stranger attended the church, and after the discussion he came forward to know of the pastor what hymn books they were using, as the singing was so beautiful and powerful. "Why, Moody and Sankey." "Well, pastor, I never heard them sung before with such power and heavenly influence." The fact is, the pastor, having a through knowledge of over one hundred of them, understands the art of introducing and singing to awaken an interest in the cause of Christ. Another important development we noticed in the present pastor of this church: he is so very successful in his conversations to those who visit his study for more light. Seekers invariably find Christ after they have had the forums to converse with him, as he holds up the light so brightly that it seems they cannot escape the truth. The writer only wishes he had that gift, that whomsoever he might approach would live nearer to Christ than they were ever before; yet we know it is wrong to covet the gifts or graces of anyone, therefore we regard Brother D. S. Bentley as being certainly an evangelist in the truest sense of the term, an orator and a preacher apparently sent from God to do the work of an evangelist. He has a great fort in God's word from which he can delineate freely, and present the points of interest of any doctrine necessary to be heard on any occasion. In a word, he is not afraid to send forth the gospel truth in all its simplicity and power, and to shake and arouse from center to circumference the sinner's heart.

EDGEFIELD CIRCUIT AND WARD'S MISSION.

BY REV. N. W. EDWARDS.

This being my third year as pastor of this flock, you will allow me to speak for them and myself.

Two years ago, when I came to this town as pastor of the Edgefield Circuit, I found Methodism at ebb-tide. The church in town had split the year before, 1885, and the rebellious faction was adhering to what is known as the "Independent A. M. E Church," under leadership of one Rev. Wm. E. Johnston, expelled minister from A M. E. Church, South Carolina. The church had no title for its property, no parsonage and no doors to the church, although we have been been organized here seventeen or eighteen years. The membership numbered one hundred, according to the pieces of books then found. Moore's Church, seven miles in the country, was in a worse state, for there we had no church, or equal to none, for it was an old building seventy-five years old. At Cochran's we had thirty members and a log church. Having built a church at Moore's and Cochran's, and having procured titles for all of the property and somewhat repaired the church in town, at the last sitting of our conference, at Newberry, S. C., Moore's and Cochran's were detached from Trinity Church and made the Moore's Circuit. Johnson and Trenton Missions were detached from the Leesville Circuit and attached to Trinity, which made up the Edgefield Circuit. Each of my churches or points is in town seven miles apart. My work is a triangle.

Johnson is a beautiful town on the C. C. & R Railroad, seven miles northeast of Trenton. My church at this point is about 30x20 feet, built to what it is four years ago by Rev. J. W. C Mintz Membership ten; indebtedness $80, and no title to the property No doors, windows, or seats in or to the church.

Trenton is a nice little town seven miles southeast of Edgefield, on the C. C. & A Railroad Here we have a church 20x18; membership six, indebtedness $27 50. The church not finished; no title, no seats, doors or windows. This church was built by one of our local preachers in 1883, who has since joined the Baptist Church because he could not get his local deacon's ordination in our conference; they, the Baptists, offering him his orders and a church Besides the above, there is a mortgage over the tract of land of which we (our church) is buying two acres.

Trinity, Edgefield. This church is at the county seat. Edgefield is an inland town at present; a fine, healthy and growing town. We expect to have two roads through here by May, 1888: the Augusta, Edgefield & Newberry and the C. C & C Railroad We started a parsonage here last year on the lot bought for that purpose in 1886. It is now near completion. We expect to quarter the presiding elder in the same on his first round, March 23d. We raised $30 for said cause Friday night, 17th inst

Wood's Mission. Here we have no church. Several of our ministers have tried here, but failed. Tried? Well, they went. This is a nice little town four miles east of Johnson's, on the C. C. & A Railroad. It was left unsupplied at the last conference, in fact, for the two last conferences. I sent Brother Myer W. Welton, local deacon of Edgefield Circuit, down to look it up and bring the news. He found four members, a bush arbor and a C. M. E. Church one mile out of town unsupplied, who wanted to join the A. M. E. Church. I wrote Mr. Clinton Ward (white) to sell me an acre of land in "words," and received the following reply:

REVS N. W. EDWARDS AND M. W. WELTON—

GENTLEMEN: Whenever you will lay down the timber and commence building a church here I will give you a lot. Respct.

CLINTON WARD."

Now, dear brethren, we appeal to you in God's name, in the name of the Church, in behalf of the fethers who sleep quietly in their graves, but whose work gose on, to send us some help. We ask from Bishop down. Mr Editor, please give us a blank form of title deed. Any emount, brethren and friends, from twenty-five cents up. You shall have credit through this paper for it. You shall hear from us again (D.V)

A PARSONAGE BURNED.

GREENWOOD, S. C.,
February, 17, 1888.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me to inform you and the many readers of the RECORDER of the sad misfortune that befell me here. Last Saturday night, the 11th ult, about 12 o'clock, some fiend in human guise applied the incendiary torch to the parsonage and all its contents were consumed. We had about five minutes in which to make our escape. Everything we had was destroyed—loss between six and seven hundred dollars Any donations from my friends will be thankfully received and highly appreciated. My congregation gave me quite a surprise last night toward replacing what was lost; in fact they have been giving us clothing, money and provisions every day since the misfortune. The white citizens of the town have also contributed very liberally.

Yours in Christ.

T. F. HARPER.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

To all who know themselves indebted to the Book Concern this notice is kindly sent with our greeting:

WHEREAS Our term of service as Manager is near closing, and whereas it is our duty, as well as our desire, to settle up all the business of our term in a just and satisfactory manner, so that our successor may be unirammeled by unadjusted claims, either for or against the Concern.

We therefore notify all persons who have contracted bills with us that full settlement must be made in cash or note, acceptably endorsed, before the 10 h of April proximo. As our quadrennial report will be closed on the 15th of that month our friends can readily see the urgency of this request.

First, To all who owe us, a bill of account will be sent before the 10th of March.

Second, When no response shall have been made to our bill, on the 1st of April such bill will be put in the hands of a collector with power to press the claim to settlement.

Third, Those who may not be able to pay up in full, may pay part of their bill and settle the balance by note (properly endorsed) or by "one bill," payable in one or two months. We will furnish in all cases the notes and bills to be signed or endorsed.

Fourth, All who may have open accounts against us for merchandise or anything (excepting notes and bonds) will please put in their statement by April 1st, that we may adjust and settle them by cash or note promptly. With hearty thanks to all who have given us patronage, and with Christian love and friendship to all, we remain, etc.

"STAMMERING"

AND ALL DEFECTS OF SPEECH PERMANENTLY CURED

I first met Mr. E. S. Johnston seven years ago, Fs was then such a stammerer I was painfully unpleasant to converse with him. Since that time he has succeeded in working a marvelous cure, not only upon himself so that he now talks with great ease and fluency, but also upon many others, who were wretched stammerers. In the interests of all such sufferers I cordially commend Mr. Johnston as a gentleman whom I believe to be worthy of confidence. John S. Rands, Pastor Arch Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

COMPOUND EXTRACT

Hood's Sarsaparilla has by its peculiar merit and its wonderful cures won the confidence of the people, and is to-day the most popular blood purifier and strengthening medicine. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, dyspepsia, headache, kidney and liver complaint, catarrh, rheumatism, etc. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself.

Hood's Sarsaparilla sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

The contemptible action of a Western man in stealing half a dollar from the eye of a corpse seems likely to have a bright side after all. The Detroit Tribune says that the photographs of the thief are sold for the benefit of the widow.

According to a dispatch to the New York World from Pittsburg, Dr. Arthur Debassuet, "a Frenchman by birth, and President of the Trans-Continental Aerial Navagation Company," has contracted for the construction of a number of mammoth air ships. Each of these ships will be 654 feet long, 144 feet in diameter, cone-shaped, of steel, and will cost $150 000.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

THE WORLD-FAMED LIVER, BLOOD AND LUNG REMEDY.

WHAT AILS YOU?

[COPYRIGHT, 1887.]

ARE YOU SICK?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, lifeless, and indescribably miserable, both physically and mentally; experience a sense of fullness or nestling after eating, or of "goneness," or emptiness of stomach in the morning, bowels coated, tongue or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nervous prostration or exhaustion, irritability of temper, hot flushes, alternating with chilly sensations, sharp, biting, transient pains here and there, cold feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from the most universal of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time, if not cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in, and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY acts powerfully upon the Liver, and thoroughly cleanses the blood of its foul corruptions, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in curing upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening and healing their diseases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes the digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has gained great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred disease.

BILIOUS ATTACK. DAVID G. LOWE, Esq., of St. Agatha, Manitoba, Canada, says: "Being troubled with a terrible bilious attack, fluttering of the heart, poor rest at night, etc., I commenced the use of Dr. Pierce's Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and derived the very highest benefit therefrom."

LIVER DISEASE. MRS. L. V. WEBBER, of Yorkshire, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "For years previous to taking 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' I was a great sufferer; had a severe pain in my side continually, so that I could not do my own work. I am now well and strong."

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and bodily health will follow, for it will be established.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY cures all humors, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Virulent blood-poisons are, by its use, robbed of their terrors. Especially has it proved its efficacy in curing Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, White Swellings, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

SALT-RHEUM AND RHEUMATISM. WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Gentlemen:—Some years ago I was induced to write to you and tell you what I felt it to be my duty to give to you the facts in relation to the complete cure of a most aggravated case of salt-rheum, by the use of your Golden Medical Discovery. An elderly lady relative of mine had been a great sufferer from salt-rheum for upwards of forty years. The disease was most distressing in her hands, causing the skin to crack open on the inside of the fingers at the joints and between the fingers. She was obliged to protect them in some places by means of bandages, salves, ointments and handgear, and during the winter months her hands were almost dressed daily. The pain was quite severe at times and her general health was badly affected, having the way for other diseases to creep in. Catarrh and rheumatism caused a great deal of suffering in addition to the salt-rheum. She had used, faithfully, many of the most commendable perseverance, all the remedies prescribed by her physicians, but without obtaining relief. She afterwards began treating herself by drinking tea made from blood-purifying roots and herbs. She continued this for several years but derived no benefit. Finally, about ten years ago, I chanced to see one of Dr. Pierce's small pamphlets setting forth the merits of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and other medicines. The name struck my fancy, and seeing that it was essentially a blood-purifier, I immediately recommended it to the old lady who had been so long a sufferer from salt-rheum. She commenced taking it at once, and took one bottle, but seemed to be no better. However, I realized that it would take time for any medicine to effect a change for the better, and encouraged her to continue. She then purchased a half-a-dozen bottles, and before these had all been used she began to notice an improvement. After taking about a dozen bottles she was entirely cured. Her hands were perfectly well and as smooth and healthy as a child's. Her general health was also greatly improved; the rheumatism entirely left her, and the catarrh was almost cured, so that it ceased to be much annoyance. She has enjoyed excellent health from that day to this, and has had no return of either salt-rheum or rheumatism. The discovery seems to have entirely eradicated the salt-rheum from her system. She is now over eighty years old, and very healthy for one of such extreme age.

I have written this letter, of which you can make any use you see fit, hoping that some sufferer from salt-rheum might chance to read it, and obtain relief by using your 'Golden Medical Discovery' —for 'Golden' it is in its curative properties, and as much above the multitude of nostrums and so-called 'patent medicines,' so deservedly haunted before the public as gold is above the baser metals.

Respectfully yours,
F. W. WHEELER, 128 Elm St."

CONSUMPTION, WEAK LUNGS, SPITTING OF BLOOD.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Chronic Nasal Catarrh, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest forms, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

CONSUMPTION. SOLOMON BUTTS, of North Clayton, Miami Co., Ohio, writes: "I have not the words to express my gratitude for the good your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has done my wife. She was taken with consumption, and after trying one doctor after another I finally gave up all hope of relief. Being very poor and having but one dollar in the world, I prayed to God that he might show me something; and then it seems as though something did tell me to get your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' My wife took it as directed, and as a result she is as well as ever now."

GAINED 25 POUNDS. Wasting Disease.—WATSON F. CLARKE, Esq., of Box 100, Summerside, Prince Edward Island, Can., writes: "When I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I was not able to work and was a burden to myself. At that time I weighed 123 pounds, and now I weigh 147 pounds. Then I used to eat about one meal a day, and now can eat four or five if I need to."

COUGH OF FIVE YEARS' STANDING. MRS. N. W. RICE, of Newfane, Vermont, says: "I feel at liberty to acknowledge the benefit I received from two bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which cured a cough of five years' standing, and dyspepsia, from which I had suffered for a long time. I have also used Dr. Pierce's Extract of Smart-Weed, or Water Pepper, in my family, with good effect."

WORTH $1000 A BOTTLE. W. R. DAVIS, Esq., of Belleville, Florida, writes: "I have taken your wonderful 'Golden Medical Discovery' and have been cured of consumption. I am now sound and well, and have only spent three dollars; and I would not take three thousand dollars and be put back where I was."

Discovery $1.00, Six Bottles for $5.00; by Druggists.

THE CENTENNIAL OF AFRICAN METHODISM.

LAST CALL.

All ministers who have not sent in their Centennial reports are hereby requested to remit their collections as directed, at once. And we respectfully urge those who have not made the collection up to date to do so at once and send the proceeds in, as the committee must meet early in January to settle up, and the Manager to have his list complete before publishing the same.

Brethren will please respond promptly. Fraternally yours,

J. M. BROWN,
Chairman of General Committee.

BETTER THAN EVER.

LESSON HELPS FOR 1888.

The Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church is prepared to furnish the best series of Lesson Helps that can be obtained. We have received testimonials from scores of the most prominent Sunday school workers endorsing and emphasizing the high quality of our periodicals. Our aim is to do the very best we can to meet the demands of our Sunday schools. A full list of our periodicals and their prices, will be found on another page of this paper. As we are the only authorized publishers of lesson helps for A. M. E. Sunday schools, we expect to receive that patronage which, respect for law and denominational interests demand. Samples and price lists sent free on application Address,

REV. C. S. SMITH,
Nashville Tenn.

NOTICE.

All communications intended for the Sunday School Union of the A. M. E. Church that are addressed to Rev. C. S. Smith, Nashville, Tennessee, will be received. It is not necessary to give the name of the street nor the number of our business place. Rev. C. S. Smith, Nashville, Tenn., is sufficient. Telegrams addressed the same way will reach us. We are fully settled in our new headquarters and prepared for business. C. S. SMITH, Secretary.

To the Pastors and Superintendents of our Churches and Sunday Schools:

Dear Brethren—Our programme for Easter, "Missionary Day," are ready. We desire to supply every church free of charge. Please send at once for the number you need. Let us begin in time. Address,

J. M. TOWNSEND,
516 South Ninth St., Richmond, Ind

To the ministers, members and friends of the New Jersey Conference: This is to inform you that Brother R. H. Coleman's wife was stricken with paralysis while at Church, Feb. 5th, and while concious has not spoken since. Brother Coleman is compelled to be at home with her and is in great need. Now, brethren, do not stop to ask the wherefores, but rally to his aid with actual cash sympathy. Send what you can now and more when you get it. Send direct to Rev. R. H. Coleman, Yorktown, N. J. I will see that you get credit for it. Yours, J. H Morgan, Presiding Elder 6th District, N. J. Conference

To the Members of the Baltimore Conference of the A. M. E. Church:

Dear Brethren—Your conference will meet on Wednesday, April 11th, and not on Thursday, as is found in the list of conferences in the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. A. W. WAYMAN,
New Orleans, La.

A Bolted Door

May keep out tramps and burglars, but not Asthma, Bronchitis, Colds, Coughs, and Croup. The best protection against these unwelcome intruders is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. With a bottle of this far-famed preparation at hand, Throat and Lung Troubles may be checked and serious Disease averted.

Thomas G. Edwards, M. D., Blanco, Texas, certifies: "Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of colds, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there are none, within the ranges of my experience and observation, so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

John Meyer, Florence, W. Va., says: "I have used all your medicines, and keep them constantly in my house. I think Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life some years ago."

D. M. Bryant, M. D., Chicopee Falls, Mass., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has proved remarkably good in croup, ordinary colds, and whooping cough; and is invaluable as a family medicine."

PUBLICATIONS
OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION O THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

LESSON HELPS IN FOUR GRADES.

THE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY. A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson helps for teachers and older scholars. The aim is enhanced by the introduction of appropriate forms for opening and closing exercises, hymns and tunes, maps, dictio ary of proper names, etc.

THE SCHOLAR'S QUARTERLY. Similar to the above, but with such necessary changes as adapt it to the wants of scholars in the main school. It is mechanically strong. Five or more copies to one address, per year 7 cents each.

THE JUVENILE LESSON PAPER is a four page weekly, designed for younger scholars who have outgrown the Infant class, but yet require their foodiness for pie nee and simple stories for a class.

THE GEM LESSON PAPER is a beautiful lesson sheet, four pages handsomely illustrated and printed on pink paper; for primary or infant scholars. Each number contains besides the lesson a eye opener or two, "baby-hand" talk. All for 6 cents a year, where five or more address are sent to one address.

THE CHILD'S RECORDER, now beginning its eighth volume with a larger issue then ever before, offers superior attractions for the coming year. With additional editorial force, and a list of regular contributors skilled to the style of writing required by the young, no pains will be spared to put this publication abreast with the foremost of its class.

LIFE.

A life that is not worth living,
A basil that's to full of woe
That its love is not worth giving—
Is idle all the life we know?

Have the sin, and the pain and the sorrow
Made us blind to all save our love,
That we fail of the hope for to-morrow,
That stream from the radiant cross?

No; there's a life far outreaching,
Beyond the bounds of our sphere—
There's a voice that is still beseeching
"Come to me, weary one, do not fear."

There is hope for every condition,
There is joy for those who mourn,
There is peace for a heart of contrition,
And its burdens are lightly borne.

For the burden of sin has been lifted,
By Him who died on the tree,
That the world may be brought to delight in,
The ugly the life not to enjoy.

A CUP OF COLD WATER.

The Lord of the harvest walked forth one day,
Where the fields were white with the ripening hay

Who rose He had sent in the early morn,
Were reaping the grain in the noon-day heat,
He had chosen to come for each faithful one,
And bidden them work till the day was done.

Apart from the others, with troubled voice,
Spoke one who had gathered no golden grain:
"The Master has given me work to do,
And my coming hither has been in vain;
The reapers with gladness and song will come,
But no sheaves will be mine in the harvest home."

He heard the complaint, and He called her name:
"Dear child, why standest thou idle here?
O fill up my cup from the pitcher near,
And bring it those who are toiling near;
I will bless thy labor, and it shall be Kept in remembrance as done for me."

'Twas a little service but grateful hearts
Thanked God for the water so cool and clear;
And some who were faint in the heat and toil
Went forth with new strength to the work so
dear.

And many a weary soul looked up,
Revived and cheered by the little cup.

Dear Lord, I have looked with an envious heart
On all who were reaping the golden grain;
I have thought in Thy work I had no part,
And mourned that my life was spent in vain;
But now Thou hast opened my eyes to see
That Thou hast some little work for me.

If only this labor of love be mine—
To gladden the heart of some toiling saint;
To whisper some words that will lighten the weak;
Do something to comfort the weary and faint—
Those small be the service, I will not grieve,
Content just a cup of cold water to give.

And when the Lord of the harvest shall come,
And the laborers home from the field shall call
He will not look for my gathered sheaves;
But His loving words to my ears will fall:
"Thou gavest a cup of cold water to Me,
A blessed name thy reward shall be."

ARTICLE THIRD

MR. EDITOR:—In my last article upon the above subject, I discussed at some length the financial ability of the African M. E. Church, in keeping with the papers of Dr. J. H. A. Johnson. I will say confidant that "Bishops" and "finance" had heretofore received considerable attention at other and abler warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. LIFE.

A life that is not worth living,
A basil that's to full of woe
That its love is not worth giving—
Is idle all the life we know?

Have the sin, and the pain and the sorrow
Made us blind to all save our love,
That we fail of the hope for to-morrow,
That stream from the radiant cross?

No; there's a life far outreaching,
Beyond the bounds of our sphere—
There's a voice that is still beseeching
"Come to me, weary one, do not fear."

There is hope for every condition,
There is joy for those who mourn,
There is peace for a heart of contrition,
And its burdens are lightly borne.

For the burden of sin has been lifted,
By Him who died on the tree,
That the world may be brought to delight in,
The ugly the life not to enjoy.

—W. A. C.

A CUP OF COLD WATER.

The Lord of the harvest walked forth one day,
Where the fields were white with the ripening hay

Who rose He had sent in the early morn,
Were reaping the grain in the noon-day heat,
He had chosen to come for each faithful one,
And bidden them work till the day was done.

Apart from the others, with troubled voice,
Spoke one who had gathered no golden grain:
"The Master has given me work to do,
And my coming hither has been in vain;
The reapers with gladness and song will come,
But no sheaves will be mine in the harvest home."

He heard the complaint, and He called her name:
"Dear child, why standest thou idle here?
O fill up my cup from the pitcher near,
And bring it those who are toiling near;
I will bless thy labor, and it shall be Kept in remembr

revivals, the wicked would tremble and men would he crying far and near, men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved? We need more help in feeding elders to extend the Church—men who know how to hold quarterly conferences, and if no one can be found to keep the proceedings of the meeting, keep them himself; men who can go where pastors fail and build up the Church; men who can preach with power and stir the people up; men who can build churches and get up revivals and know how to represent and explain the Church everywhere.

If the Church had as many good men as it needs, it would shake the foundations of hell and tear down the kingdom of darkness. Men who will help the pastor to explain, spread the Church; who will not talk behind the preacher's back to the Bishop and members any more than he will say before the preacher We need more good Christian-hearted ministers for pastors—men who know how to get on with the people and bring them up to the Church law and teach it to them These are the men whom we need; also men who are educated and know how to preach and what to preach, how to get up revivals and convert men and bring people from far and near into the church—men able to preach with power—men who are able to hold quarterly conference when the presiding elder cannot get there—men who will help to circulate African Methodist literature in every home, and also are able and willing to collect the conference claims and presiding elders' assessments—men who can plan and build churches and pay for them. I have heard preachers say that they did not believe in revivals. I don't believe a man ought to be allowed to preach in our Church unless he believes in revivals. We need more members. I have seen men go to places and live hard and build churches, also take a large body of members in the church, and as soon as their hard-working Christian man gets the work in shape another man goes there, turns them all out, tears up the church and fails to add a single member to the church. He will leave the church dead. We need more good men for pastors.

WHAT WE ARE DOING AND WHAT WE SHALL DO.

BY REV. H. H. KING.

We thought to have nothing to say about the General Conference until we got there, should it please God to spare our life, but even then, if all our counselors are going to be on hand, who seem to know the wants and needs of the Church to perfection and take delight in branding every man who does not agree with them as narrow-minded, stingy Christians, who will never get to heaven without repentance for disagreeing with so wise counselors, we shall consider our chance slim.

The subject of Bishops has been so thoroughly discussed that we shall have nothing to say on that point. Rev. R. F. Hurley voices our sentiments. Our whole Church seems to be on the high road to success, but there are very many places in the great Southwest where the Church is not known, and the reason is, our home missionary department is so poorly provided for that men cannot be found to work up the barren waste and break the bread of life to these multitudes of suffering humanity. There are a plenty of ministers who go in the Jungles of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana to work, preach, pray and almost starve, and in worn garments come to the annual conference and report $50 support, salary, traveling expenses and all told. Then there are many of the veterans of our Church who fostered and fanned the spirit of African Methodism into a flame, now old and decrepit, and some of our preachers are such close financiers that they turn out every member who cannot pay their dues, when these same members, out of their penury, have, year after year, paid their Dollar Money and at other Church assessments. It is hollow mockery to ask what has been collected for the preacher, church and poor until we have some law that bears directly on that point. We had better take the poor off. The laity of the Church must be looked after, for many of them are growing tired of the situation of affairs, and even now the ministers in many places are taxed to satisfy the demand of public sentiment on certain things relating to the Church. If our finances can be placed on such a firm basis as to support retired Bishops, better take a few hundred dollars and give to the widows and orphans of preachers who died in the harness and were retired by God Better look after these old mothers and fathers in the Church, who opened their doors and took the Church in its infancy, nursed it until it could stand alone while hitching up and arranging for the machinery of our great Church; better look to the oil-cans or we may hear a squeak in the running gear and have no oil. We want some of our counselors to tell us how to increase the Church numerically, how to succeed in giving to our people the greatest hope by connecting with the greatest body We want to make the Church a heaven here below and the worship of God a holy calm instead of a burden. It is time to quit singing, "You may have all the world, give me Jesus."

THE WORK AT BLACKSBURG, VA., AND THE CAUSE OF CIRCUITS AND MISSIONS.

BY REV. G. W. NICHOLSON, B. D.

Great is the encouragement that comes to the laborer in the Master's cause when, after a term of years of hardship and privation, in sowing the precious seeds of gospel truth, to experience at the close the outpouring of the Holy Spirit in converting power. Such has been our experience in these cheerless mountains; isolated in many respects from those environments which give inspiration and encouragement, we have plodded on, bearing the blessed gospel of "salvation and life," waiting patiently for the harvest; and at a time when we least expected, the Holy Ghost descended upon a humble home in the valley, where we, through much difficulty, succeeded by divine aid in perfecting an organization under the banner of the A. M. E. Church last spring. Here a small company of believers were assembled together, and suddenly the Holy Spirit descended upon them, and after accomplishing wonders in converting many of the most obdurate sinners—hard-pickers, card-players and horse jockeys—this fire continued to burn its way, and, leaping over the mountains, has brought many of the youth of Blacksburg—" young men and maidens"—to the saving knowledge of our Lord. Subtle opponents and heresies have endeavored to impede the cause by denying the efficacy of the Holy Ghost, and would fain attribute this miracle of grace to water, and its evidences to fanciful dreams and travels, and thereby have misled some who were not sound in the faith; but out of some fifty or more conversions thirty-two have been brought into the fold of the A. M. E. Church. We visited our mission work last Sunday, and what a noticeable change was here presented Men who formerly took no pleasure save in revelry and Sabbath breaking, were found "clothed in their right minds," worshiping, apparently with the deepest emotions, Jesus their Saviour; and in that lonely school-house, convened in the extensive wood or deep forest, away off to ourselves, we had a consuming time by the presence of the Holy One of Israel being in the midst of us.

In closing this short sketch, permit me to add, by way of parenthesis, that the hand of the connection is exceedingly too cold in its dealings with our local mission work in the State of Virginia, especially in sections in the South west, where our churches are few and far between, as is also the case in other conferences similarly circumstanced. We are not competent to compete with the formidable rivalry of other and more dominant churches, growing out of the fact that the ministers of our conferences are sent out, in many instances, with scarcely one cent, to work up a society, with a few saints and children; and no one but these sorrowing preachers and God know what their sufferings are. Other well organized churches, as a whole, do not put the burden of support of their ministers entirely upon a people, when it is found that they cannot provide for them a living support It should be remembered that the circuits and missions of the connection make up a very large per cent of the four hundred thousand members of which we so often boast, and some home missionary enterprise should be put on foot by the ensuing General Conference by which to foster and encourage indigent circuits and missions. While we are so zealous for the welfare of benighted (?) Africa, we ought not to forget that charity properly should begin at home.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

BY REV. DANIEL K KNIGHT.

MR. EDITOR:—I will offer some thoughts on a passage of Scripture for the examination and criticism of your many readers. It is the parable, "The rich man and Lazarus," and may be found in Luke xvi, 19, to the end of the chapter.

As this was a parable and not a narration of events that had transpired literally, so this name of Lazarus, although significant, may be regarded as a fictitious name.

We find but one person in all the Scriptures named Lazarus, and that was he whom Jesus raised from the dead. That was undoubtedly a representative case and his resurrection from the deed designed to be emblematical. Hence his name, which implies "he whom God helps," is significant. It was meet that he whom Jesus raised from death to life should bear his name While one of the characters in our per able bears such an expressive name, the other one is rich and full and needs nothing of God or of men; and as such characters are numerous and common, no name need be given. We need only to be told that "there was a certain rich man," etc.

I understand the Saviour here to be presenting to the Jews a picture of themselves as Abraham's literal seed and heirs to the literal provisions of the Abrahamic covenant. If they did not exactly possess the kingdom of their father David, they were in the zenith of their glory religiously, and it was their pride and boast. They were as rich as they wished to be. In all that might be implied in a clothing of people and fine linen they would be disposed to appropriate it as theirs by exclusive rights.

The rich man is impeled within an enclosure, and, although there is a gateway through it, the poor beggar is outside, and though crumbs may fall to him, he cannot pass that gate to the rich man's table. Here are the Jews in all their zeal and pride and legal works on the one hand and those publicans and sinners and all others who were debarred by the provisions of the Jewish covenant from the sanctuary on the other They are laid at the rich man's gate. We are not told how long they have been there, nor how they came there They have no table of their own, and they are unable to go to it if they had one, or, indeed, to go anywhere else There were dispensed all through the Jewish dispensation some crumbs of encouragement and hope for such beggars as Lazarus, and the word places them at that gate.

"And it came to pass that the beggar died." That is always something that comes to pass, and the angels do not commence their ministry until this death takes place.

Abraham's bosom would not imply a place to be admitted as one of Abraham's seed, but a peculiarly intimate or two-fold relationship as an heir of the blessings that the natural seed failed to inherit. Nothing could be more aggravating to these haughty, self-righteous Jews than the idea of Abraham receiving to his bosom those sinners among them whose very persons they would scorn to touch.

But such is gospel provision. The outcasts are gathered; the hungry are filled with good things. The haughty Jewish Pharisees will have to see them come from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven, and they themselves thrust out. The gospel was promised to Abraham, saying, "In thee shall all nations be blessed," and this blessing is fulfilled to those who are gathered into Abraham's bosom. Here is the ministry of those angels, ministers who have the everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell on the earth Not only do they proclaim this gospel, but they carry out its provisions in their ministrations. They are constantly bearing those who have died unto sin, unto the law and all hope in themselves, into Abraham's spiritual family. As one whom his mother comforteth in Jerusalem, they shall be borne upon her sides and dandled upon her knees and shall be satisfied with the breasts of her consolation. I will be understood as recognizing Abraham's spiritual seed in the gospel church. The subjects, though they differ, are not broken nevertheless they live. But the rich man died and was buried. The Jews, as a nation, have ceased to live. All the interest, beauty and organization of the Jewish worship have perished. In the state of death in which they are held there seems to be still some consciousness. They are not only conscious of their own death and burial, but also of some other things.

The term hell here seems to imply no more than the state of death, or consignment to the grave, in which we now find them, waiting, hoping and longing for a resurrection that will never come to them. They are conscious that the Gentiles, and those very ones that were leprous at their gate, are gathered into Abraham's house, and that they are rejoicing in the blessings. At least they see that the Gentiles are satisfied that it is so. As for themselves, they are in torment. They see that they are thrust out. The vitality of their dispensation is perished, and they are buried beneath all the nations of the earth. In their distress they fain would get comfort from Abraham, or from the promise made to him, if they could. I presume if gospel ministers could assure them of a restoration and a future son of David, they would gladly accept it as a drop of cooling water.

There is a gulf fixed between gospel provisions and legalists. Abraham did not fix it there, neither did any of his seed; but it is fixed, and so it has ever been. They cannot pass that if they would. Natural sympathy may be exhilated, but Abraham can never send the blessing across that gulf.

It will be observed that the rich man called Abraham father, and Abraham recognized him as son. "Abraham said, Son, remember," &c.

As to the five brethren mentioned, what I have said goes to show that legalists do not consist of Jews only, but that there is a family of them The numbers five and seven are frequently used in the Scriptures in a kind of general or indefinite sense, simply meaning a great number. Those who are of the faith of faithful Abraham know that sinners are not brought to the knowledge and love of truth by one raised from the dead.

A PLEA FOR THE FATHERS.

BY REV. E. M. ARGYLE.

MR. EDITOR:—Some of the brilliant writers of the RECORDER are airing their fluency in advising the legislators of African Methodism what should be done, and what ought not to be done; some say that the number of Bishops should not be augmented, others say that it is best to let the Church remain as it is, i. e., with her ten Bishops; that is after the places of Bishops Dickerson, Cain and Shorter have been filled. But the subject that interests us most is this. The other day the writer overheard a conversation between two eminent divines, when one of them spoke up and said, "That at our next General Conference, we are going to make a great change; we are going to elect new Bishops; we are going to have active young men to fill out the Bench of Bishops; we are going to elect men that will investigate the Jewish dispensation some crumbs of encouragement and hope for such beggars as Lazarus, and the word places them at that gate.

"And it came to pass that the beggar died." That is always something that comes to pass, and the angels do not commence their ministry until this death takes place.

Abraham's bosom would not imply a place to be admitted as one of Abraham's seed, but a peculiarly intimate or two-fold relationship as an heir of the blessings that the natural seed failed to inherit. POPULAR EDUCATION IN MISSISSIPPI.

No. 2

BY REV. H. W SPEARMAN.

In my first letter I spoke of our public school system as it used to work As under the old system it was impossible to obtain anything like uniform improvement in the public schools, it became necessary to make a change. A change has been made, and for the better—of course there are many objections to our present system and not a few of them well founded; but that is a great improvement over the former system admits of easy proof.

The method for examining and ascertaining the qualification of teachers compares favorably with any teacher. No one desiring to become a public educator can object to having his qualifications fairly tested; and no one that fails fairly to pass examination ought to be a public school teacher. Teachers are classified thus: first, second and third grade. Examinations are held in September and May each year. All who pass examination are licensed for one year to teach in the free public schools of the State. All applicants for teacher's license must pass a written examination and answer at least 75 per cent of the questions asked for whatever grade he applies for. The requirement for a first grade license is a thorough and practical knowledge of U. S. history, geography, higher arithmetic, grammar, composition, elementary physiology and elementary natural philosophy. The pay for this grade ranges from $25 to $55 per month, the average being about $45.

While many a colored teacher has been sent from the school room to the cotton patch, there are more first grade colored teachers than ever before, because the system of examination is fairer and mind is made to count. While it may be doubted if the framers of the present law had the good of the colored people in their minds when it was framed, it is a certain fact that they have been greatly benefitted by the change. It has been said by many, and it may be true, that our legislators intended in the present law to give negro schools and negro teachers in this State a deathblow. It proves to be a stimulus.

DOTS FROM LEXINGTON, KY.

BY REV. J. M. TURNER.

The A. M. E. Church here is alive once more. The members say that it has been some years since this church had a revival. After five weeks of prayer to the Lord for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit, the Lord did answer our prayers and twenty-seven happy souls were added to the church, making thirty-three since conference. Bro. Paul is alive and moving along under a bright sun. Under God we hope to do a grand work this conference year. We must raise a hundred dollars Dollar Money, twenty dollars for missions, twenty dollars for education and pay off five hundred and fifty cents on the parsonage. Brethren, the pastor will be paid off. Rev. G. H. Burke, presiding elder, is giving satisfaction on the district and all the churches are at peace, and some of them fast asleep. Awake, thou that sleepest and Christ will give thee light." The General Conference cannot do all they say. Think of fourteen Bishops for 500 000 members. Do away with Presiding Elder system; break up the district and route the Bishops. Last, sell shares to raise money for church extension. Let us pray that God may guide the General Conference in the right in enacting such laws as will bless the Church. May the great Head of the Church help the coming General Conference in my prayer.

WOMEN DELEGATES.

The next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be held in New York city, commencing on the 1st of May. One of the important matters to be decided is: Shall women be delegates in the several Conferences? Each of the preachers in charge has ever been elected a lay delegate to fill this office, but already several prominent and able ladies have been elected to the next Conference, prominent among whom is Miss Frances E. Willard, President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. That they will be admitted there is little doubt, for the minister who will vote against the election of such able and distinguished Christian workers, simply because they are women, will have a rough road before him after Conference. That there will be opposition by some of the old slow-coach divines is expected, but they may as well then make up to be unsuperannuated. This is an age of progression, and it is in keeping with the spirit of the present, as woman is now brought to the front in educational matters; and especially in the speaker or worker in the temperance cause that will compare with the W. C. T. U. By all means give the Marys and Marthas of our holy religion a seat in the Conference. Then shall be in woman's sphere, and the effective worker.—Mifflinburg Times, Jan. 28, 1888.

MANHOOD FIRST.

In an article some weeks since on, "Who Shall Fill the Offices?" the Advocate referred to a well-nominated candidate for high official position in the church, concerning whom a friend has said that if he did not get the place he aspired to, his "heart would break;" and we have known a letter to be written, we fancy by this same candidate—for we can hardly conceive two such weaklings in the race for office at the same moment—in which he so demeans himself in bidding for the vote of a delegate to General Conference as to sink his self-respect, one would think, too deeply for him to recover it again in his natural lifetime, though he should live to the age of Methuselah.

Now we are simply lookers-on in the contest for place, without personal bias or ambition, we wish to say that, in our view, the first essential requisite for any high official position in the church like ours is manhood. We would be almost as slow to give our vote for a man who could shed tears in public (or private) because he was not elected to this or that place, or who could write stupid letters to voters for their suffrages, whether with his own hand or by the hand of friends, or who could give fecal society grips to make himself solid with men who saw in him no other proofs of eligibility for the place which he sought, or who would do anything else that is not square and manly and upright, as we would to vote for a person with any other immoral taint. If we cannot have learned men in our places of trust in the church, if we cannot have men of broad views and large conceptions of Christian work, let us at least have men with a sufficient measure of manhood to restrain them from such manifestations of desire for place as we have referred to.

We once talked with a man who was perhaps as likely to be named for the highest office in the church as any man we know of, asking him what his feelings were in view of his possible nomination for the place, when he remarked: "I have nothing to say. If the church wants me for that or any other position in her gift, she has only to go on and put me in that position. I shall never move in the matter myself." That is what we mean by manhood, a willingness to wait till the church signifies her desire in the premises. It is time that self-seekers were ruled out of place within the gift of our ecclesiastical councils. Let us have men; modest, conscientious, Christian men; men who can wait till they are called to posts of honor which an apostle might covet, but which no apostle would ever stoop to name himself for. Let it be understood that wire pullers and vote solicitors and men whose "hearts would break" if they failed of election, shall be let alone severely by those who have the choosing of men to "fill our offices."—Michigan Christian Advocate.

THE JAMES FORTEN SCHOOL.

The James Forten School on Sixth street has been significantly unfortunate in having that institution which is necessary to draw to it the children of parents who demand moral discipline as well as educational facilities. Morality divorced from book learning in the education of the effect. Both must be blended to get the highest results in shaping the minds of pupils for battling in a practical world. One grave defect in the Sixth street school has been that no effort has ever been made to rouse the ambition of its pupils beyond its own precincts and environment. Through years of instruction not one pupil, either boy or girl, has been sent into the examinations for admission into the High School, or the Girl's Normal School, and consequently the James Forten School has never had a representation in the highest departments of our public school system. Just why this has been the case, it would probably be difficult to say, but the fact remains that the proper ambition of the pupils has never been stimulated by examples in the past. Teachers and do away with the tediousness of the dry facts of grammar and arithmetic. The recent appointment of Mr. Thomas E. Murray to the principalship of the school promises to obviate many difficulties above briefly enumerated. He is the only capable in all the qualifications necessary for bringing the school up to a high standard, both through his scholastic training and by an experience of a number of years in teaching. It, however, remains with the parents of the children in the school district to make his efforts fruitful by helping to bring the school up in attendance and by rendering other aid that will make it an honor to themselves and to the man whose name it bears.—Phila. Sentinel.

The Massachusetts State Board of Education complains that the Roman Catholic parochial schools of that State do not come up to the standard of instruction required by the commonlaw. Well, what of it? Why should Roman Catholics regard or obey any laws about schools? And where are their parochial schools to come up to the educational standards of worship have perished. In the state of death in which they are held there seems to be still some consciousness. They are not only conscious of their own death and burial, but also of some other things.

The term hell here seems to imply no more than the state of death, or consignment to the grave, in which we now find them, waiting, hoping and longing for a resurrection that will never come to them. They are conscious that the Gentiles, and those very ones that were leprous at their gate, are gathered into Abraham's house, and that they are rejoicing in the blessings. At least they see that the Gentiles are satisfied that it is so. As for themselves, they are in torment. They see that they are thrust out. The vitality of their dispensation is perished, and they are buried beneath all the nations of the earth. In their distress they fain would get comfort from Abraham, or from the promise made to him, if they could. I presume if gospel ministers could assure them of a restoration and a future son of David, they would gladly accept it as a drop of cooling water.

There is a gulf fixed between gospel provisions and legalists. Abraham did not fix it there, neither did any of his seed; but it is fixed, and so it has ever been. They cannot pass that if they would. Natural sympathy may be exhilated, but Abraham can never send the blessing across that gulf.

It will be observed that the rich man called Abraham father, and Abraham

BISHOP CAMPBELL'S EASTER CALL.

The Easter anniversary will soon be here. Already the great Churches of the world are making preparations for its celebration. The Episcopal and Roman Catholic denominations are again selecting the grandest music and training their choirs to send forth in lofty strains the joyful anthems that "the Lord is risen indeed" This is one of the strongholds of the Church, for, "If the Lord be not risen your hope is vain." Nor would we have our Church be negligent on the subject; and to this end the Rev. J. M. Townsend, Secretary of the Home and Foreign Missionary Society, has prepared in the Missionary Gem an appropriate programme to be observed by our Church and Sabbath schools. It is to be hoped that none throughout the connection will fail to send for them, as they are to be had free upon application. The matter in them is in part in the work of Bishop D. A. Payne, Revs. L. J. Coppin and C. S. Smith. The hymns are good; the responsive reading inspiring, and the catechism instructive, forming a complete Easter Service. No part of our Church can be left out.

Altogether, in our mind a more fitting day is not in the Church calendar for a missionary collection than that which bears the significance to "go tell all nations." Therefore the Secretary has so arranged it with a call for TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS on that day. Other churches have a special work in China, Japan, Sandwich Islands, etc., but ours is the work and conflict of the Negro in the West Indies and the Western Coast of Africa, with the hope that we may gain entrance to the interior where thousands of our people are dying without a knowledge of a Saviour.

The TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS can be well appropriated by our missionaries now in active service—say, $5 000 for Africa, $2,5.0 for San Domingo, and $2,500 for Hayti.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE.

The committee reported to investigate the rumor concerning the Rev. F. Ellis, pastor of Bethel A. M. E. Church, Centerville, Camden county, N. J., reports him not guilty. The committee consisted of Revs. J. W. Cooper, of Burlington Station; T. A. V. Henderson, presiding Elder of the Camden Circuit; Rev. Mr. Morgan, of Salem Station, and the presiding elder. The evidence in the case was unfounded. Those who wish to attack the religious and moral character of the minister should understand what they are doing and not fabricate what they are not able to sustain, and then say "You elders and preachers are all alike." We wish the public to know that we have a special regard for the moral purity of the Church, but things must come to us in the right way. This we say in defence of the Church generally.

GEO. M. WITTEN, P. E.,
5th Dist., New Jersey Annual Con.

Rev. George A. Mills, Morristown, N. J., writes: This has been a very pleasant conference year to us and especially for the last month. The Lord has been pleased to make himself felt in our protracted effort and the outcome is 23 conversions and 20 joined on probation—all young people—with prospect of more. By God's blessing we have received this year, so far, 28 additions to the church in Morristown.

ANOTHER HAS FALLEN IN ISRAEL.

MR. EDITOR:—On Friday, December 30th, 1887, I received a telegram from Presiding Elder S. Rice, of Albuquerque, New Mexico, announcing the death of Rev. W. W. Mowlin, of Santa Fe, New Mexico, and asking me to meet him at the charge of the deceased. The train being two hours late, at 10:30 o'clock P. M I was off for Santa Fe, meeting with Elder Rice at Lamy Junction, we went together to the charge of the late deceased. We were met by Mrs. Mary Parsons, who guided us to the parsonage of the bereaved family. Sister Bowlin and four children, with others of the members of the church, which lamented the loss of such a kind and affectionate husband, father and most beloved pastor such as Brother Bowlin was. Brother Bowlin departed this life December 29, '87, at 8:10 P. M, in full triumph of faith in Jesus. He said to his wife at about 3 o'clock before his death, "It is death then." If this is death it is the sweetest I ever saw." He had talked much about his death to tell them he was prepared to go. Rev. J. V. Bowlin was born in 1841; was 46 years and a few months old. He had been a member of the A. M. E. Church for years and served as a local preacher; was used as supply in the Indiana, Iowa and Missouri Conferences. He joined the Kansas Conference of the A. M. E. Church as an itinerant preacher at Lincoln, Neb., September, 1886. At the division of conference he fell to the Colorado Annual Conference and met it at the first session at Denver, Col., September, 1887, and was appointed to the charge, where he died after about three months' service at this place.

During his short stay he added six to the church, two being converts. The funeral services took place in Rice's Chapel, Santa Fe, New Mexico, Dec 31st. The services were begun by your humble writer by announcing hymn on page 579, which was followed by a fervent prayer by the pastor of the Presbyterian Church. A most appropriate sermon was preached by Elder Rice. Remarks were made by the pastors of the churches. Brother L. O. More, of the M. E. Church, who was present at the bedside when he died, made some interesting remarks. We are happy to say this church is in a better spiritual condition than any of our churches in this territory to day. The people speak in high terms of the efforts of Brother Bowlin, both while and after he died, and regret much his speedy death. Their loss is his eternal gain. Well done, thou good and faithful servant; rest from thy labors, enter the joys of thy Lord. J. H. WALTON, Pastor.

Richard G. Loudon, a member of Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church, died February 17th, being about 40 years of age. He was born in Washington, D. C., but had lived in Trenton, N. J., some years. Although he had been sick about one year, he endured his suffering with much fortitude and Christian patience, and died in great peace. The funeral was largely attended; the sermon was preached by Rev. Wm. H. Brown, Rev. Dr. Hartman, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. W. Thomas Biddle, of the A. M. E. Zion Church, assisting. A wife, mother, four sisters and two brothers are left to mourn his loss.

Mrs. Mary M. Johnson departed this life February 18th, and was buried on the 23d, from her late residence, 619 Pine St., Philadelphia, aged 67 years. She leaves two children to lament her loss. Mrs. Eliza Thomas and Mrs Tobias Maxfield. She was one of the oldest members of Mt. Holly A. M. E. Church before her death. She chose for her text, "As a cloud cometh up and passeth away," etc.—Job 7, 6. She also chose for officiating ministers the following persons: Rev. Geo. M. Witten, who had been her pastor for four years, and the Rev. J. H. Bean, who had been her pastor for two years. She died in the triumph of faith.

NOTICE.

To the ministers of the Pittsburg Annual Conference: You are hereby requested to call the attention of your congregations to the assessment made at the last annual conference at Parkersburg, W. Va., in the interest of the delegates to the General Conference. The assessments laid upon each appointment in the Pittsburg Annual Conference will be found on page 21 of the minutes. These collections are amongst required of you and send it to the district steward, W. S. Lowry, P. E., No. 135 James St., Allegheny City Pa. Send the money and address to Rev. J. C. Embry, 631 Pine St., Philadelphia, Pa. By doing so, you will save collecting at the next annual conference $3.00. Where the brethren have sent on and paid for the paper, as I am going to do to-day, of course you will not collect. This will be shown by receipts from Manager Embry.

Yours, faithfully,
J. GRANT,
Recording Sec'y of the conference held at Bastrop, Tex., December 15, 1887.

THE FUNERAL MONTH OF MARCH.

An observant metropolitan barber says that he can tell one's physical condition by the state of the hair.

The Bible tells us that with his hair gone Samson lost his strength. The Romans considered baldness a serious affliction and Julius Cæsar was never quite satisfied with himself because his poll was bare.

The face, however, is the open book and one can readily trace in its various expressions, lines, changes and complexion the state of the system.

The eye that is unusually bright and yet has a pallid brightness, the face upon whose cheeks nature paints a rose of angular beauty and flush, more merciful in contrast with the alabaster appearance of the forehead and nose and lower part of the face, is one of those whom the skilled physician will tell you will some day dread the funeral month of March, because it is then that consumption reaps its richest harvest. Consumption may tell no lie issued by this that and the other thing, by microbes in the air, by microorganisms in the blood, by deficient nutrition, by a thousand and one things, but whatever the cause, decay begins with a cough and the remedy that will effectually stop the cause of that cough cures the disease of the lungs.

That is all there is of it.

The cough is an evidence of a wasting. To stop it effectually, a remedy must be used that will search out the cause, remove that and then heal the lung and do away with the cough. This is the power, special to itself, possessed alone by Warner's Log Cabin Cough and Consumption remedy. This is no new-fangled notion of narcotics and poisons, but an old fashioned preparation of balsams, roots and herbs, such as was used by our grandmothers many years ago, the formula of which has been secured exclusively by the present manufacturers at great trouble and expense. It is not a mere cough dryer. It is a system-searcher and upbuilder and a consumption expellant. Where others fail, it wins, because it gets at the constitutional cause and removes it from the system.

J. W. Heusaw of Greensboro, Pa., on Jan. 16 1888, reported that "he had derived more real benefit for the length of time, from Warner's Log Cabin Cough and Consumption remedy than he had for years from the best state physicians."

If you have a cough, night sweats, positive assurance in your own mind that you, even you, have consumption, and yet lose flesh, appetite, courage, as your lungs waste away, you may know that soon the funeral month of March will claim you, unless promptly and faithfully you use the article named. If other remedies have failed try this one thoroughly. If others are offered, insist the more on trying this unequaled preparation.

Some persons are prone to consumption and they should never allow the disease to become seated.

OUR CENTENNIAL RETURNS.

In the list of names and amounts given below, we come to the end. We wish every pastor to scan the report and see that it is correct, and that it corresponds with the amount mentioned in his receipt from us. We cannot give the names of officers and churches in every case and do not care half of them were sent in, and while the whole amount raised is less than half what we reasonably hoped for, we tender our heartiest thanks to the pastors and churches who generously raised the money sent us. BISHOP WAYMAN, at the request of presiding elders, has deferred the day of opening the Baltimore Conference to April 18th, instead of date previously given. See Conference calendar.

OUR EASTER COLLECTION comes early this year; hence preparation must be rapid and strong. There are only a few weeks between now and the first Sunday in April. Make ready, is the order of Dr. Townsend.

ANYONE knowing who are the Nova Scotia delegates elected to General Conference, we shall be glad to insert them in the list; as the list forwarded by Bishop Disney was misplaced. Since writing the above, the duplicate list has been received.

THE ARTICLE from Brother Carson is published in shridged form. We notice that the Southern Recorder publishes it in full, with explanations that are reasonable, bnt with remarks relative to the regard that obnrshes should pay to desisions of civil courts that are not nearly so reasonable. "Bosh" is an easily uttered word.

OUR DEPARTMENT has just completed the Columbia Conference minutes, the largest, and, we believe, the neatest book of annual conference minutes getten out in our Church. The composition of the tables alone, at regular rates, was worth $54 It is nice work, brethren; turn your minutes over to our Publication Department. Try us.

THERE IS to be a grand union concert given in Association Hall, Philadelphia, March 30, under the anapices of the Morris Brown Mission and Allen Chapel. The people of Philadelphia and vicinity always expect to help Elder Coppin fill halls when he calls; Brother Temple will be satisfied if Association Hall is filled for Brother Coppin, as the entire proceeds go to Morris Brown.

WE PUBLISH this week the last article of Rev. W. G. Alexander endorsing "More Bishops" Is the article published last preceding this we committed an error, omitting the words, $20,000 per annum for church extension. According to Brother Alexander, Dr. Johnson "has prepared both clerical and lay delegates to do their duty at the ensuing General Conference." This is comfortieg news for the Church.

WHAT A pleasure to ride all the way from Philadelphia to Jacksonville and return, a gentleman; no one questioning it; at least notil we were about to leave Washington on route for home, when a lady(?) remarked, "Just to think, two big niggers just ie front of me; each occupying a whole seat. Just look at 'em," speaking to a person ont on the platform. She left the train at Baltimore. If she had never left it the seats would not have grown too large for us.

THE REV. W. H. DAVIS, pastor at Darby, Pa., has been shnndantly successful in this year's work. His cherches seem to love him and God blesses his work. Already between forty and fifty persons have been converted. Elder Davis' management of revival meetings might be imitated with advantage by hundreds of our chnrches. He has the happy knowledge of the true secret between the two extremes in our Church relative to the emotional and the intellectnal developments in religion, and how to use them together.

THE PHILADELPHIA TIMES was at the pains the other day to "boot" at the probability of color prejndice entering into the verdict and judgment by which Samuel Johnson was declared guilty of murder in the first degree. The "boot" may be well directed, but a regular practicing white physician in Pennsylvania said, after the original verdict at Media, that he was not strongly in favor of capital punishment, bnt that in respect to such a case as Johnson, he did not know that he would interfere about pardon, whether or not he was guilty. At least one man, prejndiced either against Johnson's class, whether regulated by color condition does not appear, regarded his life nnworthy of saving, though no cause for death existed. There are many of this wretched class, like that physician.

THE FOLLOWING card shows the widespread influence the RECORDER exerts and the extent of territory it traverses. An inquiry about a lost brother from North Carolina brings the welcome answer from Illinois. It must be remembered that no charge is made for these notices, and that we only accommodate actual subscribers. Thus, if an inquiry is desired to be inserted by a non-subscriber, it must be accompanied by the cash for a yearly subscription to the RECORDER. By this means the paper obtains a still wider and more useful circulation and the subscriber not only gets his paper for a year, but also gets an advertisement, worth at least five or six dollars, as a premium:

HICKORY, N. C., February 28, 1888.

REV. J. C. EMBRY:

DEAR SIR:—I drop you a card to let you know that I have found my brother by the advertisement in your paper, with many thanks to you for it. A lady in Kansas wrote to him in Chicago of the notice.

Yours,
ALFRED HAWKINS.

RECENT observations at conferences lead us to make the remark that annual conferences can scarcely be too careful in exercising the function of legislators. While they may doubtless pass certain laws relating to their own actions while in session as a conference, and the development of certain trusts and responsibilities, self-assumed, in their field, they certainly should not pass any resolutions establishing laws or rules of action with sanctions conflicting with constitutional or statutory laws of the Church. What right has a conference to resolve that any brother failing to report a given amount of money for contingent funds or educational purposes shall be left without an appointment? Any and all such actions on the part of conferences tend to create dissatisfaction and general trouble. No conference can enforce such rule without laying itself liable to censure by the General Conference. Arbitrary regulation of men in any government should be the very last resort.

THE ARTICLE of Rev. G. W. Nicholson, as well as that of Rev. H. H. King, expresses some very serious thoughts—thoughts that should awaken in the Church grave feelings. Pnt with many other thonghts, it makes it questionable whether, while we are attempting to rescue Hayti from the hand of Catholicism and a little part of Africa from the grasp of heatheeism; while we are theorising about the character and the nnmber of Bishops to be elected; while we are exercising ourselves about the onion consummated between our Church and the B. M. E. Church and the speculative union between our Church and the A. M. E. Z. Church—we say it is questionable whether, is all war of words and large arrangements, we are progressing as we should do, at home and on the gronnd occupied for nearly a century.

Our home mission work is not as systematically supported as it might be. The missionary percentage is not used as fully and wisely as it might be used. The most of our home missionaries must toil a whole year on very indefinite grounds as to support. Sometimes, after they have done a heroic and consecrated year's work, they come to conference to receive bnt $2.50 or $5 00 There is too much liberty taken in some cases in the dishnrsement of the moneys that should go to missionaries. There could be $10,000 more distributed amoeg our home missionaries than is done, our home missionary system being properly respected.

OUR GOOD FRIEND, Dr. Albert, of the Southeastern Christian Advocate, in an editorial referring to the improbability of nnion between the A. M. E. and A. M E. Z. Churches, attributes the cause largely to the fact that the nnion would lessen the nnmber of officers by one-half. That is, he thinks as others have thought, that the anxiety to be Bishops keeps able ministers on either side from pushing the subject to its utmost standing. Bnt if he takes the pains to inquire he will find quite as large a ratio of elders as of Bishops in favor of the union. The fact is, there are many graver questions than the Southwestern mentions, in the way of union. The greatest of all is that the masses on either side have probably thought very little about it. The second is like unto it; the two Churches are unprepared for union in the very particulars and principles upon which unions could be effected. Shon'd they ever really want union, for Christ's sake and the good of mankind, the matter of name, episcopal quality, excellence of quality and similar minor facts will occupy them but for a moment.

There are many on both sides who do not see that the union, effected now, would give to the peoples included nearly the advantage that many others think must, of necessity, follow. We are, as the two race varieties in the M. E. Church in this country seem to think of their cases, doing more good separated than we would united. There is really much less reason in the M. E. and M. E. Sonth remaining separate than in our doing so. Their failure encourages us to fail. Let them unite; we should likely follow. Or, Brother Albert, let the M. E and and A. M. E. nnite.

WE HAVE received a copy of "Morgan's History of the New Jersey Conference of the A. M. E. Church," cloth bound. The work is on fair paper and in large type, containing 254 pages. The author merits the thanks of the present generation, as he will doubtless have of succeeding generations, for the pains and expense to which he has gone to publish this work, containing biographical sketches, records of the establishment of the respective societies included, pastoral succession, tables of places and times, Bishops and secretaries of conferences; valuable reports, and so forth. The introdnction is by Dr. B. T. Tanner. There are some humiliating facts in the body of the book, bnt the author gives them to the world as he found them. Instance: When the conference was fonrteen years old it reported but 163 more members than at the time of its organization. In its first year it seems to have lost 220 members, and from '77 to '78, 234 members; from '84 to '86, it gained 2 members. To those who have noticed the recklessness characterising some ministers relative to some of the facts entering into conference reports, this is not strange; to those who have seen how reports of members have been contracted to make the ratio of Dollar Money collected seem large, this is not strange.

There is many a bit of precious history in this book; especially to those who are more or less intimately connected with the Church in New Jersey.

We could wish the author had been more careful in reference to the English construction, the orthography and the spelling of facts, bnt withal he has done what every one is glad to see accomplished. His work is well worth its price, $1.25 Adress Rev. J. H. Morgan, Salem, N. J.

BETWEEN Savannah and Jacksonville, February 22nd, we met the President's special train on its way to Florida. In the morning we had left Jacksonville all alive with anticipations of a visit from the nation's Chief Executive. The pine, the palmetto, the myrtle and the laurel, the orange plant, flower and fruit, mosses and banting had challenged art and skill to arrange them in cunning devices and significant expressions; festoons and arches, mottoes and wellcomes were woven ont of them. Bay street fairly spoke, like a living thing, the warmth of Florida's heart; yet the whole was the utterance, the expression of Florida. How different from Pennsylvania's demonstrations. Everything in the former case is soft, easy and submissive. In the latter there is a peculiar vigor and energy in every arrangement and movement that look stable and progressive. It is the difference of sand and granite; of winter orange blossoms and winter ice harvesting. Both are beautiful. To the President and Mrs. Cleveland the visit seemed to have been most agreeable. Our train was anticipating meeting the President's train from the time we left Jacksonville till we came np to it near "Jessnps," where we went off on a "siding" to allow the Executive's train to pass. Many stepped off into the sands to wave handkerchiefs, newspapers and hats. The President, on the rear platform, acknowledged the salutations with uncovered head and very slight nod. Mrs. Cleveland sat at a window, giving us a fair, a full view of her; yet some passengers, who had probably never noticed any one of the thonsands of pictures of the lady of the White House, said, after the train had passed, "I'd a liked to 'a seen her; 'd good 'eal rather seen her 'n him." Evidently the President's visit to the Sonth has helped his cause. The "Hail to the Chief," "Jacksonville rejoices to day," "Welcome to our Sunny Sonth," arching the streets of Jacksonville were doubtless ontgushes of true and simple appreciation and were as simply and purely appreciated by the President.

THE CASE of Rev. W. H. Heard before the Inter State Commission has been settled about as was that of Prof. W. H. Conneil, on the Commission's declaring that for the same price all travelers shall have like conveniences, comforts and protection. This says nothing against the outrage of being thrust into a given car because of the mere fact of color, bnt stipulates that said railroad companies may compel colored persons to ride in separate cars. It does not require great wisdom to observe that this is, in itself, a bar to equal accommodations. A colored and a white man may be glad to travel together in one car for business sake; they may be glad to do so for friendship sake; they may be glad to do so on other grounds. Two men on any commission of Church or State may be inclined to ride together. Bnt, whatever the claim, this gracious committee says if railroads chose to say they shall not do so, the federal law is satisfied. Superficial observers who favor this decision or are indifferent to it, say, "Well, it restricts against white persons as much as against black persons," bnt this is not so.

Every white man knows that, as a matter of fact, the law does not mean to keep him from the colored man's presence. Every colored man knows this also; hence feels himself degraded by the government that he is bound to respect and defend. Admitting that this is a big step from the smoking cars, it is also a big step from the proper position. It gives us some ground on which to speak back to the white man, but we want to be relieved from the embarrassment of fighting for legal and national rights.

In Florida, where half of a given car on each train is allotted to colored passengers, we observed a colored woman assert her rights and force six white men ont of that precious apartment. They demurred, bnt she was uncompromising and told them they should get out, saying, "If I get in your car you soon put me out; now you've got to get out of here." It was in vain that one of them replied, "Madame, I have no objection to your sitting in my car; you can sit in my parlor if you like." She continued to belabor them till the conductor came through, then told him, "These men must go ont of here." They went ont.

Limited rights are better than no rights, bnt we demand all rights accorded to other travelers, and we expect to get them.

IT IS EVIDENT to all who have studied the subject that we must no longer measure our work for any quadrennium by our enthusiasm. Our educational status is as plain a warning on this subject as we could ask. In enthusiasm we could establish dozens of schools, but the perpetuation of schools depends upon continuous effort, harmony and cash. Faith and enthusiasm have their place, but patronage must be counted in.

Our educational department is not properly arranged. We have not arranged it so as to enable the Secretary to reap such results as all would like to see flowing from the work of the department. The multiplication of schools goes on and the weakness of the going follows. The great opportunity offered to our Church to foster and strengthen the State educational movements in the South seems scarcely to be seen; yet in it is our opportunity to acquire a master hold of the children of our race variety. Our ministry, by attending to the election of school officers and school teachers; noticing the individual and social character of persons appointed to teach and securing the strength of our societies, districts or conferences in educating capable and loyal African Methodist persons as teachers, can greatly enhance education among colored people, and at the same time supply many districts with competent African Methodist teachers. Besides this, we can do much toward extending terms of schooling by conlribnting to school funds in places where they are only three or four months long. Our local churches can aid industrial schools like the one located in Montgomery, Ala., in such way as to accomplish great good. Each of our conferences could easily establish a common school—more easily than all can establish a university. Think for a moment of a school under the auspices of one conference or district, conducted, if possible, under the school system of its locality, as respects order and drawing moneys from the public funds, where practicable, but having fully nine months guaranteed, teaching the English branches and also maintaining an industrial annex; the teacher being selected by the conference. There are hundreds of communities that would be glad of such arrangements.

Two or three good theological schools should be maintained and our conferences should force our young men into them as fast as possible, by supporting them in part; rarely fully. Instead of giving to the Church from one to six trained ministers annually, our schools should give it from twenty to fifty.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.

To all who know themselves indebted to the Book Concern this notice is kindly sent with our greeting:

WHEREAS Our term of service as Manager is nearly closing, and whereas it is our duty, as well as our desire, to settle up all the business of our term in a just and satisfactory manner, so that our successor may be untrammeled by unadjusted claims, either for or against the Concern;

We therefore notify all persons who have contracted bills with us that full settlement must be made in cash or note, acceptably endorsed, before the 10 h of April proximo. As our quadrennial report will be closed on the 15th of that month our friends can readily see the urgency of this request.

First, To all who owe us, a bill of account will be sent before the 10th of March.

Second, When no response shall have been made to our bill, on the 1st of April such bill will be put in the hands of a collector with power to press the claim to settlement.

Third, Those who may not be able to pay up in full, may pay part of their bill and settle the balance by note (properly endorsed) or by "due bill," payable in one or two months. We will furnish in all cases the notes and bills to be signed or endorsed.

Fourth, All who may have open accounts against us for merchandize or anything (excepting notes and bonds) will please put in their statement by April 1st, that we may adjust and settle them by cash or note promptly. With hearty thanks to all who have given us patronage, and with Christian love and friendship to all, we remain, etc.

MARCH MAGAZINES.

THE CENTURY.

The recent negotiations of the city of Chicago for the purchase of the old Libby Prison brings Captain Frank E. Moran's Century article, on the escape of Col. Rose and his brave comrades through a tunnel constructed with almost the empty hands, into especial prominence.

The Lincoln history in the March number relates the stirring "call to arms" that awoke a people who had almost forgotten war, when secession began to crystalize at Fort Sumpter.

In poetry, engravings, history, humor, etc., the March Century is calculated to give back large returns for investment of time and money. The editorials and open letters are rich and edifying.

ST. NICHOLAS.

The March number opens with a beautiful engraving as frontispiece, "Bahia Stuarz," by T. Johnson. Our readers will be interested in the general make-up of this magazine. Those who have read St. Nicholas know that its excellence is uniform. Those who have not done so will find their families better trained by having the March number at once, and all subsequent numbers as they appear.

THE METHODIST REVIEW.

We call the special attention of our ministry, and reading laity as well, to the following papers in the Review: "Time Limits to the Pastorate," "The M E. Church in the South," and "The Atonement."

Personal.

—Bishop Wayman is at home.

—Dr. Tanner spent last Sunday in New York city.

—Mrs. M. B. Wilson is a good newspaper writer.

—Mrs Bishop Wayman has been sick three or four weeks.

—Rev. D. Ridont, of the Baltimore Conference, has been paralyzed.

—We are pleased to inform the Church that Bishop Brown still improves.

—Read Bishop Campbell's strong appeal in behalf of Easter Day work for missions.

—Prof D. W. Parvis, leader of Bethel choir, will sing at Association Hall March 30th.

—Bishop Ward's rallying notes in this number have a clear ring. He does nothing by halves.

—Rev. B. H. Williams, of the South Carolina Conference, drives a stylish horse named Bishop Allen.

—The Rev. J. J. Sawyer, one of the pioneers of our work in Florida, is able still to do something at stenography.

—Rev. R. F. Wayman, of the Baltimore Conference, has been seriously afflicted with rheumatism. He is improving.

—Rev. W. J Johnson, B D, besides paying off the debt on the Walnut Hills (O) Church, has been blest with a revival.

—Miss Mary A. Crawford, the Philadelphia elocutionist, will give readings in Association Hall, Philadelphia, March 30th.

—It is said that the Hon. J. M Langston is thoroughly in the race in Virginia for the National Congress. We trust he may win.

—The Rev. C. A. Mills, of Morristown, N J., has been blest with an extensive revival. Elder Mills' work is usually even, but strong and righteous.

—The Rev. A H. Mews and Mrs. Mews, of San Domingo, are guests of Dr. Townsend, in Richmond, Indiana. Elder Mews will remain on the Continent.

—Rev. M. E Bryant says if Dr. C S. Smith should he made Bishop, the Rev. R. M. Cheeks, B. D., would be a good man to make Secretary of the Sunday School Union.

—Rev. C. S Smith has purchased for the Sunday School Union a four-story brick building, with store front and basement, located near the centre of the business portion of Nashville, Tenn.

—The Hon Frederick Douglass was honored with a birthday reception by the Bethel Literary Association in Metropolitan A. M. E. Church, Washington, D. C., 28th ult., it being his seventy first birthday. It is well. Too great honors cannot be done men like Mr. Douglass, whose single correct acts cover his hundred faults. Our race variety—indeed, the American people—have by far too short time in which to acknowledge his services.

NOTICE BY THE MANAGER.

We again call the attention of the pastors and presiding elders to the form of Warranty Deed we have prepared and published for general use in the purchase of church properties. The form is simple, and plain as plain can be, yet it is believed to cover every point in the law. It was drawn by an old experienced attorney, with our Discipline before him. Price, 25 cents per copy, or 5 for $1.00.

OUR WOMAN'S COLUMN.

BY CATHARINE CASEY.

The memorial meeting to the glory of God and the memory of Mrs. Lydia O. Wears and Mrs Katie S. Beckett was held at Allen Chapel, Sabbath evening, 4th inst. The church was crowded and many had to stand in the aisles. The occasion was one long to be remembered. The contemplation of the example of these lives was full of profit and abiding consolation to the bereaved families, to the churches and the societies in which they had so faithfully and so unselfishly labored. Nor were the names of Mrs. Mossell, Mrs. Maria Shorter and Mrs. Julia Knight forgotten on this interesting occasion. The devoted and self-sacrificing labor of Mrs Mossell in the Island of Hayti was spoken of with deep feeling How true it is that one touch of sorrow makes the whole world kin, for the appearance of our venerable and beloved Bishop, with his noble wife and the bereaved husband, John Wesley Beckett, touched all hearts. Bnt I must not anticipate the full report of this interesting meeting, which will be given in next week's RECORDER.

I have long been impressed with the fact that if as many native African women as men had been sent to this country to be educated for mission work in Africa, the benefits reaped would have been a hundred-fold more than they are, and also promising young girls from the Islands of Hayti and San Domiego should be sent here to receive a Christian education and to be trained for the work in those historic countries There is no use in sending teachers to those countries who are not perfectly acquainted with the native language. Their teachers must be able to speak French and English, or Spanish and English, with equal facility, for they speak French in the Haytian part of the Island and Spanish in San Domingo. The ordinary smattering of these languages which young people get in this country is entirely insufficient for the purposes of easy and rapid illustration, which a teacher must always have at command. I earnestly hope, therefore, that we shall soon have some native African women sent to this country to be educated. None of these young people should be kept long enough to become humanized, as has been the case with some young men sent here. One young man that I heard of was disgusted with Africa when he returned home, and would not even stay long enough to go into the interior to see his poor old heathen mother. This young man may have had his head educated, but the finer qualities of his heart were more uncultivated than the country from which he came. The experience of the world has proven that woman is a powerful civilizing and educating force, therefore, for every boy sent from Africa or Hayti to be trained for missionary work, a girl should be sent, too. Three-fourths of the whole bee ness of teaching is now being done by women. They understand child nature better than men, and they are more patient and devoted

WORK WILL WIN THE DAY.

BY BISHOP T M. D WARD.

TO MY CONFERENCES:

The work of a Methodist preacher is never ended until he drops into the grave.

The Little Rock School, under the patronage of the three Arkansas conferences, needs $500 at once We have an excellent principal in the person of Professor Delany. He is building up a first-class school, assisted by Miss Murphy. The conferences did grandly, meeting all their notes and sweeping off nearly all the old debts; hnt where is the money to come from to pay teachers and meet current expenses between now and conference? The cost of teachers is only $30 per month. There are more than two hundred ministers to look after this school. A large sum was subscribed at some of the conferences. Then Mississippi and North Mississippi made us a handsome donation Will our brethren interested send five dollars now and then? Tell your people what it is for and they will give it freely and willingly. Try them. I trust them. If each pastor would send Professor A. D Delany, or Rev. I P. Howard, one dollar each month, we can tide over until conference; bnt the money must be forthcoming from some source continually. The little silver rills and greenback streams must never cease flowing Say the school shall live and the victory shall be our's.

What has been said of Bethel Institute is equally appl cable to Allen University. We have rising one thousand members in the State of South Carolina, and yet the school planied by Bishops Brown and Campbell and placed on a solid foundation by the lamented Dickerson, can scarcely breathe. Bishop Campbell has given me permission to call upon all South Carolina ministers to rally round Allen. Those two grand conferences will not permit Allen to die a miserably shitmely death for the want of good nursing. Let the men of those two giant conferences show their strength by raising one thousand dollars at once, this preparing to lift the three thousand dollar mortgage which hangs like a millstone around the neck of the college. To the rescue, men of the Palmetto State.

Don't forget your delegates, who will represent you at the General Conference See that their expenses are met.

Remember that Easter-tide is at the door. Let your offerings on that great historic day fill the hearts of our friends with joy. Let the choral strain reach the celestial choir and the liberal gift fill the golden censer and roll up like a cloud of incense toward that throne upon which the God of Missions sits. The kingdoms of this world must be brought to Christ. Hasten thy coming, thon Great Messiah. When the June bonds burst, let the little ones fill Children's Day with one prolonged, glad halleinjah

Will the pastors who have not already done so, place themselves upon record by doing something for the Centennial Fund. We have paid off nearly $1 500 of the debt, and did all our pastors do something, say each charge five dollars, we could cancel the last debt held against our Publishing House Will every pastor in our God favored Zion send his offering? Ten years ago the Southern Publishing House was in debt $200,000 All they owe to-day is $35,000. Can't we do the same? When every Bishop, pastor and member says yes, the work is done, deeds, not words, sweep off debts. Unity of action and not a divided council hnids up a powerful material interest. Work, wait, live, trust, hope and perseverance, and the work is done.

To the ministers and people of the Eighth Episcopal District, as well as the Philadelphia, New England and South Carolina Conferences: I again tender them my heartfelt acknowledgments for the many substantial expressions of sympathy they have shown me in the hour of deep, bitter, nnutterable anguish. Blessings descend and abide with my race, my Church and my fellowmen everywhere.

Press onward the foe be strong.

"Thrice armed" the victory shall be ours;
The millions who uphold the wrong
Shall quail before the Conqueror's power.

THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION A SHAM.

BY MRS M. POSIE CHEEKS.

The Constitution of the United States reads thus: "Sec. 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

The Fifteenth Amendment reads: "Sec 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

"Sec. 2 Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The negroes are citizens. They were made citizens by the above amendments to the Constitution. The amendments were ordained by the conjoined action of Congress and of a sufficient number of States to meet the constitutional requirement in such a case. The vital points in the amendments, so far as the negro's citizenship is concerned, are found in these amendments. The negroes are not only citizens in that they are entitled to complete protection under the laws in all their rights of person and property, but also citizens in that all males, twenty one years old, not disqualified by crime or other condition as that would disqualify a white man, are entitled to vote. Every negro man of lawful age, if otherwise qualified, has the same legal right to vote that the President of the United States has. Some one may ask why mention the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments. It is simply to let so many of our people who do not know what portion of the Constitution entitles them to a citizenship of the United States.

The Constitution entitled nearly one million men who had been slaves to vote before they could read In recognising the black man's vote is acknowledging him a citizen; his vote is of as much benefit to the aspirant as any other, for now his vote is sought in the South, yea, and throughout the country. Candidates are courting the black man to day for his vote in the coming election In the eyes, as to the election, at least, "a negro is as good as a white man," if not somewhat better; but after election is over, then comes the fag of war. That seeming cordiality has disappeared; the negro, like the "spider and the fly," allured in the candidates' den, his vote is gained and he is left to "paddle his own canoe." In many cases it is paddled. Discriminately he is jailed, murdered, assassinated and lent to the gallows upon suspicion more than upon guilt. A proof of this is the criminals' blackening method; many have done heinous crimes and blackened themselves to escape punishment. Of course, when the criminal is sought, in many cases he is said to be a "nigger," while a few will detect it as of another race. And why is this? It is because every man, race and nation is given the protection the Constitution calls for but the poor down trodden and despised negro. Doesn't this prove the Constitution a sham? The white man says the negro has no right that he is bound to respect, and the Constitution upholds him in this belief; but the black man has a right that the white man is bound to respect, and to live where it pleases him and to vote as it pleases him, so long as he obeys the law, are two of these rights. The Constitution is a sham in its protection to the negro citizens of America. All institutions, charitable as well as those of learning, are barred against the negro. All can find refuge, protection and succor in these United States but the negro, although a citizen and voter, entitled to the protection of the laws. And yet can anyone tell us how much of this liberty and protection we receive; and can any one say how often Congress has enforced this article by appropriate legislation?

Oregon, N. Y.

"HOW CAN THIS THING BE?"

BY REV. G. H. WADE.

MR. EDITOR:—I heartily endorse what Rev. E. H. Harper, of Lake Forest, said as to the spiritual condition of the church at Racine and Lake Forest; but must confess that I cannot see how the Sunday school at Racine is increased ninety per cent., which would say that it is ninety per cent. larger than when I left it in July last, when it was attended by an average of twenty-five pupils. How can it be that he has a ninety per cent. larger Sunday school? I also left a flourishing Sunday school at Lake Forest, whose teachers and superintendent were white, of an average of at least thirty-five pupils. How can this school have a fifty per cent better school when I had all the children there were in town? A man should not attempt to elevate himself as a Christian fellow traveler by misrepresenting the former pastor. Dr. Townsend said to me, by way of card, that we sent him more Missionary Money than any school of its size. We sent a larger collection to Dr. Smith Children's Day. If these schools have increased ninety and fifty per cent., then the inference is that we had no school at all, otherwise, "how can it be?"

MANAGER'S NOTICE

We are just receiving from the binder a fresh lot of Hymn Books in cloth, sheep, roan and gilt, and, as business is dull just at this season, and we have some stiff bills to meet in February and March, we have resolved to offer churches, choirs and presiding elders this new lot of six hundred copies at a great reduction from regular rates for the next sixty days. One dozen cloth bound for $7.20; one dozen sheep bound for $8 40; one dozen roan (black), for $9 60; six extra roan gilt for $7.00, and a corresponding reduction on morocco of any class. Now, please send on your orders at once. Do not wait until they are all gone, and then complain that we cease selling at the same rate. Remember, there are only 600 copies at this rate, and the first that come will be the first served.

Remember, also, that we sell the People's Hymn Book, a small, cheap, excellent work, collected by Mr. S. B. Schnfelin. It contains tunes of standard excellence on the opposite page. Only 20 and 25 cents per copy But we must tell you that the best selling song book we have had for two years or more is the little gem entitled "Sonbh Ont Songs," by Rev A. B. Earle, of Boston. This book contains the famous "Lily of the Valley," and other lively tunes and hymns that stir the multitudes into a glow. Send in your orders. Only 50 cents per copy; 5 cents extra by mail.

Finally, we call attention to this paper. We have been late "to press" the past two weeks, and we come a little late still, this week, but with all this we submit that we are handsomer and handier than ever we have been. We are clipped and pasted, we are lighter weight and finer paper than ever before. One drawback only is worthy of note. Having changed our printer, our new pressman has not, for want of skill or time, been able to give us a clear page as we have been accustomed to show our readers hitherto. In appreciation of all we have tried to do for the convenience and pleasure of our patrons, will not our patrons help us a little by securing for the paper at least one cash subscriber for '88?

SCOTT'S EMULSION of Pure Cod Liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is a combination of two of the most valuable remedies in existence for the cure of Consumption and all Wasting Conditions; is more generally recommended and used by Physicians than any known remedy; it gives most satisfactory results, and tones up the system; and when the Consumptive has wasted away and loses hope, the Emulsion will speedily check the ravages of this terrible disease, and restore the sufferer to good health and happiness. This is equally true in regard to Rickets in Children, or Marasmus and Anæmia in Adults, and all impoverished conditions of the blood; and especially desirable for Colds and Chronic Coughs, as it will cure them more quickly than ordinary Specifics used. Palatable as milk.

Sold by all Druggists.

"STAMMERING"
AND ALL DEFECTS OF SPEECH PERMANENTLY CURED

It give me great pleasure to add my testimony to the efficiency and thoroughness of your treatment. I to cases of stammering, and of the almost miraculous cures effected thereby. In the case of my son David, his cure was effected two years ago, and has entirely averted what threatened to be a serious disadvantage to him through life. I cordially commend your treatment. Truly yours, CLIFFORD LEWIS, Treasurer Mutual Assurance Co. 526 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

NOTICE.

To the Trustees of Wayman's Normal and Agricultural High School: This will inform you that our first meeting of the board will convene March 14, 1888, at Delhi, La., by order of the president. Come, brethren, with a mind to work, in this our educational struggle. May God help you all to be on time. J. GOINS.

An Arkansas suicide filled his mouth with powder and then applied a lighted match. The explosion tore away a portion of his face.

Professional beggars are once more an important factor in the "social" life of San Francisco, where the police are kept busy trying to arrest them.

It is reported that at a recent wedding in Pittsfield, Mass., the bride was bought by the groom of a rival for $85, the young woman consenting to the transfer.

The remains of an unknown man, which had been taken to a San Francisco hospital and pitilally dissected, were recognized by a young woman as those of her father, Benjamin Armstrong, a wealthy miner, who disappeared from Reno, Nevada, in January.

March April May

Are the months in which to purify the blood, for at no other season is the body so susceptible to benefit from medicine. The peculiar purifying and reviving qualities of Hood's Sarsaparilla are just what are needed to expel disease and fortify the system against the debilitating effects of mild weather. Every year increases the popularity of Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it is just what people need at this season.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I had erysipelas in the worst form, being nearly covered with blisters. I had taken but a few doses of Hood's Sarsaparilla when I began to feel better; in a week I was sure it was doing me good, and when the first bottle was gone I was entirely well I have not been troubled by erysipelas since." MRS. L. BACON, Brimfield, Mass.

Purifies the Blood

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla every year as a spring tonic, with most satisfactory results. I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who have that miserable tired feeling at this season." O. FARMELEE, 249 Bridge street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD.

SYMPTOMS OF THIS DISEASE.—Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a "nasal twang"; the breath is offensive; smell and taste impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a backing cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians.

COMMON SENSE TREATMENT.

If you would remove an evil, strike at its root. As the predisposing cause or real cause of catarrh is, in the majority of cases, some wrong state, impurity, or otherwise faulty condition of the system, in attempting to cure the disease our chief aim must be directed to the removal of that cause. The more we see of this odious disease, and we treat successfully thousands of cases annually at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, we realize the importance of combining with the use of a local, soothing and healing application, a thorough and persistent internal use of blood-cleansing and tonic remedies.

CHIEF RELIANCE.

In curing catarrh and all the various diseases with which it is so frequently complicated, as throat, bronchial, and lung diseases, weak stomach, catarrhal deafness, weak or inflamed eyes, impure blood, scrofulous and syphilitic taints, the wonderful powers and virtues of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cannot be too strongly extolled. It has a specific effect upon the lining mucous membrane of the nasal and other air-passages, promoting the natural secretion of their follicles and glands, thereby softening the diseased and thickened membrane, and restoring it to its natural, thin, delicate, moist, healthy condition. As a blood-purifier, it is unsurpassed, as those diseases which complicate catarrh are diseases of the lining mucous membrane, or of the blood, it will readily be seen why this medicine is so well calculated to cure them.

LOCAL ASH.

As a local application for healing the diseased condition in the head, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is beyond all comparison the best preparation ever invented. It is mild and pleasant to use, producing no smarting or pain, and containing no strong, irritating, or caustic drug, or other poison. This Remedy is a powerful antiseptic, and speedily destroys all foul smell which accompanies so many cases of catarrh, affording great comfort to those who suffer from this disease.

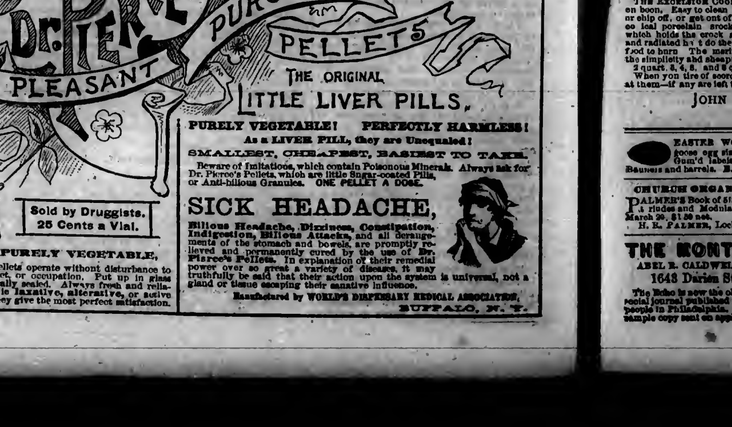
PERMANENT CURES.

The Golden Medical Discovery is the natural "helpmate" of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for it not only cleanses, purifies, regulates, and builds up the system to healthy standard, and conquers throat, bronchial, and lung complications, when any such exist, but, from its specific effects upon the lining membrane of the nasal passages, it aids materially in restoring the diseased, thickened, or ulcerated membrane to a healthy condition, and thus eradicates the disease. When a cure is effected in this manner it is permanent.

Both Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are sold by druggists the world over. The former, $1.00, six bottles for $5.00. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy 50 cents; half-dozen bottles $2.50.

A complete Treatise on Catarrh, giving valuable hints as to clothing, diet, and other matters of importance, will be mailed, post-paid, to any sufferer, on receipt of a 3-cent postage stamp. Address,

World's Dispensary Medical Association,
No. 663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.



PURELY VEGETABLE! PERFECTLY HARMLESS!
As a LIVER PILL, they are Unequaled!
SMALLEST, CHEAPEST, EASIEST TO TAKE.

Beware of imitations, which contain Poisonous Mineral. Always ask for Dr. Pierce's Pellets, which are little Sugar-coated Pills, or Anti-bilious Granules. ONE PELLET A DOSE.

SICK HEADACHE,

Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all Derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pellets. In explanation of their remedial power over so great a variety of diseases, it may truthfully be said that their action upon the system is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their curative influence.

BEING PURELY VEGETABLE,

Dr. Pierce's Pellets operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation. Put up in glass vials, hermetically sealed. Always fresh and reliable. As a gentle laxative, alterative, or active purgative, they give the most perfect satisfaction.

KNOWLEDGE FOR THE MILLIONS.

The fourth volume of Alden's Manifold Cyclopedia contains 122 illustrations, and extends from Baptism to Bilberry—637 pages, large type, handsome cloth binding, for 50 cts., or in neat half Morocco binding for 65 cts.! Postage 10c. Is not that, truly, bringing knowledge within the reach of the millions?

The great merit of the Cyclopedia is its adaptation to practical use, giving under each proper head the information most likely to be needed, and in concise, easily available form. Careful examination impresses one with its accuracy, as well as the remarkable fullness of its information. For actual use it abundantly answers the needs of all save those whose pursuits require exhaustive study of certain subjects. The combination of Unabridged Dictionary and Cyclopedia is a very great convenience. Each volume, as it comes to the reader's hands, invariably renews the surprise felt that a book so well got up can be afforded for a price so low. Whoever wants a Cyclopedia—and who does not?—would do well to order at least a specimen volume, which may be returned if not wanted. Reduced prices are offered to early subscribers for complete sets, which are to consist of 30 or more volumes, the volumes being issued at intervals of about a month. The work is not sold either by agents or booksellers, but only by the publisher direct, which in some measure accounts for the wonderfully low prices. Specimen pages, also 84-page descriptive catalogue of choice books, sent-free. John B. Alden, Publisher, 393 Pearl St., New York, or 218 Clark St., Chicago.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor—
Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.
Respectfully,
T. A. SLOCUM, M. C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

NOTICE.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, New York.

WANAMAKER'S.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6th, 1888.

HEAPS OF WRAPS OF DRESS GOODS ARE crowding and crushing in. Winter things are yielding place to Spring. Between these some prices are ground almost to powder.

THE NEW SPRING THINGS ARE ON DRESS parade. Wraps and Dress Goods for Women and Children, and Kilt Suits and Overcoats for the very small Boys. What heads have been planning, these have been shipping; machines have been humming and busy needles flying for months past to get ready for our opening.

In Suits, in Pants, at home—wherever and peculiar thing could be best done, it has been done. Every purse of fit and taste will find they are in the sunlight of Fashion's cheriest smile.

JAPANESE MATTINGS. THEY ARE SOMEWHAT less in weight than the Chinese, and have peculiar grass odor. Some are plain, some in large squares half across the piece, others have the square and large scale figure. Prices are low and nice. There is a bit of novelty about them at least for most folks. They have been selling in small quantities for a year or two, and we decide to stir at general attention. There is a sensation in them now. We have 2715 rolls, which we sell as a sort of Spring discount bargain at $10 the roll of 40 yards.

WATER COLOR OF COFFEE, CONSISTENCY OF syrup. Five minutes later as one would a cup of clear, filtered. Simple as winking. Go on drinking mud, if you choose; you can have Schuylkill water like morning dew if you care to. A roomful of Filters that will do the work thoroughly.

With cooler, $5 50 to $10 00.
Kitchen Filters, $4 to $7.25.
Force Stools, $5 to $20.

THE EXCELSIOR COOKING CROCK. A NICHE on boon. Easy to clean said proof, will not crack or chip of, or get out of sorts with a change. Excel lent porcelain crock in a block tin jacket, which holds the crock above the fire, keeps it cool and radiates heat to the cooking. No chance for food to burn. The merits of a farm kettle with the simplicity and cheapness of an iron pot.

Square 5, 4, 3, and 2 quart sizes, 25 to 65 cents.
When you think of cooking, establish take a look at them—if any are left them.

Impure Blood

Is the cause of Boils, Carbuncles, Pimples, Eczema, and cutaneous eruptions of all kinds. There can be no permanent cure for these complaints until the poison is eliminated from the system. To do this thoroughly, the safest and most effective medicine is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Give it a trial.

"For the past twenty-five years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."—G. C. Brock, Druggist, Lowell, Mass.

"My wife was for a long time a sufferer from tumors on the neck. Nothing did her any good until she tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made a complete cure."—W. S. Martin, Burning Springs, W. Va.

"We have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla here for over thirty years and always recommend it when asked to name the best blood-purifier."—W. T. McLean, Druggist, Augusta, Ohio.

LESSON HELPS IN FOUR GRADES.

THE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY. A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson helps for teachers and older scholars. Its value is enhanced by the introduction of appropriate forms for opening and closing exercises, hymns and tunes, maps, dictionary of proper names, etc.

THE SCHOLAR'S QUARTERLY. Similar to the above, but with such necessary changes as adapt it to the wants of scholars in the main school. It is marvelously cheap. Five or more copies to one address, per year, 7 cents each.

THE JUVENILE LESSON PAPER is a four page weekly, designed for younger scholars who have outgrown the infant class, but who retain their fondness for picture and simple stories. 30c per dozen per quarter; 2 cents per copy; 2 cents per dozen.

THE QUARTERLY LESSON PAPER is a beautiful lesson sheet, four pages handsomely illustrated and printed on white paper,

tion you will find negroes, in the main, hard working and honest. True, you will find much that is not commendable, but when you see him as he is at home, if you are an honest man you will say, "The negroes of the South are not as bad as I have been told they were." If you give them justice you will say they are as good as their former masters. The Southern negro has made rapid strides since emancipation. He is simple and confiding, and in spite of all the slanderous misrepresentations, abuses and hardships heaped upon him by the "chivalry (?) of the sunny South," he "loves his former owner, perhaps not wisely, but too well."

"THE QUESTIONS OF THE HOUR" REVIEWED.

BY REV. ISAAC S GRANT.

It is a rare thing to find two persons of the same opinion, whether in religious or secular matters, and especially being many miles apart. Were I personally acquainted with the scribe who wrote the article in the CHRISTIAN RECORDER of February 23d, under the caption above: "The Questions of the Hour," I could not be any more of the same opinion. I shall endorse the article with a few amens.

Rev Walter Thompson, I trust my endorsement will not be an offense to you and the readers of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. The first thought in any great undertaking should be the probability and possibility of the power to carry it out to a successful end. Will, opportunity, wisdom, means and money. That the A. M. E. Church possesses these requisites in abundance, none will dare to deny. To this you have my hearty amen. O, thou man of God.

Again, the article said, "The connection needs to concentrate in her General Conference the practical wisdom of the Church. By this we mean the intelligent minds that are sanctified to the work; men that respect rule and order; men that will go to the General Conference to work and not to make bombastic speeches in order to show what they know, and often what they do not know. It is not always the man that has received the best scholastic training that will make the best delegate." Amen.

Take such men as our Dart, Bellamy, Lites, Lykes, Salter and W. M. Thomas—such men never would shut their eyes against this passage, "Do unto others as you would that they do unto you."

"Such men, as the scribe said, could best be secured by a slight change in the law governing the eligibility of delegates. Let the law read: 'Every delegate representing an annual conference shall be a minister who has traveled eight consecutive years preceding the General Conference session as a minister in the service of the A. M. E. Church; who had thus been able to form opinions from a reasonable experience.' To this is my third amen.

"Would it not be a good idea to have our Bishops rotate? The system of rotation will do much to break down sectional feeling and will also modify the abuses of the transfer system. The system of rotation will make the Presiding Elder system absolutely necessary. We would suggest but one change in the Presiding Elder system, and that is, let the presiding elders be elected by the annual conference, thus throwing upon the conference the responsibility in regard to the charcter and ability of the men placed in the office, and also causing the presiding elder to feel that he is responsible to the conference for the success and failure of his work." These are my views and several whom I conversed with. Thus I say, amen. The arrangements of our various departments. I agree do away with so many secretaries; and as regards the location of the Financial Department, it is immaterial to me whether it is located in the North, East, South or West. But as the writer said, "Let the system be simplified, let the fund be known as the connectional fund instead of the present term Dollar Money; make the assessment per member fifty cents, consolidate the three days and let it be known as the general fund day. This I heartily endorse. If the system were changed I am of the opinion the churches, especially in South Carolina, where some of us are getting for support sugar, coffee, peas, corn, eggs and, now and then, a dollar, would improve. I know what I am speaking about, for I am in the very hot-bed of the late reformation. Change our financial system to 50 cents, give us more Bishops—rotate. If Georgia is solid for Gaines, South Carolina is for Salter. Let the two States shake hands. Let our annual conferences elect their presiding elders. Oh, [illegible] with my brethren at In[illegible] remain there until these [illegible]; they will be for the [illegible] the Church militant.

SCATTERING FLOWERS ON HIS GRAVE

To the memory of Dr. John M. Brown, Howard University, Medical Department, class 80, Washington D C., who died in Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 4th, 1888.

A TRIBUTE BY GEO. C. SMITH.

Sorrow finds fittest expression, oftentimes, in silence. It rules in a realm which is sacred, but its sway is disputed always by duty. I would stand mute, did not this joint ruler, duty, itself sad-ayed and sorrowful, beckon me to speak. It would, perhaps be more grateful and fitting if I would remain mute of lip while the voice of the heart only responded. I shall, therefore, in my weak way, attempt to fulfill every promise made. Dr. John M. Brown, living, was my friend and who, dead, I sincerely mourn. To me it is a painful pleasure to add my heartfelt tribute of veneration and love for him. I shall present my estimate of his character as a modest tribute to the memory of a modest man.

Man may dominate the earth, but it is given to God alone to conquer death. He may span continents with iron girders and bridge them with the commerce of the world; may measure the depth of the sea, the distance and magnitude of the heavenly bodies; may predict with mathematical precision the course and velocity of the planets—the visit, exit and return of the comets, yet with all this power over earth he cannot tell the day nor the hour of his exit ce, for death "cometh as a thief in the night." Nor wealth, nor talent, nor high position can arrest the footsteps of death, the great destroyer of hopes and human expectations. Happy for us that we cannot foretell his coming, yet when we see a man like he, cut down in the prime of life; when the dreams of his early ambition were being so fully realized in his profession, we are tempted to complain at what would seem a harsh visitation of Providence. But death waits for no man. The justice and wisdom of an Allwise God are beyond human ken. To his will we meekly bow. It is hard for us to comprehend the wisdom of Providence in designating a man so circumstanced as he, as a victim for the grave, yet it is not for us to pass upon the wisdom of the Almighty in matters of this kind. It is possible that He interfered to save him from prolonged suffering and that what appears to be our loss is, in reality, his gain. "God's finger touched him and he slept." Reason reels at the blow, yet we are reminded that we are born simply as executors of another's will.

It was most fitting that death should come to him quietly and without a struggle. Happy is he who is thus laid to rest with his life's warfare accomplished and with the feeling in the hereafter that he fought the good fight and has passed away loved, honored and respected by all. Beautiful and precious is the faith which teaches that God has in his keeping the dust of those we loved and who loved him. To the soul prepared, it matters not. The "well done" is the crown of life. So long as man dwells on earth, life is but a fragment. But the close seals the work with the benediction of changeless fruition. The career finished in honor and radiant with faith becomes a completed power and an everlasting blessing.

When Dr. Brown spoke or wrote it was from a thorough knowledge of his subject in pregnant and weighty words. Being a student and a lover of the best as a blade would be thrust with fatal result. Were I fully to express my admiration for the man I might, possibly, be suspected of intemperate speech. Although comparatively a young man in years, none can feel that that life was not rounded out into full completion. Judged by what he was no one can call the life of our friend a short one.

I believe in the immortality of good deeds—those that are such are not and cannot be buried with the bones of their authors, but live after them. The good that man do

"Time but the impression deeper makes,
As streams their channels deeper wear."

No man takes in the range and altitude of a mountain while environed by near jotting prominences and thick forest, neither do we correctly measure the man until his presence is wanting and his place is vacant. A drop of water which to-day may be tossed into a wild commotion on the waves of the deep, may to morrow glitter in the dew drop or fall in a tear. Thus every act of man is followed by an ever widening circle of consequences and results that forever reappear in renewed and varied phases of existence. If we would correctly weigh a man's life and character we must know the moulds in which he is cast. His was a nature cast in the finest moulds. Dr. Brown I knew well; coming from the same city, he was my physician and friend in the earnest sense of that word, and I loved him because of his virtues and for the sorrows he bore during the closing of his life. In life he had no enemies; no consciousness of wrongs inflicted or of trust betrayed. In my long association with men in public and private life I have come to contact with none whose personal character was more lovable, a gentleman of more perfect honor, of more perfect kindness of heart—as tender as that of a woman—of more catholicity of spirit, of less bigotry, of less envy or of less self seeking with his attainments I have not known—so knowing him as I did—as his personal friend and confidant in his last months—during his long period of depression and sorrow I was his constant companion when in the city; he trusted and clung to me with such a tenacity that I could not but love him.

He never made a brow look dark,
Nor caused a tear, but when he died.

His was an open, generous, sanguine, earnest nature—such an one as "he who runs may read." Strong in his convictions of right, he had a rare faculty of impressing one with the purity and sincerity of his motives. His life in this city was an open, manly one; his friends have no occasion to invoke the charity of silence; the gentleness of his disposition, the frankness of his manner, the integrity of his character made him many friends and mourners at his death.

He was by nature incapable of doing a mean act. None of the little meannesses of human nature belonged to him—with a high sense of personal honor, no narrow influences controlled his acts. Those who knew him can hardly fail to speak with warmth of his striking personal characteristics; of the genial and gracious presence in manner and essence, but that of a gentleman. The few flaws in his character were of manner rather than of the heart, having a mind so cultivated he could neither be mean nor small. Like the Sultan Akbar he believed that "no man was ever lost in a straight road." He was without craft or deceit. Those who knew him could not but be charmed by the frankness of his address, the intelligence of his conversation—a stranger would have recognized in him a man above his fellows.

There may have been stronger men than he, but he was strong; there may have been better men at heart than he, but I have not known them. No one has gone out from us who would feel a richer joy than he to know that all men speak to him kindly and lovingly.

The broad, deep river which rolls its majestic waters to the sea, tells but little of the movement of the mountain stream it once was or the mountain through which it came; so it is often with the pleasing anxious being of our common humanity. One of the characteristic traits of his character was its disgust of shams or false pretensions, whether in public or private life; his dislike of the thin veneers and disguise plastered over personal iniquities. He believed that a dividing line separated the right from the wrong in the affairs of men and that the right, ever was, everywhere, better than the wrong. Many things at times distorted the vision, but nothing ever confounded the distinction or tempted him to barter the one for the other. He hated with all the power of his being hypocrisy or unfaithfulness either in woman or man. To find himself deceived by either seemed almost to crush his tender heart.

From my personal and intimate knowledge of the man there is no doubt but that his late sorrow tinged his life. Although at times cheerful, there was still the unseen presence of melancholy which would check the exuberance of his spirits. This sorrow was the minor chord in the harmony of life. It is not for me to dwell upon this theme—perhaps I have no right to speak of his domestic relations, committed to me as a sacred trust by him, as his friend, except so far as commissioned. That home far away from here has been saddened, that charmed circle broken, and stricken by grief which no words of mine can soothe. I will not lift the veil from that circle of crushed hearts there over a broken-hearted son and brother. It seems too sacred for discussion here. His love for his mother was fervent; of her he never tired of speaking—scarcely a night we did not talk of her, home and loved ones, and for the time live over the happiness we left behind—and of when it should be ours to return to those that loved us. He looked forward with delight to our anticipated visit this spring. The early impressions made by that devout mother were never thrown off; almost every night we would sing together his favorite song—"Where is my Wandering Boy tonight?" and read his favorite poem, "Weary," which I possess and which seemed to fit his own life. Perhaps the insertion of this poem will give his friends a better idea of his feelings than I can portray. The words in italics were underscored by himself:

WEARY.

Weary, so weary, O, weary of tears;
Weary of heartaches and weary of fears,
Weary of mourning and weary of pain;
Weary, so weary of hoping in vain.

Weary, so weary of the burden of life;
Weary of toiling and weary of strife;
Weary of parting and weary of night;—
Weary, so weary and longing for light.

Weary, so weary of waiting a'one;
Weary of asking—receiving a stone;
Weary of watching, weary of jeers;
Weary, so weary of taunts and of sneers.

Weary, so weary; but sometime I'll rest;
Dreamlessly sleeping, hands crossed on my breast;
No more to sorrow, no more to weep;
Only to lie down and quietly sleep.

Those who have felt the warm contact of his love, who have experienced the joy of his friendship, who have shared his confidence and sorrows, as I shared, and secured his esteem, carry in their hearts the fervent appreciation of his virtue and will long cherish his memory. Let us hope that when timid nature, for a moment, shrank at the approach to the dark valley the voice of the risen Saviour came to him in reassuring accents from the other shore, "It is I, be not afraid." And as his last moments were peaceful when he fell asleep, so his last sweet sleep will be unbroken by the turbulent memories which throng the air above his grave. It is said that a pebble dropped in the ocean will send its wavelets to distant shores; is it too much to say that the life of our deceased friend, dropped in the great ocean of humanity, will not pass from sight without leaving behind an influence that shall teach the hearts and lives of generations to come?—Exchange.

REMARKABLE LONGEVITY.

The most extraordinary British examples of longevity are those of Thomas Parr, who died in 1635 at the age of 152; Henry Jenkins of Yorkshire, who died in 1670, aged 169; Mr. Fairbrother, who died in Wigan, May 1770, aged 133; James Shellie, an Irish farmer, who died in June, 1759 aged 136; and Martha Hannah, of Cullybackey, Ireland, who died in 1808, aged 126. But Great Britain and Ireland are not the only countries that breed centenarians.

In 1809, Elizabeth Haywood, a free negro died in Jamaica, aged 130 years; in 1742 a Portuguese gentleman, Joa Homem da Cunha Deca, died aged 129; and in 1791 a Portuguese lady, Joanna Francisca de Piedade, was still living at the age of 120. But most writers on the subject seem to agree that our own islands produce an unusual proportion of long-lived people. They also agree that more men than women reach extreme old age. The oldest person whom I personally have known died at the age of 116. I cannot be quite sure of the year of his death. It must, I think, have been about 1868 or 1869. He was a quiet old gentleman, who had two weaknesses, books and port. Several times during his last years he narrowly escaped burning himself to death in bed, where, whenever he was wakeful, he loved to read at night; and to within a few weeks of his death he always drank three or four glasses of old fashioned port after his dinner. He neither smoked or snuffed, but he hunted until he was over 90. He had a marvelous digestion, his sight, aided by spectacles, was good to the last, and he was sufficiently clear-headed to be able to make a little joke to one of his great-granddaughters within an hour or two of his end. This kind of pleasant extreme old age is, I am afraid, very unusual. I should add that my old friend, in his early days, held an appointment in India, and I have before me as I write a copy of "Horace" (Tonson's edition of 1715) which gave me, and which bears, in his handwriting, on the fly-leaf, his name and the date, "Calcutta, 16 March, 1779." He gave it me about 38 years later.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Church News.

Rev. C. Wright, of Harrisburg, Pa., writes: A portion of the Harrisburg District has been blessed with a glorious revival. Steelton reports 35 converts, Carlisle 42 and Greencastle, Chambersburg and Middletown report religious interest.

Rev. T. J. Peterson, Des Moines, Iowa, writes: We have just closed a glorious and profitable revival of seven weeks, having had thirty-eight conversions and fifty added to the church, and notwithstanding the very cold weather our church has not been sufficiently large to seat those who have nightly attended.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, Arkansas City, Kans., writes: After reading the great success with which the A. M. E. Church is meeting throughout the Southwest, I thought it would not be amiss to let you know what we were doing in the way of improvements in this part of the South Kansas Conference. Notwithstanding our town—Arkansas City—is located in the Southern tier of counties and on the borders of the Indian Territory, we find that God manifests his goodness and great mercies down here just the same as he does any other place. I came here on the 12th of October, found the people waiting to receive me, which they did with a warm hand, but did not forget at the same time to fill my ears full of the various proceedings of last year, and at the same time asking my opinion, but as soon as I got a chance to put in a word edgewise, I told them I did not come here to rehearse last year's business, but that we were now commencing on a new year. But when I became acquainted with the people I found them to be a working people and, ever ready to assist in building up the Master's cause. They believe in the old adage that "God helps those that help themselves." I have been very busy since I came here, and these good people have not failed to lend a helping hand, and the fruits of this labor up to present writing is a neat little parsonage, consisting of three rooms, which we have erected on the rear end of our church lot, and I am now living in it. The improvements will amount to about $300, donation and all. We were a little bothered about plastering our building, and when I called to remembrance some of the grand instruction you used to give me, when I used to be employed by you on Monday's, at Wilberforce University, that work was honorable, I bethought myself that I had had some experience in operative masonry, so I just laid aside my theological garb and took up the trowel until the walls were completed, and now I can have the pleasure of knowing that we shall not throw away any more money for rent, but can apply the amount toward diminishing our church debts. My charge is small, consisting of thirty-five members, but they are not only church members, but Christians. We have a nice little church here and located on a very valuable corner. Our church is not entirely free from debt, but we hope to pay the amount in an early future, as our hands have been released from the burden of parsonage rent. We have just stopped our improvements a little while to share in some of the pleasures of Christmas and to make ready for our first quarterly meeting, which will take place the second Sunday in January. Father J. M. Wilkerson is our presiding elder and all feel interested in making things pleasant for our old Kansas pioneer. I expect to enroll many names in the church whose names shall be enrolled in the Church triumphant, God being my assistance. Pray for us.

Rev. J. M. Henderson, of St. Paul, Minn., writes. After a protracted and arduous series of financial efforts, which God has crowned with unusual success, we have without stopping to rest plunged into special endeavors for the salvation of souls. God thus far has blessed me with a wonderful outpouring of his spirit; African Methodism in the past few weeks has gained forty-two new workers and the kingdom of Satan has lost forty-two victims. The work has only begun; we trust God and look for great things. Scarce as our people, comparatively speaking, are, we hope to find at least one hundred who are willing to enter God's service. Thus far there has not been, in a single case, a sinner who has attended our meetings consecutively three nights, but that by the third night he was at the mourner's bench. Our mourner's bench is the old fashioned Methodist mourner's bench, and the past week has seen men worth their thousands bowed as humbly and

tion you will find negroes, in the main, hard working and honest. True, you will find much that is not commendable, but when you see him at his home, if you are an honest man you will say, "The negroes of the South are not as bad as I have been told they were." If you give them justice you will say they are as good as their former masters. The Southern negro has made rapid strides since emancipation. He is simple and confiding, and in spite of all the slanderous misrepresentations, abuses and hardships heaped upon him by the "chivalry(?) of the sunny South," he "loves his former owner, perhaps not wisely, but too well."

"THE QUESTIONS OF THE HOUR" REVIEWED.

BY REV. ISAAC S GRANT.

It is a rare thing to find two persons of the same opinion, whether in religious or secular matters, and especially being many miles apart. Were I personally acquainted with the scribe who wrote the article in the CHRISTIAN RECORDER of February 23d, under the caption above: "The Questions of the Hour," I could not be any more of the same opinion than I shall endorse the article with a few amens.

Rev Walter Thompson, I trust my endorsement will not be an offense to you and the readers of the CHRISTIAN RECORDER. The first thought in any great undertaking should be the probability and possibility of the power to carry it out to a successful end. Will, opportunity, wisdom, means and money. That is the A. M. E. Church possesses these requisites in abundance, none will dare to deny To this you have my hearty amen. O thou men of God

Again, the article said, "The connection needs to be represented by her General Conference the spiritual wisdom of the Church. By this we mean the intelligent minds that are sanctified to the work; men that respect rule and order; men that will go to the General Conference to work and not to make bombastic speeches in order to show what they know, and often what they do not know. It is not always the man that has the most to say, or the best scholastic training that will make the best delegate" Amen.

Take such men as our Dart, Bellamy, Lites, Lykes, Salter and W. M Thomas —such men never would shut their eyes against this passage, "Do unto others as you would that they do unto you."

"Such men, as the scribe said, could best be secured by a slight change in the law governing the eligibility of delegates. Let the law read: 'Every delegate representing an annual conference shall be a minister who has traveled eight consecutive years preceding the General Conference session as a minister in the service of the A. M. E. Church; who had thus been able to form opinions from a reasonable experience." To this it my third amen.

"Would it not be a good idea to have our Bishops rotate? The system of rotation will do much to break down sectional feeling and will also modify the abuses of the transfer system. The system of rotation will make the Presiding Elder system absolutely necessary We would suggest but one change in the Presiding Elder system, and that is, let the presiding elders be elected by the annual conference, thus throwing upon the conference the responsibility in regard to the charcter and ability of the men placed in the office, and also causing the presiding elder to feel that he is responsible to the conference for the success and failure of his work." These are my views and several whom I conversed with. Thus I say, amen. The arrangements of our various departments. I agree do away with so many secretaries; and as regards the location of the Financial Department, it is immaterial to me whether it is located in the North, East, South or West. But as the writer said, "Let the system be simplified, let the fund be known as the connectional fund instead of the present term Dollar Money; make the assessment per member fifty cents; consolidate the three days and let it be known as the general fund day. This I heartily endorse If the system were changed I am of the opinion the churches, especially of South Carolina, where some of us are getting for support sugar, coffee, peas, corn, eggs and, now and then, a dollar, would improve. I know what I am speaking about, for I am in the very hot-bed of the late reformation. Change our financial system to 50 cents. Give us more Bishops—rotate. If Georgia is solid for Gaines, South Carolina is for Salter. Let the two States shake hands Let our annual conferences elect their presiding elders. Oh, Lord, meet with my brethren at Indianapolis and remain there until these things are passed; they will be for the upbuilding of the Church militant. Amen.

The City Council of Leesenworth, Kan., has adopted an ordinance raising the license for practicing Christian science, or faith cure, to $500.

SCATTERING FLOWERS ON HIS GRAVE

To the memory of Dr. John M. Brown, Howard University, Medical Department, class 80, Washington D C., who died in Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 4th, 1888.

A TRIBUTE BY GEO. C. SMITH.

Sorrow finds fittest expression, oftentimes, in silence. It rules in a realm which is sacred, but its sway is disputed always by duty. I would stand mute, did not this joint ruler, duty, itself eagle-eyed and sorrowful, beckon me to speak. It would, perhaps be more grateful and fitting if I would remain mute of lip while the voice of the heart only responded. I shall, therefore, in my weak way, attempt to fulfill every promise made. Dr. John M. Brown, living, was my friend and who, dead, I sincerely mourn. To me it is a painful pleasure to add my heartfelt tribute of veneration and love for him. I shall present my estimate of his character as a modest tribute to the memory of a modest man.

Man may dominate the earth, but it is given to God alone to conquer death. He may span continents with iron girdles and bridge them with the commerce of the world; may measure the depth of the sea, the distance and magnitude of the heavenly bodies; may predict with mathematical precision the course and velocity of the planets—the visit, exit and return of the comets, yet with all this power over earth he cannot tell the day nor the hour of his exit'se or, for death 'cometh as a thief in the night." Of wealth, or wealth, or eminent nor high position can arrest the footsteps of death, the great destroyer of hopes and human expectations. Happy for us that we cannos forstell his coming, yet when we see a man like he, cut down in the prime of life; when the dreams of his early ambition were being so fully realized in his profession, we are tempted to complain at what would seem a harsh visitation of Providence. But death waits for or no man. The justice and wisdom of an Allwise God are beyond human ken. To his will we meekly bow. It is hard for us to comprehend the wisdom of Providence in designating a man so circumstanced as he, as a victim for the grave, yet it is not for us to pass upon the wisdom of the Almighty in matters of this kind. It is possible that He interfered to save him from prolonged suffering and that what appears to be our loss is, in reality, his gain. "God's finger touched him and he slept." Reason reels at the blow, yet we are reminded that we are here simply as executors of another's will.

It was most fitting that death should come to him quickly and without struggle. Happy is he who is thus laid to rest with his life's warfare accomplished and with the feeling in the hereafter that he fought the good fight and has passed away loved, honored and respected by all. Beautiful and precious is the faith which teaches that God has in his keeping the dust of those we loved and who loved him. To the soul departed, it matters not. The "well done" is the crown of life. So long as man dwells on earth, life is but a fragment. But the close seals the work with the benediction of changeless fruition. The dead lived in honor and radiant with faith becomes a conquering power and an everlasting blessing.

When Dr. Brown spoke or wrote it was from a thorough knowledge of the subject in preparation and weighty words. Being a student and a lover of the best ant blade would he tempt our timbers with fatal reliterature, he brought a fine literary culture to his professional life. He thoroughly mastered the science of his chosen profession The leading members of the medical fraternity in this city have often told me that no man in Kansas City was better equipped and fitted for his life work than he, and that he was held in the highest esteem as evidenced from the many honors conferred upon him, from time to time, as a member of the Medical Association and once one of its chief officers.

It was a pleasure to walk with him through the street's and see in what esteem he was held by the profession, the business men and the common people, for whom he always had a pleasant word and a hearty shake of the hand He died an honor to his parents, his Alma Mater, his friends, both at home and in this community where he began and ended his professional career. Kansas City was not ashamed of the son of her adoption. She can and does point to him with pride as one of her valued jewels. His intellectual attainments were of a high order; he possessed a diversified knowledge outside of the profession rarely obtained by the laborious practitioner.

The month preceding his death his practice was remarkable, so that he was kept busy day and night.

When indulging in satire he carried in the velvet scabbard of his well turned periods a sword sharp as the scimiter of Saladin. If one should meet him in controversy it were well to see that there were no weak or ungunarded places in the joints of the armor; for his keen eye was sure to find them and his trenchant blade would be thrust with fatal rapidity. Were I fully to express my admiration for the man I might, possibly, be suspected of intemperate speech. Although comparatively a young man in years, none can feel that that life was not rounded cut into full completion. Judged by what he was no one can call the life of our friend a short one.

I believe in the immortality of good deeds—those that are such are not and cannot be buried with the bones of their authors, but live after them. The good that men do

"Time but the impression deeper makes,
As streams their channels deeper wear."

No man takes in the range and altitude of a mountain while environed by near jutting prominences and thick forest, neither do we correctly measure the men until his presence is wanting and his place is vacant. A drop of water which to-day may be tossed into a wild commotion on the waves of the deep, may to morrow glitter in the daw drop or fall in a tear. Thus every act of man is followed by an ever widening circle of consequences and results that forever reappear in renewed and varied phases of existence. If we would correctly weigh a man's life and character we must know the models in which he is cast. His was a nature cast in the noblest moulds. Dr Brown I knew well; coming from the same city, he was my physician and friend in the earnest sense of that word, and I loved him because of his virtues and for the sorrows he bore during the closing of his life. In life he had no enemies; no consciousness of wrongs inflicted or of trust betrayed. In my long association with men in public and private life I have come to contact with none whose personel character was more lovable, a gentleman of more perfect honor, of more perfect kindness of heart—a tender as that of a woman—of more catholicity of spirit, of less bigotry, of less envy or of less self seeking with his attainments I have not known—so knowing him as I did—as his personel friend and confident in his last months—during his long period of depression and sorrow I was his constant companion when in the city; he trusted and clung to me with such a tenacity that I could not but love him.

He never made a brow look dark,
Nor caused a tear, but when he died.

His was an open, generous, sanguine, genial nature—such an one as "he who runs may read." Strong in his convictions of right, he had a rare facility of impressing one with the purity and sincerity of his motives. His life in this city was an open, manly one; his friends have no occasion to invoke the charity of silence; the gentleness of his disposition, the frankness of his manner, the integrity of his character made him many friends and mourners at his death.

He was by nature incapable of doing a mean act. None of those little meannesses of human nature belonged to him—with a high sense of personal honor, no narrow influences controlled his acts. Those who knew him can hardly fail to speak with warmth of his striking personal characteristics; of the genial and gracious presence in manner and essence, but that of a gentleman. The few flaws in his character were of manner rather than of the heart, leaving a mind so cultivated he could neither be mean nor small. Like the Sultan Akbar he believed that "no man was ever lost in a straight road." He was well bout Bel g a student and a lover of the best ant blade would he tempt our timbers with fatal reliterature. he brought a fine literary culture to his professional life. He thoroughly mastered the science of his chosen profession The leading members of the medical fraternity in this city have often told me that no man in Kansas City was better equipped and fitted for his life work than he, and that he was held in the highest esteem as evidenced from the many honors conferred upon him, from time to time, as a member of the Medical Association and once one of its chief officers.

Kansas City was not ashamed of the son of her adoption. She can and does point to him with pride as one of her valued jewels. His intellectual attainments were of a high order; he possessed a diversified knowledge outside of the profession rarely obtained by the laborious practitioner.

The month preceding his death his practice was remarkable, so that he was kept busy day and night.

When indulging in satire he carried in the velvet scabbard of his well turn-knowledge of the man there is no doubt but that his late sorrow tinged his life. Although at times cheerful, there was still the unseen presence of melancholy which would check the exuberance of his spirits. This sorrow was the minor chord in the harmony of life. It is not for me to dwell upon this theme—perhaps I have no right to speak of his domestic relations, committed to me as a sacred trust by him, as his friend, except so far as concealment. That home far away from here has been saddened, that charmed circle broken, and stricken by grief which no words of mine can soothe. I will not lift the veil from that circle of crushed hearts there over a broken-hearted son and brother. It seems too sacred for discussion here. His love for his mother was fervent; for her he never tired of speaking—scarcely a night we did not talk of her, home and loved ones, and for the time live over the happiness we left behind—and o' when it should be ours to return to those that loved us. He looked forward with delight to one anticipated visit this spring. The early impressions made by that devout mother were never thrown off; almost every night we would sing together his favorite song—"I'm a Pilgrim and a Stranger, Boy to night!" and read his favorite poem, "Weary," which I possess and which seemed to fi his own life. Perhaps the insertion of this poem will give his friends a better idea of the feelings than I can portray. The words in italics were underscored by himself:

WEARY.

Weary, so weary, O, weary of tears;
Weary of heartaches and weary of fears,
Weary of mourning and weary of pain;
Weary, so weary of hoping in vain.

Weary, so weary of the burden of life;
Weary of toiling and weary of strife;
Weary of parting and weary of graves,
Weary, so weary and longing for light.

Weary, so weary of waiting a'one;
Weary of asking—receiving a stone;
Weary of watching, weary of jears;
Weary, so weary of taunts and of sneers.

Weary, so weary; but sometime I'll rest;
Dreamlessly sleeping, hands crossed on my breast;
No more to sorrow, no more to weep;
Only to lie down and quietly sleep.

Those who have felt the warm contact of his love, who have experienced the joy of his friendship, who have shared his confidence and sorrows, as I shared, and secured his esteem, carry in their hearts the fravent appreciation of his virtue and will long cherish his memory. Let us hope that when timid nature, for a moment, shrank at the approach to the dark valley the voice of the risen Saviour came to him in reassuring accents from the other shore, "It is I, be not afraid." and as his last moments were peaceful when he fell asleep, so his last sweet sleep will be unbroken by the turbulent memories which throng the air above his grave. It is said that a pebble dropped in the ocean will send its wavelets to distant shores; is it too much to say that the life of our deceased friend, dropped in the great ocean of humanity, will not pass from sight without leaving behind an influence that shall touch the hearts and lives of generations to come?—Exchange.

REMARKABLE LONGEVITY.

The most extraordinary British examples of longevity are those of Thomas Parr, who died in 1635 at the age of 152; Henry Jenkins of Yorkshire, who died in 1670, aged 169; Mr. Fairbrother, who died in Wigan, in 1775, aged 133; James Sbeille, an Irish trooper, who died in June, 1759 aged 136; and Martha Hannah, of Collybackey, Ireland, who died in 1808, aged 126 But Great Britain has not the only centuries that breed centenarians.

In 1809, Elizabeth Haywood, a free negro died in Jamaica, aged 133 years; in 1792 a Portuguese gentleman, Joa Homem da Cunha Deca, died aged 129; and in 1791 a Portuguese lady, Joanna Francisca de Pledade, was still living at the age of 120. But most writers on the subject assem to agree that our own island produces on numerous proportion of long lived people. They also agree that more men than women reach extreme old age. The oldest person whom I personally have known died at the age of 116. I cannot be quite sure of the year of his death. It must, I think, have been about 1868 or 1869. He was a quiet old gentleman, who had two weaknesses, books and port. Several times during his last years he narrowly escaped burning himself to death in bed, where, whenever he was wakeful, he loved to read at night; and to within a few weeks of his death he always drank three or four glasses of old fashioned port, after his dinner. He neither smoked or snuffed, but he boasted until he was over 90. He had a marvelous digestion, his sight, aided by spectacles, was good to the last, and he was sufficiently clear-headed to be able to make a little joke to one of his great-grandaughters within an hour or two of his end. This kind of pleasant extreme old age is, I am afraid, very unusual. I should add that my old friend, in his early days, held an appointment in India, and I have before me as I write a copy of "Horace" (Tonson's edition of 1716) which gave me, and which bears, on its handwriting, on the fly-leaf, his name and the date, "Calcutta, 16 March, 1779" He gave it me about 68 years later.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Church News.

Rev. C. Wright, of Harrisburg, Pa. writes: A portion of the Harrisburg District has been blessed with a glorious revival. Steelton reports 35 converts, Carlisle 40 and Greencastle, Chambersburg and Middletown report religious interest.

Rev. T. J. Peterson, Des Moines, Iowa, writes: We have just closed a glorious and profitable revival of seven weeks, having had thirty-eight conversions and fifty added to the church, and notwithstanding the very cold weather our church has not been sufficiently large to seat those who have nightly attended.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, Arkansas City, Kans., writes: After reading the great success with which the A. M. E. Church is meeting throughout the Southwest, I thought it would not be amiss to let you know what we were doing in the way of improvements in this part of the South Kansas Conference. Notwithstanding our town, Arkansas City—is located in the Southern Key of country, and on the borders of the Indian Territory, we find that God manifests his goodness and great mercies down here just the same as he does any other place. I came to work on the 15th of October, and the people waiting to receive me, which they did with a warm hand, but did not forget at the same time to fill my ears full of the various proceedings of last year, and in the same time asking my opinion, but as soon as I got a chance to put in a word edgewise, I told them I did not come here to rehearse last year's business, but that we were now commencing on a new year. But when I became acquainted with the people I found them to be a working people and ever ready to assist in building up the Master's cause. They believe in the old adage that "God helps those that help themselves." I have been on my charge since I came here, and these good people have not failed to lend a help'ng hand, and the fruits of this labor up to present writing is a neat little parsonage, consisting of three rooms, which we have erected on the rear end of our church lot, and I am now living in it. The improvements will amount to $300 when completed. Our church is a little bashered about plastering our building, and when I called to remember brance some of the grand instruction you need to give me, when I used to be employed by you on Monday's, at Wilberforce University, that work was honorable, I hethought myself that I had had come experience in operative masonry, so I just laid aside my theological studies and took up the trowel until the walls were completed and now I can have the pleasure of knowing that we shall not throw away any more money for rent, but can apply the amount toward diminishing our church debts. My congregation is small, consisting of thirty-five members, but they are not only church members, but Christians. We have one little church here and located on a very valuable corner. Our church is not entirely free from debt, but we hope to pay the amount in an early time, as our hands have been released from the burden of parsonage rent. We have just stopped our improvements a little while to share in some of the pleasures of Christmas and to make ready for our first quarterly meeting, which will take place the second Sunday in January. Father J. M. Henderson is our presiding elder and all feel interested in seeing things pleasant for our old Kansas place. I expect to enroll many names in the church whose names shall be enrolled in the church triumphant, God being my assistance. Pray for us.

Rev. J. M. Henderson, of St. Paul, Minn., writes: Our progressive and arduous series of financial efforts, which God has crowned with unusual success, we have without stopping to rest pinged into especial endeavors for the relief of the Parent Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the A. M. E. Church, and participated in by the Sarah Allen Mission Society Of course, what we expected, was that which we are accustomed to see and hear upon such occasions, but to the contrary, it was unique The programme was an unusually interesting one, managed with dignity and decorum from beginning to end.

The president in her opening remarks brought the work and the claims of the Mite Society before the large audience in a way that could not fail to forward its cause. Then the gift and point of the meeting throughout, was the forcible way in which true and noble womanhood was defined, and the value of organised effort was shown. So the occasion was at once lifted above the too often practice of overdrawn words of praise for the departed, and "whereas," and "be it resolved," resolutions, which we may safely say that at least three things were accomplished:

1st. The relatives of the deceased persons were comforted when they were made to see how clearly the Christ purpose to which their "saints died" had lived; and the sure reward that awaited them for labor performed, and the sure protection into a higher sphere of work 2d. The women present were inspired to find something to do, and to do it well; whether that something be the management of their domestic affairs, or work in the Sunday school, or as missionaries, or in some other department of the Church. Indeed, the possibility of attending properly to home duties, and also finding some time for work out side, was clearly shown, and that not simply by words, but by the noble record of the woman whose memory the meeting was held

3d. What women may do for God and humanity, by a little encouragement is heard Dr. Pearson say a few weeks ago that the Christian Church was over fifteen hundred years making an important discovery, viz, the value of its women and of its young men. At last the lesson is learned, and that class is forgotten and faithful that utilizes those two great forces. The Methodist Church is generally liberal in its views respecting its women, and, being a Methodist from my birth, it is perhaps no wonder that I share this spirit. Yet I am not quite satisfied in my mind that we have reached the place where it is necessary or generally profitable to license, ordain and give regular charges to women. There is no reason for them to do before reaching this point that they seem especially fitted for, that it seems to me but wise to deal first with that which comes first. Missionary work, temperance work and work of moral reformation, so successfully carried on by others, may also be done by the women of our Church. I believe that in the most fertile soil good seed was sown in this direction, that will surely produce its fruit, and that at no distant day.

CHURCH FINANCE.

BY EDITOR "CRISIS BLADE."

DEAR EDITOR:—Permit me to congratulate you upon your able contribution to the editorial columne of your journal of the 8th ult., captioned "Church Finance." Perhaps none more than yourself, at the head of the official organ of our Church and pre-eminently fitted for that position, can fully appreciate the urgent necessity of efficient government in matters of Church finance. We write as friend of the fast, and that the wonderful growth and influence of the connection are largely due to the lucid solution of an all-vexatious problem, and that the increasing reforms and plans of the day in finance and the question arises, have we, the colored women, no part nor lot in this matter? It is to celebrate the fortieth year of anniversary since woman began to agitate on the question of Woman's Rights. Since then a wonderful change has come over the condition of our people The colored man has exchanged the fetters on wrist for the ballot in his right hand. Schools have sprung up like wells in the desert dust. Churches have been multiplied and charitable institutions established among us. In view of this, will not Philadelphia and other cities of note of their forward women as delegates to that convention? I go by special invitation, but there are other women in Philadelphia younger than I am, and fresher from the schools, at whose feet I would sit, and from whose lips I could learn. Will not Philadelphia honor herself by sending to that council her best brain and heart?

Personal.

—Rev. S Birch has built a new church at Carlisle, Del.

—Rev. A. Woodlyn, Lewes, Del., is in the midst of a great revival.

—Rev. Dr. Pearson of Rev. T. W. Allen resulted in twenty-one conversions.

—Rev. W. H Yeocum's revival meetings in Trenton, N. J., have proven very successful.

—Rev. N. D. Temple gave an interesting lecture on astronomy before the Philadelphia Preachers' Meeting, Monday, 5th inst.

—Rev J. W. Norris' labors at Smyrna, Del., have been blessed greatly. In the revival there thirty-seven persons were converted

—Dr Townsend is pushing the Easter ing-laying fast now. He hopes to round up the quadrennium with a well-filled—not feathered—nest

—A royal pleasure it was to enjoy the hospitality of Mrs. S. H. Robertson, of Savannah, on our Southern trip. Mrs Robertson is a noble hearted woman.

—The Seed Manual of D. M Ferry & Co has been received. Every farmer and gardener can find a valuable garden catalogue of seeds, plants, etc., in the Manual. Detroit, Mich.

—Dr. Arnett was given a grand birthday reception by the Lewis Arnett Republican Club, Tuesday evening, March 6th, it being the doctor's fiftieth anniversary. A half hundred years, brother? May your eyes remain brilliant during the second half hundred years.

—Rev. J M. Palmer, Uniontown, Pa., has had a glorious revival, in which nearly one hundred members were added to the Church. His brother, Rev P Palmer, of South Side, Pittsburg, has also had an interesting revival, gathering in between thirty and forty members —The Xenia (O.) Gazette bears to us the sad news of the death of (Mother) Mrs. Annie Phillips, the friend of a thousand Wilberforce students; also of Miss Willie B Johnson, one of Wilberforce's most noble students, and for the last nine years a teacher in the Xenia public school.

A CALL TO OUR WOMEN.

OWEGO, N. Y., March 8, 1888.

MR. EDITOR:—There is to be in Washington, commencing March 25th, a jubilee of woman, in which we may expect a representation of the most gifted and noted women of the various reforms and plans of the day; and the question arises, have we, the colored women, no part nor lot in this matter? It is to celebrate the fortieth year of anniversary since woman began to agitate on the question of Woman's Rights. The relatives of the deceased persons were comforted when they were made to see how clearly the Christ purpose to which their "saints died" had lived; and the sure reward that awaited them for labor performed, and the sure protection into a higher sphere of work 2d. The women present were inspired to find something to do, and to do it well; whether that something be the management of their domestic affairs, or work in the Sunday school, or as missionaries, or in some other department of the Church. Indeed, the possibility of attending properly to home duties, and also finding some time for work out side, was clearly shown, and that not simply by words, but by the noble record of the woman whose memory the meeting was held

3d. What women may do for God and humanity, by a little encouragement is heard Dr. Pearson say a few weeks ago that the Christian Church was over fifteen hundred years making an important discovery, viz, the value of its women and of its young men. At last the lesson is learned, and that class is forgotten and faithful that utilizes those two great forces. The Methodist Church is generally liberal in its views respecting its women, and, being a Methodist from my birth, it is perhaps no wonder that I share this spirit. Yet I am not quite satisfied in my mind that we have reached the place where it is necessary or generally profitable to license, ordain and give regular charges to women. There is no reason for them to do before reaching this point that they seem especially fitted for, that it seems to me but wise to deal first with that which comes first. Missionary work, temperance work and work of moral reformation, so successfully carried on by others, may also be done by the women of our Church. I believe that in the most fertile soil good seed was sown in this direction, that will surely produce its fruit, and that at no distant day.

The ambition of our connection, as I understand it, is broad and limitless It would extend its fostering care over the entire points of the compass and bring within the fold of Christianity the entire negro world. The possibilities of the Church are grand; the results from our present pioneer labor have been flatteringly successful and her hopes for a future encompass all that is noble, ambitious, grand and God-like. With these hopes and laudable ambition; with this past honorable testimonial of strength of numbers and popularity, it behooves us to cast an eye to the wind-ward and realize what are our growing needs Financial management, rare executive ability, mingled unwarped by theological pondering and a general bias in a mercantile direction. And with these qualities, united with energy, keen foresight, rare patience, spotless integrity (the latter frequently an absent quality in the individual make-up of some of our aspiring clergy,) and lastly, a true vocation for the work, I enlist my feeling in a ministerial profession.

The general character of church work, of course, naturally calls for the latter characteristics of true priesthood; the former are the natural gifts and results of detail training. To preclude the idea that fiscal affairs are secondary to religious fervor in the extension and perpetuation of ecclesiastical dominion would be the erroneous assertion of priority over utility with its essential retrogressiveness However fallacious theologically are the doctrines of the Vatican in matters of succession in two white divines would be elected in the next General Conference on the first ballot to the Bishopric. Florida holds a claim on Dr. Grant and would be proud to receive a telegram from the bishop of the next General Conference that Dr. Grant was elected on the first ballot. Bishop Wayman read to the conference a telegram relating Bishop Brown's illness in Washington, D C., when the conference offered prayers to God for his immediate recovery.

"STAMMERING"
AND ALL DEFECTS OF SPEECH PERMANENTLY CURED

[Philadelphia Public Ledger Editorial]

Among the interesting correspondence in today's Ledger is a letter from a well-known business man calling in what a marvelously short time he cured himself of stammering. We can vouch for the truth of the statement. It was a painful thing because of stammering for Mr. Johnston to engage in discussion; now he speaks with fluent ease and elegance. The cure is not the slightest trace of his former infirmity. As to this, we write from actual knowledge.

"George," asked the teacher of a Sunday school class, "whom, above all others, shall you wish to see when you get to heaven?" With a face brightening up with anticipation the little fellow shouted: "Gerfish."—Boston Christian Register.

The Sheriff at Mobile, Ala., resorted to rather novel means to overpower a rebellious prisoner. Armed with a dirk, the belligerent defied the prison officials to remove him to a dark cell, whereupon the neighborhood fire company was ordered to turn a stream upon him, while he was vainly attempting to dodge the ice cold water the officials rushed upon and overpowered him.

An orange tree near Quitman Ga., owes its existence to a unique cause. Away back in his boyhood days the planter saved a chuckle to experiment for part of an orange he was eating. Being refused, he solicited a seed, which he afterwards planted as a memorial of the acquaintance's selfish disposition. The seed developed into a most sturdy tree, more than a foot in diameter, and which, at last accounts, was loaded down with 2500 oranges.

NOTICE BY THE MANAGER.

We again call the attention of the pastors and presiding elders to the form of Warranty Deed we have prepared and published for general use in the purchase of church property. This form is none of your plain and plain can be, yet it is believed to cover every point in the law. It was drawn by an old experienced attorney, with our Discipline before him. Price, 25 cents per copy, or 5 for $1.00.

ARE YOU SICK?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, lifeless, and indescribably miserable, both physically and mentally; experience a sense of fullness or bloating after eating, or of "gonecome," or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nervous prostration or irritability, irritability of temper, hot flushes, alternating with chilly sensations, sharp, biting, transient pains here and there, cold feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of the above symptoms, you are suffering from the most common of American diseases, Torpid Liver, complicated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and the more promptly you take Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and faithfully follow the printed directions for a reasonable length of time, the more certain you are to be restored to perfect health. Golden Medical Discovery, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or even chronic bronchitis are sure to yield to its potent, and, sooner or later, invariably subdue them.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY not only promptly cures the severest Coughs, no matter how obstinate, but is the most potent blood purifier known to the profession, and is unsurpassed as a remedy for all diseases of the Liver, Blood and Lungs, from a common Blotch, Pimple or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its influence. Tumors, from a common Goitre, or Strumous Swelling, to the worst, horrible, fatty kind, are wonderfully reduced by its use. For part of an orange he was eating. Being refused, he solicited a seed, which he afterwards planted as a memorial of the acquaintance's selfish disposition. The seed developed into a most sturdy tree, more than a foot in diameter, and which, at last accounts, was loaded down with 2500 oranges.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and bodily health and vigor will be established.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY cures all humors, from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its influence. Tumors, from a common Goitre, or Strumous Swelling, to the worst, horrible, fatty kind, are wonderfully reduced by its use. Virulent blood-poisons are quickly expelled by it, as proved by many severe cases of White Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, Fever-sores, Open Joints, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Blood-taints, Pimples, Blotches, and Eruptions. Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred diseases, yield to its powerful, but unseen, antidotal influence.

A medicine possessing the power to cure such inveterate blood and skin diseases as the following testimonial portrays, must certainly be credited with possessing properties capable of curing any and all other and blood diseases, for none are more obstinate or difficult of cure than Scrofula.

SALT-RHEUM AND RHEUMATISM.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.:

"COLUMBUS, OHIO, Aug. 18th, 1887.

Gentlemen—For several years I have felt it to be my duty to give to you the facts in relation to the complete cure of a most aggravated case of salt-rheum, by the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' An elderly lady relative of mine had contracted a great sufferer from salt-rheum for upwards of forty years. The disease was most distressing in her hands, causing the skin to crack open on the backs of the joints and between the fingers. She was obliged to protect the raw places by means of adhesive plasters, salves, ointments and bandages, and during the winter months have to wear gloves when dressed daily. The pain was quite severe at times and her general health was badly affected, paving the way for other diseases to creep in. Catarrh and rheumatism caused a great deal of suffering in addition to the salt-rheum. She had used faithfully, and with the most commendable perseverance, all the remedies recommended by her physicians, but without obtaining relief. She afterwards began treating herself by drinking tea made from the blood-purifying roots and herbs. She continued this for several years but derived no benefit. Finally, about ten years ago, I chanced to read one of Dr. Pierce's small pamphlets setting forth the merits of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and other medicines. The name struck my fancy, and seeing that it was cordially a blood-purifier, I immediately recommended it to the old lady who had been so long a sufferer from salt-rheum. She procured a bottle of it at once, and took one bottle, and then another, before she could see that it would take these for any medicine to effect a change for the better. She then procured six bottles more, and by the time the half-a-dozen bottles had been used she had all but entirely overcome the disease, and before these had all been used she was entirely free from it. After the use of three bottles of the 'Discovery' she was able to go about the house, and after the use of six bottles she was able to go out, and, sooner or later, invariably

PUBLICATIONS
OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION OF THE A. M. E. CHURCH.

LESSON HELPS IN FOUR GRADES.

THE TEACHER'S QUARTERLY. A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson helps for teachers and older scholars. Its value is enhanced by the introduction of appropriate forms for opening and closing exercises, hymns and tunes, maps, dictionary of proper names, etc.

THE SCHOLAR'S QUARTERLY. Similar to the above, but with such necessary changes as adapt it to the wants of scholars in the main school. It is marvelously cheap. Five or more copies to one address, per year, 7 cents each.

THE JUVENILE LESSON PAPER is a four page weekly, designed for younger scholars who have outgrown the infant class, but who retain their fondness for pictures and simple stories. 208 pages for a dime!

THE GEM LESSON PAPER is a beautiful lesson sheet, four pages handsomely illustrated and printed on pink paper; for primary or infant scholars. Each number contains, besides the lesson, a page or more of "baby-land" talk. All for 8 cents a year, where five or more copies are sent to one address.

THE CHILD'S RECORDER, now beginning its eighth volume with a larger issue than ever before, offers superior attractions for the coming year. With additional editorial force, and a list of regular contributors skilled in the style of writing required by the young, no pains will be spared to put this publication abreast with the foremost of its class.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame." —"Civil Service Gazette.

Bishop J. P. Campbell 1923 New Era

THE LAST FOUR YEARS.

BY MRS. R. B. WILLIAMS.

Oh, how sad and very dreary
These four years; how very weary:
Wife so near,
Children dear,—
All have gone from earth forever,
Brothers, look to God in prayer,
Who will all thy sorrows bear.

Bishops, friends—all, one by one—
Have from earthly dear ones gone—
Gone to rest
With the blest—
Gone from all their earthly care—
Gone a heavenly home to share,
And a crown of glory wear.

Mourn ye not for those departed,
But be true and Christian hearted.
Look above
To the throne.
Has He not said: I'll defend
All who on me will depend,
Such I'll keep into the end?

Hear ye not the Master say
To the men of this poor day:
"Do the right,
Pray and fight—
Fight the battle of the Lord,
Sing and preach his every word,
For the gospel is his sword?"

Jesus Christ, God's only Son,
Bids you undismayed go on;
Watch and pray
Night and day.
When on earth your work is done
Then go home and get your crown;
By your Father's side sit down.

"WHERE I STAND."

BY REV. W. H. HEARD.

MR. EDITOR:—I pen you these thoughts for the consideration of the General Conference. In union there is strength, and we should concentrate all of our departments until we grow strong. Dr. C. S. Smith has at the present time the International Department should be moved to Nashville—and the Business Manager have control of the publishing of all our periodicals and literature. We need as business manager a man of first-class business capacity, and then a force under him who have some knowledge of business—not this man to give him a place, nor that boy because his father has influence with the head of the department. We have four floors. Then the Sunday School and Publication Departments could occupy the first and second stories, and the Missionary and Educational Department the third, the Financial and Executive Departments the fourth floor and give the business manager control of all the publishing of our general Church, editors and secretaries filling their position as directed by law.

I am not in favor of abolishing a single office, but electing efficient officers. Missionary Department under a truly missionary business man. Sunday School Department under a capable editor and two assistant to travel and lecture and hold institues. Educational Department under a man who will appeal to the moneyed men of this nation and raise money by individual efforts sufficiently to run the office, and the money raised by the churches let it go directly to the school for which collected. The financial department under a financier who can and will control the matters of our Church and see that every department is running smoothly and successfully.

I am in favor of the branch house in some city that will support it, and a man at its head who will make it a branch house, as the one at Macon, Ga., of the M. E. Church, South, or the one at New Orleans, La., of the M. E. Church, or the one in Atlanta, Ga. of the Baptist Church. We need to bring our departments under one roof and show the world what we are doing and thus grow strong, but we need branch offices of the Publication Department at Charleston, S. C., Baltimore, Md., Galveston, Tex., St. Louis, Mo., and one in Liberia, Africa. These could only be depositories for four years, the agents selling on commission and traveling over the territory assigned by the manager. Then the editors could remain in their offices and these agents would make the department ten-fold more productive. We have always made a mistake in making a man's salary sure whether he earned it or not. But these agents would sell each $5,000 worth of goods a year; one-fourth of which should be paid them for salary and traveling—$1,250 - $400 for expenses, $850 for salary; being good too. Many men would sell $6 000 worth of goods, giving them $1,600—$500 for expenses, $1,000 for salary. Try this, brethren, and four years will tell.

NOT YET.

REPLY TO THE SUGGESTIONS OF REV. W. H. HEARD.

BY J. C. EMBRY.

The A. M. E. Sunday School Union has purchased lately a splendid business property in the city of Nashville, Tennessee, for the use of the Union. We suppose the purchase is all right and will be approved by the Board of Managers of the Union. The law authorizing the Board to locate the headquarters and designating the Union as a publisher of Sunday school literature implied, perhaps, the authority to invest the money, given by the Church through her Sunday schools, in this way. And when all proper steps shall have been taken in the way of incorporation and appointment of trustees, etc., it may go forward and invest all that may be thought necessary to perfect its facilities for its business. To all of which, when regularly and well done, we shall with all others say, Amen! But when it is proposed to throw up our hats in a fit of enthusiasm and make a thoughtless rush pell mell to Nashville with all the publishing and other interests of our Church, we promptly interpose our emphatic no!

What shall we go there for—because the Sunday School Union has purchased a house? Shall the publishing interests of our whole Church be subordinated and put under the patronage of the Sunday schools? Shall the pyramid be inverted to secure stability? But what for? According to the Nashville American, which has given us all the detailed information we have, the M. E. Church, South, has our real publisher of Sunday school literature. It also publishes our Hymn Book, our Discipline, the RECORDER and Review? Is the African M. E. Church, founded by Richard Allen, ready for this? Concerning the half disguised anger in the present Manager and his advisers and associates in the Publication Department, we have only to say that if such a causeless insinuation is any credit to the writer's judgment or taste, let him have the benefit of it to the fullest extent.

The Publication Department located in Philadelphia, the home of Allen and the birthplace of our goodly Church, will not be friendless in the General Conference. It has done and is doing the Church so many long years of incomputable service may be despised and kicked by the men whom she has helped and lifted into the upper atmosphere of notoriety on the white wings of her honest, clean and respectable publications, but when it is proposed to kill her off and transfer the honored chair she holds to a mewling babe, there will be some few present to ask at least for reasons.

An old book I have tells us, "Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child!" We are not willing to go under the children just yet. We shall try to show at the proper time that the Publishing House in Philadelphia, with all its disadvantages, has done a noble service for the connection during the past four years. She will have the audacity to show that while conducting the most burdensome and perplexing business of any in the Church, she has discharged much of her debt; that her name and credit are good in business circles, and in spite of sneers and misrepresentation by persons without and within, some of whom have treated her very badly. She will ask to be reimbursed for the transfer of her property to another branch of the Church service, by appropriation or otherwise. She will ask for means, by collection or otherwise, to establish a large job room in connection with her work, together with a small bindery and press large enough to do her job work and her RECORDER. It will not seek to oppose or antagonize any other branch of the Church service, but, as in the past, to reciprocate and serve them all. But it will ask for a clear track and a fair chance to do a better work.

Of the wheat crop of this country only 60,000,000 bushels were available for export February 1, against 93,000,000 a year, 85,000,000 two years, and 160,000,000 three years ago.

THAT COLONIZATION SOCIETY AND THE AFRO-AMERICAN.

BY REV A A BURLEIGH

I am of the opinion but few of our people throughout the country are aware of the pernicious influence of an old, defunct organization, known mostly along the Atlantic seaboard as the "African Colonization Society." It was born and fostered to pander to race caste and race prejudice. However honorable may have been the motives of Finley, Mead, Mercer and Hopkins, the founders of this society, the sound, intelligent, Christian element have never endorsed the society or sanctioned its undertakings. At this advanced stage of American ethnological development, it is certainly impertinent and misanthropic, at least the arguments used in its favor lead to that conclusion.

The arguments used to obtrude this Utopian scheme upon our illiterate class of people, under the sanctimonious pretense of philanthropy, are all but criminal. There never was a more degrading and vicious reason put forth for low political purposes than is put forth by this society to induce the Afro-American to leave his native land and emigrate to Africa. When a true humanitarian scans such addresses as that made by Rev. J. A. Hodge in Washington, D. C., on the 15th of last January, he would be forced to the belief that such a man, with such opinions, is unchristian, un American—nay more, that he was making that society a plausible chance to give vent to his race-prejudice notions. The tendency of the argument and the whole colonization enterprise is to disparage our race variety, unsettle the minds of the illiterate and credulous arouse old grudges in the hearts of the revengeful, stimulate race clannishness, and under the sophistry of Divine, race antipathy, breed discontent and race hatred. Such work is satanic.

Mr. Editor, for your manly defense in the editorial of the 15th inst. against such fiction schemes, God will bless you, be on the lips and in the hearts of all our thinking readers. Your words are not only powerful because they are logical and bold, but also because they are pertinent and true. We are in our formative period, and when we are enlightened, yet, as a people, we are arousing great forces, putting in motion great currents of influence that will help shape the destiny of generations. The influence of certain individual men among our people at this time is far greater for good or evil than will be the influence of any similar number for an entire generation. How necessary, therefore, that our leaders be right in judgment, sound in opinion and safe in their course of action.

"THREE MINUTES' TALK"

No. VII.

THE FINANCIAL SYSTEM OF THE A. M E CHURCH REVIEWED.

"Make haste slowly" is an old saying gray with age and worthy of note in the January number of the A. M. E. Church Review, under the caption, "The Financial System of the A. M E. Church," appears a well written and able article from the pen of Rev. C. T. Shaffer. As I understand it, Brother Shaffer proposes to throw our entire financial system into and under one general management. In view of the fact that my time is very much limited, I cannot write at length upon this subject; however, each of his sub-headings shall have a passing notice. Our Church organization is now upon the eve of a great revolution all must admit, and in view of the plan and progress of a young and aspiring ministry who will be the controlling power in the coming General Conference, changes and interchanges of systems and policies would overthrow our entire financial superstructure and work to the detriment of the whole connection—hetter "make haste slowly."

Brother Shaffer claims that the present financial system is unwieldy and cumbersome, which is to say, in other words, it is burdensome and unmanagable. He pays a glowing compliment to the Dollar Money System; pronounces it simple and comprehensive. So it is, and will be more easily comprehended if allowed to remain as it is. He shows an annual increase of funds into the Dollar Money treasury from 1872 to 1884 and claims had it not been for the interference of other departmental collections the Dollar Money System would have by this time been sufficiently able to meet all of the demands of the Church for which it was intended. A careful perusal of the facts and figures presented brings me to this conclusion: that the establishment and management of the several departments alluded to has made the Dollar Money System what it is; competition and push have been the means of developing its strength, the truth of which I will endeavor to prove by Brother Shaffer's financial statement. He says: "The receipts of the department from 1872 to 1876 were $95 553 93; from 1876 to 1880 were $99 999 42, and from 1880 to 1884 the receipts were $170 286 88 Now, then, these figures show that from 1872 to 1876, before the establishment of Brother Shaffer's unwieldy auxiliary department, when the Dollar Money System had no rivals in the field, that it did comparatively nothing compared to our numerical strength then, which did not exceed 300 000; but after the thorough organization of each of the departments under notice from 1880 to 1884, the Dollar Money collections, with the Missionary Educational and Sunday School departments contending for their portion of the funds, came near doubling itself, whereas, had it not been for these outside forces, it would not have shown its strength. And the point I wish to make is this: that the Dollar Money System did not meet the demands of the Church is the why the General Conference threw each of the departments ont upon their own responibilities. Under the new management no department of our general work has suffered, neither does it interfere with the local interests of the Church, but stimulates the laity to greater activity. If each of the general departments require all of the time and attention of their representatives, how in the name of common sense can one man superintend the whole successfully? The man is not living In my next I will discuss propositions second and third.

RICHARD ALLEN, THE SECOND REFORMER.

BY REV. J. A JONES.

The history of human events reveals the fact that as men become rich, powerful and influential, they usually become more wicked, heartless and ungodly, often using their wealth and power to crush down their fellow-man and mock Jehovah to his face. What is true of individuals is consequently true of nations, families and societies. But God, who is long suffering and full of mercy, who sees even the worm crushed beneath the heedless tread of the pedestrian and hears the raven's cry for food, holds the destiny of nations in the hollow of his own hands. So while great and powerful institutions of men seem to control for a time the nations, and predestine the affairs of governments, both State and Church, God himself not infrequently rises in his own majesty and raises up a man of his own choice in spite of the voice of the people. Men are born leaders and not educated to lead. God raises up the man when he is needed most.

By way of argument we need only mention such born leaders as Moses, the champion of the host of Israel. The people of God were oppressed by a powerful and wicked heathen nation, held in bondage and not permitted to serve the God they loved. The popular vote might have chosen a different man—some one better known among them—but God sends a marvel down to Midian to a man that he had been preparing for forty years. Moses, equal to the emergency, successfully led the people on till from Pisgah's apex he gazed on the land flowing with milk and honey.

Such men as David, the Psalmist of Israel, who was anointed king to the great astonishment of his father and profound disgust of his brothers. Yet God directs Samuel to send to the pasture, for the king of Israel was minding the sheep. There sat God's choice with a shepherd's crook, to be soon displaced for the golden scepter. David was the greatest king that ever reigned in Israel. But, leaving biblical history, addressing so intelligent an audience, I need only refer to such men as the Ptolemies, Scipio, Cæsar, Alexander and Pompey, but the history of deeds of men is a record of carnage, death, despair, devastated cities and hungry widows and orphans.

Peter, the hermit, toward the close of the eleventh century, in his fanatical attempt to wrest from the infidel Turks the holy city, Jerusalem, leaves on the pages of history an account of one of the most nugodly crusades that ever incensed the righteous indignation of a just God. Yet the historian calls his career "the holy war."

We stated on the outset that as societies become more powerful, their opportunities for doing good or evil are increased, and it is the rule rather than the exception that they become exceedingly corrupt The Christian Church, having survived the storm of persecution, fightings without and fears within, led on by Him who had declared over a thousand years before that, "upon this rock I will build my Church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," had now become too polluted for the peaceful dwelling of a regenerate soul.

In 1378, when the great Western schism broke out by the election of two Popes, one at Rome and the other at Avignon, war between the adherents of the several Popes was waged and carried on to an alarming extent. Is it not a sad truth that there has been more blood shed on the account of religion than any other institution of man on earth?

But notice the hand of God in the affairs of the things of earth. While the Popes were thundering out red-hot anathemas against each other, while religious enthusiasts were waring among themselves on account of their devotion to their Popes, and while the Papacy was promulgating the damnable doctrine of transubstantiation, invocation of the saints, image worship and selling of indulgencies, God raised up John Wicklift, who by such strong opposition to these accursed dogmas, caused the papal kingdom to tremble to its base. In fact, Wicklif led the way for the opening of the great campaign begun by Martin Luther in 1517 We are not expected, however, to discuss the reformation at length, but suffice it to say that the immediate cause of the reformation was, that the spiritual Church had lost its essence, the salt had lost its savor, the Kingdom of Christ was in the hands of sinners and Zion's banner was trailing in the dust. It is remarkable how man corrupts whatever he lays his hands to.

We are here to day to celebrate the one hundred and twenty-eighth anniversary of the birth of Rt. Rev. Richard Allen, the first Bishop of the A. M. E. Church, and in so doing we make no hesitancy in holding him up and placing him on the annals of history as the second reformer in the Christian Church. Richard Allen was born in the State of Delaware, in the year 1760, on the 14th day of February. As soon as his infant eyes saw the light the chains of slavery fell upon his neck As Richard Allen grew into manhood into manhood his heedless tread of the pedestrian and hears the raven's cry for food, holds the destiny of nations in the hollow of his own hands. So while great and powerful institutions of men seem to control for a time the nations, and predestine the affairs of governments, both State and Church, God himself not infrequently rises in his own majesty and raises up a man of his own choice in spite of the voice of the people. Men are born leaders and not educated to lead God raises up the man when he is needed most.
